MacDonald, son of the deceased statesman and his sister.

Tomorrow the body will be taken to Westminster Abbey where at a public funeral service at noon the nation will bid farewell to the man who thrice was prime minister—head of two Labor cabinets and creator of the National government.

The Archbishop of Canterbury will officiate at the service. The Duke of Gloucester will represent the King. All members of the government, from which Mr. MacDonald resigned last May to seek rest after a strenuous public life, were expected to attend.

After the Abbey service the body will be cremated and the ashes taken to his native Lossiemouth where the family service will be held Saturday. The ashes will then be buried in Spynie churchyard, two miles from Lossiemouth, in the place where he often said he would like to rest.

Ramsay MacDonald died at sea on Nov. 9, while en route to South America for his health.

The body was taken off the cruise ship at Bermuda and returned to England in the Cruiser Apollo, reaching Plymouth today where all flags in the city and on ships in the harbor flew at half-mast.

ing rejection of a New Brunswick government proposal they return to work while the provincial fair wage board probed the prolonged deadlock was "no surprise to me," United Mine Workers District President D. W. Morrison, who is at Glace Bay, declared last night.

"If they have decided to continue the strike, we will give them every assistance to bring it to a successful conclusion," Morrison said. The district 26 president had just returned to union headquarters after a conference with the New Brunswick cabinet and fair wage board. He also addressed striking miners at a meeting Wednesday night.

"We did not recommend for or against the government proposition, but whatever happened we were prepared to stand by them," the union official stated.

The result of the vote was forecast by the general trend of the meeting Wednesday night, the union president said. Feeling had been practically unanimous against the return to work proposal, which he said had been "more or less a standing offer of the government."

The proposal had carried no assurance of union recognition for which the miners were striking. Morrison denied there had been any material reduction in the number of strikers since the deadlock began more than a month ago.

Minto miners were first organized into the U.M.W. last winter by International Board Member Silby Barrett
