Startling if True

If witnesses testifying before the Commission investigating conditions at the Guelph Reformatory are giving a true picture of what has been going on there the public has ample cause for alarm. There is something shocking in the candor with which mere boys have told of gross immorality, wholesale gambling, of food unfit to eat, and of blankets unchanged month after month. Also stories of utterly callous treatment by prison guards, even to brutal beatings.

Witnesses at first testified quite freely about the institution. Suddenly, apparently something happened, and there was hesitancy about answering questions. Witnesses charged they had been "worried" by a guard while waiting to give evidence. This brought from the Commissioner sharp warning that there must be no official talking to prisoners appearing before him.

Based on the evidence brought out so far, the condition of affairs in the reformatory has been far from satisfactory. Of course, it would be unfair to prejudge this testimony. The Commissioner is in a position to sift and analyze the evidence offered; to estimate the reliability of witnesses; and upon him rests the responsibility of deciding whether the institution has been administered as it should be, and where rests responsibility for the rioting and destruction of property that led to the investigation.

Meantime the public is amazed and shocked by evidence given by inmates; and this feeling is accentuated by the deplorable fact that in most instances mere youths have been providing description of an environment which, if it exists, must have a disastrous effect on their lives.

Senate Revives Free Ports

Largely through the efforts of the Senate and more particularly those of Senators J. P. B. Casgrain and Hon. J. J. Rainville, free ports are again a Parliamentary issue, albeit Senatorial discussion leaves vague the nature of the issue. In fact the most striking result of the Senate's debate, the second within a year, is the peculiar absence of opinion as to whether the free port is a desirable or undesirable asset. Even such usually opinionated minds as the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen confess to "no straight and definite opinion" on the Casgrain bill.

Of first importance to the Red Chamber spokesmen is whether they should send the bill to the House of Commons without first deciding the advantages and disadvantages. Not even Senator Casgrain's and Senator Rainville's pleas that it was a permissive measure which must have Government action, in the event of the Commons passing it, have disuaded the Senators of the importance of this first point.

Free ports are old instruments of commerce. Leghorn established a free port in the sixteenth century, and was soon followed by Venice and other Italian cities. Formation of the Hanseatic League, together with the growth of Continental trade restrictions, encouraged Hamburg, Bremen and Lubeck to set aside free areas. The eighteenth century became an era of free ports, but by the middle of the nineteenth industrial nations began to reclaim most of those areas.

Copenhagen-is the incorporation of import facilities in addition to the dutyfree zone. This practice is observed in the establishment of the free port. of New York, not a great distance from the existing harbor.

The theory of the free port is that it penmits foreign trade to pass freely sults with the least efforts." in and out of a country, encouraging industrial development through processing activities, stimulating shipping and trade contacts between nations. In essence it is an attempt to bolster international trade without letting Of all the women called last night down the actual barriers. No, zone, although in the Far East, in particular, it has been blamed as contributing to exterritoriality trouble.

ion-if men can be so smart around Whether or not the practice supports the theory is a matter of strenuous a house, why don't they show off a debate in most countries. The most "conspicuous success is Hamburg, little once in a while?

but its duality and the great territory served as an out-and-out customs port rob the advocates of some of their claims. On the other hand, the free port is entitled to all the credit it can gather as an aid to commerce in facilitating the handling of goods destined for re-export.

Thirty Hours From Europe

Definite plans to commence experimental flights across the North Atlantic this spring close another gap, the last in round-the-world air travel. people is never a happy people. Routine services between Australia and London, weekly schedules across the Pacific, a commercial Zeppelin service linking Germany and New York, South America and Germany has created a blase public, but they cannot have dulled the imagination against appreciation of this newest advance.

That is subject of personality development, what it means by Time's yardsticks. But such measurement stresses only an aid in preserving mental health, increased speed. It is what speed and efficiency of close contact mean in commercial and industrial life of two widely separated continents that assesses the importance of Atlantic flying.

There will be some who will "view with alarm." For them this staggering jump can promise nothing that is not blotted out by horrible pictures of grim international complications and involvements. For them it should be, if it is not, the end of quaint illusions about isolation. It should, if anything can, make clear this continent's real position in and responsibilities to international affairs. If the airplane can do this it will rid us of another obstacle to a reasoned, intelligent approach to world problems.

The 3-Minute VapoRub Massage

Massage VapoRub briskly on the throat, chest and back (between and below the shoulder blades). Then spread it thick over the chest and cover with warmed cloth.

Almost before you finish rubbing, VapoRub starts to bring relief two ways at once-two direct ways:

1. Through the Skin. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster.

2. Medicated Vapors. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by body heat, are breathed in for hours-about 18 times a minute -direct to the irritated air-passages

This combined poultice-and-vapor action loosens phlegm-relieves irritation-helps break congestion. While the little patient relaxes into comfortable sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

Avoids Risk of Stomach Upsets This safe, external treatment camnot possibly upset the stomach, as constant internal "dosing" is so apt to do. It can be used freely, as often as needed, even on the youngest child.
