

White Men's

life of the Indians, reflecting individual or momentary events and overlooking general conditions. At least, that is the feeling of the residents. The big picture, they think, is that there is a race that has adopted white men's industrial methods, as wholly opposed to their own original practices, has succeeded with those methods and even might be an object lesson to white men who are in the doldrums today.

There are about 4,500 people on the reserve. Contrary to popular belief that Indians are dying out, they have increased their population since the days of Chief Brant. None of them is on relief; all are engaged in farming, with the exception of the storekeepers at Ohsweken, 69 Corners and other points. They have 15 churches, 11 schools, an agricultural society 72 years old, two women's institutes and a junior institute.

Sent 300 to War

They are all United Empire Loyalist stock, as they are the descendants of men and women who marched hundreds of miles to Canada after fighting for the British cause in the Revolutionary War. During the Great War they sent 300 young men overseas, and 33 paid with their lives for their patriotism. The first Brant County officer to fall in battle was the great-grandson of their pioneer leader, Chief Joseph Brant, and the great-grandson of Captain John Brant, who fought in the War of 1812. Every man who went was a volunteer; there were no men to conscript when the emergency measure was invoked.

The Six Nations was formed with the original idea that in union was strength, and that tribal differences could be better adjusted by arbitration than war. A first there were five nations. Today there are still the six nations, though there has been much intermarriage. They are the Cayugas, Onondagas, Mohawks, Senecas, Tuscaroras and Oneidas.

For 400 years the chiefs of these tribes have met in regular council. They pondered issues and the majority vote ruled. There was no bolting from the Council; figuratively, there were no raids on Ethiopia. Rules, based on practice and precedent, were written into wampum belts.

Elder Women Chose Chiefs

The elder women of the tribe elected the chiefs. Some were hereditary titles, but any man who distinguished himself in war or the chase or oratory could be chosen by the old women. And he promptly became a chieftain, with full status in council meetings. Until 1924 this method continued to rule the Reserve and then, by referendum, it was replaced by an elected Council, appointed annually, which chooses a chief councillor. There are 12 men elected, chosen from the six sections of the Reserve.

Their external affairs, and much of their internal business, is administered by the Department of Indian Affairs. But the wise officials have been guided to great extent by the recommendations that emanate from the Council meetings. It is said, and apparently they have been wise recommendations because the people have flourished.

APRIL AGAIN

April again! The willow wands are yellow,
Rose-red brambles that the passing wind blows,
Comes a robin's note, like the note of a 'cello,
And across the valley the calling of the crows—
"April again!"

April again! and the marsh-birds swinging
Over the rushes that belong to yesterday;
Silver shines the river, and young lips are singing
Songs as old as Eden—as old and as dear—
"April again!"

April again! with a wet wind blowing
And along the western sky a pathway of gold;
Sounds a call to follow the road we're not knowing,
A new road—a wild road—o'er fairy lands unrolled—
"April again!"

April again! with its wonder of gladness,
April with its haunting joy and swift-stinging tears—
Month of mist and music, and the old moon-madness,
Month of magic fluting, the spirit only hears—
"April again!"
—Virna Sheard.

SANITARY PLUMBING

Sanitary plumbing has long been considered a measure of public health according to D. J. Shea contractor-dealer of plumbing material, but now it is being considered as a safety measure too. An article written recently by a member of the National Safety Council states that any discussion of shop safety had to include mention of adequate sanitary plumbing. Among the necessities for shop safety are mentioned clean lavatories and washrooms, plenty of hot water, shower facilities and sanitary drinking fountains.

Here's the Modern Way to Help
END A COLD Quicker

The 3-Minute VapoRub Massage

Massage VapoRub briskly on the throat, chest and back (between and below the shoulder blades). Then spread it thick over the chest and cover with warm cloth.

Almost before you finish rubbing, VapoRub starts to bring relief two ways at once—two direct ways:

1. Through the Skin. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster.

2. Medicated Vapors. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by body heat, are breathed in for hours—about 18 times a minute—direct to the irritated air-passages of the nose, throat and chest. This combined poultice-and-vapor action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation—helps break congestion.

During the night, VapoRub keeps right on working. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

Avoids Risk of Stomach Upsets
This safe, external treatment cannot possibly upset the stomach, as constant internal "dosing" is so apt to do. It can be used freely, as often as needed, even on the youngest child.

Now White—Stainless

Thanks to a new process, VapoRub now comes to you in white stainless form. Only the color is removed; it is the same VapoRub—the same formula and the same effective double action.
