The lass who loves a sailor,
And becomes a sailor's wife,
Is doomed by circumstances
To a somewhat lonely life.

The lass who loves a landsman,
And who weds her Ralph or Rolf,
Is doomed to be as lonely
When her hubby takes up golf.

N. R. train on the Valley Line at Lincoln Crossing. The jury stated that from the evidence given they were unable to determine the immediate cause of the derailment. Fourteen witnesses gave evidence, including the companions of the deceased, members of the train crew, railway and city officials. District Coroner Charles MacKay, Fredericton, presided. The jury deliberated one hour before a verdict was returned. There was some controversy as to whether the accident occurred in the city or in the county of Sunbury. City engineer J. D. MacKay stated, in his evidence, that the spot indicated to him where Mr. Savage was killed was seven feet inside the County of Sunbury line. E. Allison MacKay represented the city in connection with the matter. Witnesses were Dr. G. E. Chalmers, this city; George N. Savage, Devon, who was working with his brother at the time; Douglas Gay, this city, section man, besides William McGourty, Saint John, conductor; Herman G. Fogarty, Moncton, brakeman; J. J. Wall, engineer, and Frank Mahoney, Sussex, comprising the train crew; Berkeley Thompson, section foreman; Harry Keays, track master; Robert B. Graham, assistant superintendent, Devon; City Engineer MacKay; William Flowers, car foreman, and Fred R. Haines, car inspector, both of Devon, and Kenneth Vavasour, C.N.R. civil engineer, Edmundston. Too Ill to Leave Home
Restored Quickly by Nerviline

Mr. A. E. Archer of Chelsea, writes: "As a boy I was accustomed to take Nerviline for pains in my stomach but never realized its true value until this summer. I had an attack of diarrhoea and was so bad I couldn't leave the house. I sent for a bottle of Nerviline and took a dose every hour during the morning. It restored me quickly. I use Nerviline now as a preventive of summer complaint and it works satisfactorily. My wife also has derived very special results in stomach trouble from Nerviline which I recommended highly."

Empire Parley

would be reluctant to lose the advantages they gained by the Empire agreements unless compensating benefits can be secured by enlargement of the Canadian Trade agreements with the United States. The preference accorded by Britain to Canada on fresh apples increased exports of that fruit from $5,593,000 to $11,524,000 in the first two years of the existence of the trade pact and the British market remains the greatest export outlet for Canadian apples.

Exports of Salmon

Exports of canned salmon, while not yielding anything like the monetary return of apples, have been doubled since the preference provided easier access to the British market for the products of Canadian fisheries.

As for lumber, it was the British market which saved the situation for Canadian interests when they lost the American market seven years ago. During the five years 1926-30 the United States provided an annual average market for 1,459 million feet, board measure, of Canadian lumber, which amounted to over 70 per cent. of the lumber exports of the Dominion and had an average value of $39,529,242. Owing to tariff changes and curtailments of lumber consumption in the United States due to the depression, Canadian sales to that country were reduced to a fraction of their former volume and in these circumstances the expansion of sales to Britain which were made possible by the tariff preferences were of the utmost importance. Exports of Canadian lumber jumped from $3,649,342 in the year before the trade agreement was effected to more than $16,000,000 within two years after it had been ratified.

Washington's Desire

Washington authorities are more interested in increasing sales of natural products than manufactures to Britain, and it is known that the key items in the list of natural products for which a larger market is sought are apples, pears, canned salmon and lumber, and from the Canadian standpoint the outstanding items are apples and lumber.

Nova Scotia is vitally interested in the former and British Columbia in the latter. The preference on canned salmon is only 10 per cent. and its removal would not materially lessen the severe competition Canada now suffers from Japan in the European and British market.

New Brunswick's stake in the lumber situation is substantial, and much of that Province's sales to Britain under the trade pact is so highly specialized it would hardly be affected by any action this country could take. Rather it would hit shipments from British Columbia which come into close competition with similar products on the American Pacific Coast. It is pointed out, though, that in return certain concessions might be made by the United States to Canadian Pacific Coast interests.

Nova Scotian Attitude

Nova Scotia is likely to resist strongly any move to release Britain from the apple margin or to lessen the preference. It would mean surrendering much of the lucrative British market to United States Pacific Coast growers who during the past two years, and in spite of the preference accorded Canadian fruit, have made heavy shipments to the United Kingdom.

It is argued that the Nova Scotia people might be more than compensated by a generous concession on codfish which the United States would be impelled to make to Canada in return for certain preference releases.

It was made clear in London yesterday that the commercial features of any deal between Britain and the U. S., will be controlled chiefly by the Dominions, that what Britain is able to offer to the U. S. will be determined almost entirely by the extent to which Canada and Australia and South Africa can agree upon preference releases. It is because of the necessity of such agreement that the terms of the U. S. offer have been submitted to the Dominions at the conference, which was never intended to be a trade parley.
