Bride Observes Old Superstition

Belief That the Duke of Windsor May Drop Title Denied to His Wife

(Special to The Daily Mail)

MONTS, France, June 4—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor are speeding towards Venice today from where they will motor to the Duke's castle in Austria. Intimate friends of the Duke believe that he may drop the title of H. R. H. which was denied to his wife. The statement given out by the Duke yesterday immediately after his marriage referred "simply to the Duke."

Her Grace the Duchess of Windsor (Mrs. Wallis Warfield) observed the oldest superstition of brides at her marriage to the Duke of Windsor yesterday. She wore, as is the custom, "something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue." The "old" was a bit of antique Alencon lace worked into her slip. The "new" was a coin minted in the Duke's reign as King but never circulated. "Borrowed" was a handkerchief, from her aunt, Mrs. D. B. Merryman, and "blue" was the color of her wedding dress.

Scenes of excitement unparalleled in the centuries—old history of the peaceful Touraine Valley today marked the marriage of the Duke of Windsor to Mrs. Wallis Warfield. A detachment of 120 members of the Garde Mobile took up posts in the vicinity of the turreted Chateau de Candé, blocking off the road for a distance of almost three miles in both directions.

The New Subway and the Capital

WORKMEN are today commencing work on the subway to be constructed in connection with the proposed new C. N. R. bridge. This subway is necessary owing to the height of the new bridge being five feet higher than the old structure which was carried away in March, 1936. This subway will be erected in one of the prettiest spots in New Brunswick and adjoining one of the most handsome church edifices in Canada. It is to be hoped that the new subway will be such that it will not detract from the beauty of the section of the city where it is being erected. A structure of this kind can fill all the requirements for which it is intended and be at the same time ornamental. It was understood this subway was to be as near as possible of the same material as the stone in the Cathedral. But it will be of concrete. There seems to be a large number of citizens uneasy in regard to the matter. The fears of those citizens may be groundless, but it may be well to check this matter up before it goes too far.

We are given to understand that the structure will be of concrete and will be ornamental in character. We feel that the contractors will recognize the importance of making the subway as much as possible in keeping with the surroundings of the Capital which is noted for its beauty and which is an asset to the whole Province.

Everyone will be delighted to know that the bridge is about to be started and will wish the contractors every success in their operations.

Ballots Without Bullets is Welcome Forecast Coming Irish Constitutional Election

13,000 PASSPORTS ISSUED THIS YEAR TO CANADIANS

OTTAWA, June 4—Indications of better times and that more Canadians are travelling, not for little week end jaunts, but across to Europe, was seen today when the Passport branch of the External Affairs department announced it had issued approximately 13,000 passports to date, which have produced $65,000 revenue.

Usually the passport business has slackened at this season and becomes active again in September, but this time there has been no easing up. Many ships, it was said, were sold out for certain trips. Incoming business from overseas was expected to be heavy also apart from returning Canadians.

De Valera's New Eire Scheme Likely to be Accepted

DUBLIN, June 4—Next to a revolution there is no event more interesting in Ireland than a general election, and everything is ready here for that exciting experience. In a week or so the Dail Eireann will be dissolved, and an election will be called for about June 30.

The issue to be decided by the voters is the acceptance or rejection of President Eamon de Valera's new constitution for Ireland—or Eire, as he prefers to designate it in pure Gaelic. Indications are that De Valera and his pet constitution will win, but the balloting may be fairly close.

Ballots without bullets is a welcome forecast. Although there are still bitter differences of opinion between De Valera's Flanna Fail (Vol-
