CRIES MENTALLY

The King, clad in Field Marshal's uniform, had just laid his wreath at the base of the Cenotaph when Storey broke through two lines of youthful sailors and stumbled into the cleared area where the King stood facing the Cenotaph.

Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary looked down anxiously from the Home Office windows as police broke through the lines and overtook the man, piling on him three yards in front of the sailors, muffling his shouts, but not altogether preventing his mutterings.

Three yards from the spot stood Prime Minister Chamberlain, Opposition Leader Attlee, Lord Chancellor Hailsham and other parliamentary figures. The Duke of Gloucester was slightly behind the King and about five yards from the struggle. Like the King and the parliamentary leaders, the Duke gave no indication he had observed the incident.

The military figures and police officers rode over to make sure the incident was under control. The fair-haired, middle-aged disturber had been picked up within 15 seconds and carried into the densely packed crowds where his silence was enforced until the end of the two minutes. Some observers reported there were a few shouts of "Kill him!" from those near at hand.

The throng remembered the incident on Constitution Hill more than a year ago when a revolver landed almost at the feet of King Edward's horse. A great thankfulness that today's occurrence had passed without threat to His Majesty was reflected in the willing up of the National Anthem as the period of silence ended.

FORMER HIGH SCHOOL TEACHER PASSED AWAY

F. S. Chapman, B.A.,
Who Graduated From
U. N. B. In 1882,
Died In This City

The funeral of the late Frederick Smallwood Chapman, B.A., took place this morning from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. E. Cook, 224 Westmorland street. Service was conducted at the house at ten thirty o'clock by Rev. George Telford of Saint Paul's Church. A male quartette rendered favorite hymns of the deceased gentleman. At the conclusion of the service the remains were conveyed to Berwick, near Sussex, where interment was made.

The late Mr. Chapman, who passed away on Wednesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. E. Cook, Westmorland street, had many old friends here and elsewhere who will learn of his death with sincere regret.

Mr. Chapman, who had reached the advanced age of 88 years, was born at Millstream, near Sussex. He was graduated from the University of New Brunswick here in the class of 1882, and later taught school in various parts of the province. For a time Mr. Chapman was on the staff of the Fredericton High School and several of his old pupils who are residing in different parts of this province, will have a kindly memory of their former teacher who has now passed away. For twenty-five years Mr. Chapman was engaged in the insurance business. Three years ago he retired and had since been living with his daughter, Mrs. J. E. Cook, in this city.

Mr. Chapman is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary E. Chapman, by one son, A. W. Chapman, residing at New York, and by two daughters, Mrs. Titus, of Moose Jaw, Sask., and Mrs. J. E. Cook, this city.

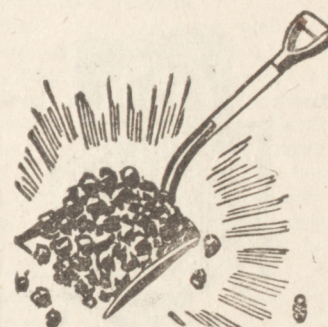

VESPERS

Into the twilight has gone the day.
The saffron sky is fading away,
And purple hills, in the evening air,
Are quietly howing their heads in prayer.

Winging its way to Thy throne on high,
I hear a mother's soft lullaby—
And, far in the dimness, hushed and still,
Comes the good-night call of the whip-poor-will.

At her vesper prayer all Nature kneels,
And something within my spirit feels
That God is near—and He gives to me
A glimpse into Heaven's Eternity.
