CALL TO WINTER

Hasten, thou bird of winter, from thy home
Upon the far Finlandian steppes,
away;
Leave thy domain beneath the seven stars,
The moon by night to guard, the sun by day;
Haste, haste across the wilderness of space,
That we may feel, at last, thy cold embrace.
—Evelyn Rusby

SEASON

What is winter in the air
If spring is in the heart?
Underneath the frozen brooklet
Silver perch may dart!

What is sleet against the door
If laughter's in the eye?
Underneath the garden snow
Waiting tulips lie!

What is bitter wind of winter
Stripping earth apart?
What does any season mean
If love is in the heart?
—Wilma Crittenden.

JOY RIDING

Cows on the road—
He didn't see 'em;
Now he's in
A mausoleum.
—J. Lambright, Brunswick, Ga., Pilot

Swine on the road—
He knocked one flat;
His folks all wonder
Where he's at.
—Liston Elkins, Waycross, Ga., J.H.

Unlighted car,
A thoroughfare;
Joins angels
'Way up there.
—Biff Birren, Savannah, Ga., Press.

A pocket flask;
Two speeding cars,
And now he dwells
Beyond the stars.
—James Wells, Dalton, Ga., Citizen

One arm around
His sweetie, slim;
A head-on crash,
They buried him.

ADVICE FOR WIVES WHO WANT FUR COATS

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Dr. Irving Lorge of Columbia University released recently a psychological report that should interest wives who are trying to wheedle a fur coat out of a reluctant Santa Claus.

Entitled "Changing the Closed Mind," it dealt with numerous experiments at Teachers' College on the psychology of adult behavior problems.

Dr. Lorge's first piece of advice for those who are trying to bring some one else around to their point of view was:

"Don't start an argument."
"In most cases," he said, "if you wish to get a person to change his mind, find something to agree with. Find somebody he respects to approve the idea. Work by positives."

"Don't argue by saying, 'How can you be so stupid?' or by exclaiming, 'Only a fool would believe in that.'"
