25 Times Per Day For Radio Fans

OLD SONGS BETTER

Listeners Won't Give Same Attention to New Numbers As They Will Old

"Why don't radio bands constantly feature new music rather than play old tunes over and over again?' That's the question Wilbur Hatch' answers at least 25 times per week, and the CBS 'Song Time' maestro feels that an answer should be given -once and for all,

"Listeners won't give a new tune 'Moonlight and Roses,' 'Song of Songs', 'Trees', or 'Sylvia.' Older people, particularly, lose pace with the popular numbers and they don't pay as much attention to new tunes. They'd rather have the old-time hits."

According to Hatch, all listeners must be satisfied. Consequently there is a pleasant mixture of numbers on most programs. There a few programs, if any, which feature nothing but old hits. Yet even the most popular shows, featuring the latest in new music, intermingle these with old tunes.

"Personally, I'd much rather hear a half-hour of old musical comedy hits," says Hatch, "than all the popular tunes of today. In the first place, more thought was given music of a few years ago. Composers didn't have radio and talking pictures to cope with, and they spent more time on each tune. Radio and pictures are such consumers of material, however, that it's necessary to turn out new music like a machine."
