The Belief In England That Women Not Qualified To Be Co-Eds

CHRISTIAN STUDENT MOVEMENT

Almost Half of Total Number of Students Working Way Through College

Rev. John Copp who is now at Le Roche Die, Bievre, France, continues his series of articles from the Old Country. In this article Rev. Mr. Copp deals with different English Universities, with the British Students Christian Movement and other phases of life with which he is brought in contact. He says:

ARTICLE NO. 8

(By Rev. John Copp)
There was just time between trains, in Birmingham to have a "spot" of lunch, to visit the Bull Ring, and to spend a few minutes in Saint Martin's Church.

The spot of lunch was at a Woolworth cafeteria. This great New York firm has scattered its three and six penny shops all over England. And they are convenient, as

Rev. John Copp we all know. But when I saw one sandwiched in a block of old, old English buildings at Stratford-on-Avon, I did feel it somewhat incongruous.

The Birmingham "Bull Ring" is a combination outdoor market and Hyde Park. Set in the middle of a drab city it provides a place for the exchange of goods and ideas.

While we were there several orators were giving and taking, and one of them, a rough itinerant evangelist, living on the pennies that are voluntarily contributed, not only silenced a difficult crowd of people, but shook a good many of them in an obvious fashion.

If size determined the point, the Church we visited is large enough to be a cathedral, and thus far I have been in only one place where the atmosphere is more conducive to the acknowledgement of the Eternal, namely, a little St. Francis of Assisi Chapel on a private estate in New Hampshire.

One of the most interesting things to be seen in the Church is a wall plaque which is in memory of the leader of the Methodist Church after the death of John Wesley, and it is interesting because it was moved to St. Martins, an Anglican Church.

BRITISH BELIEVE JAPAN THROWING MASK ASIDE

Danger To World Peace Is Seen In Nippon's Open Bid For Domination in the Far East

LONDON, Sept. 2—It is impossible to exaggerate the dangers to world peace involved in the unofficial Sino-Japanese war. The prevailing reaction of the British public and press is one of extreme irritation. Japan is utterly friendless here, as there is not a word spoken or a line published in her defense since the Shanghai slaughter began.

The dangers spring not from the shooting of the British Ambassador, but from a longer range view of what the real objectives of Japan are suspected to be and there is a possibility that the already frayed and

(Special to The Daily Mail)
SHANGHAI, Sept. 2—Bombs were dropped on the International Border today and Japan issued a warning to British troops to stay out of places where the Chinese are and the latter are to be bombarded.

Two Japanese warnings—that all China would henceforth be considered a battleground in the conflict with China, and that foreign warships, for their own safety, should steer clear of the Yangtze estuary—took on grim meaning yesterday as two British men-of-war and a trade vessel were hit by shrapnel and fighting raged on ever-widening fronts.

The British cruiser Danae, flying the flag of Admiral Sir Charles Little, commander of the China station, and the sloop Falmouth were struck and slightly damaged by flying fragments near the Yangtze-Whangpoo junction shortly after a high Japanese official advised neutral ships to stay out of those waters lest they become "targets for Chinese bombs."

Wetmore and Grotis Gould, the present councillors, who are again seeking election.

Very Poor Telephone Service

FOR several weeks past, all classes of citizens have been finding fault with the service given in this city by the New Brunswick Telephone Company. Whether it is the fault that the staff is under-manned or whatever the cause, the public, who use the telephone, are getting a pretty punk service. The chief cause of complaint seems to be delays of the operators in responding to calls, and the giving of wrong numbers two or three times at one call. In one case yesterday a business office in this city was obliged to answer three different calls on a busy telephone only to find each time that the party calling had been given the wrong number. This is a frequent occurrence. We are not saying that the young ladies employed as operators are not doing their best to be obliging, but we do not know whether the bad results and the bad service which the citizens are receiving is from incompetency or from some mechanical deficiency in the service.

The New Brunswick Telephone Company has the monopoly of the telephone service in this province. It has for years been making large profits from the public. The least that the public has a right to expect from this telephone company is decent adequate satisfactory service, and we have no hesitation in saying it is not receiving this at the present time. The users of rural telephones even make more complaints than the users of city telephones and it is almost impossible for city telephone subscribers to get prompt and efficient connection with persons on the rural lines. This service is conducted as a public utility with exclusive rights, and as such should be conducted to the satisfaction of the public who pay the bills. If the Telephone Company will not respond to reason and request for betterment of their present unsatisfactory service it is up to the Public Utilities Commission or to whatever body controls these affairs to see that the public gets a square deal.

"I feel," said Father Coughlan, that Mr. McCutcheon has his heart in the work and has done much for the betterment of the temporal welfare of the Indians not only of Kingsclear Reserve but of all the Indians who come under his jurisdiction."
