RADIO NOTES

Gabby (Double-talk) Savoy made his first appearance under a long-term contract on the Eddie Cantor broadcast series Sunday, Feb. 21, at 8:30 p.m., EST, over the WABC-CBS network.

His first radio contracts were in towns where he happened to be playing for a week or two. Guest appearances as a rapid-fire heckler on both Al Jolson's and Rudy Vallee's programmes took him to a West Coast air service, where he was brought to Cantor's attention.

He likes radio especially because, he double-talks, "It's fun to out-talk so many people who can't talk back!"

Nelson Eddy was prevented from appearing on his weekly "Open House" programme for the second time last Sunday (Feb. 21) by the throat infection that has confined him to a Chicago hospital.

It was fully expected that he would have improved sufficiently to sing on his Sunday programme. However, late Saturday it was definitely decided that Eddy should rest for a few more days at the Chicago hospital where he is recuperating. J. L. Rawlinson, producer of the programme, wired Joseph Bentonelli in Texas, where the Metropolitan tenor is now on a concert tour, and asked him to substitute.

Bentonelli flew to Chicago immediately to take over his friend's Sunday night assignment, although he had to return to Texas at the conclusion of the broadcast.

Eddy's physicians express full confidence that he will arrive in New York in time for his radio presentation with Nadine Conner, soprano, on Sunday, Feb. 28, at 8 p.m., EST, over the WABC-CBS network.

Japan Plans Study Short Wave Problems

The Japanese Department of Communications plans to build a research laboratory near Tokyo for the study of short waves less than 10 meters in length, according to an official Domei news agency report published in the "Japan Advertiser."

The Hokkaido Imperial University agricultural department announced recently that waves of between 10 centimeters and five meters have proved of benefit in the raising of vegetables. It is also known, according to Domei, that short radio waves are effective in medical treatment as well as in communications and industry. The Department of Communications will investigate these fields and also study their possible use in national defence.

SHORT WAVES

The daily broadcast of RAN, Moscow, has been extended, the Radio Centre advises, from 12 midnight to 2:15 a.m., GMT, or 7 to 9:15 p.m., EST, it formerly ran only an hour.

The German Short-Wave Station, DJD, Berlin, has scheduled a programme "To the Memory of George Washington," for 5 p.m., EST, on Feb. 22. The British Empire service makes no mention of the first American.

The BBC announces it will shortly broadcast to empire listeners prize-winning compositions in a music competition sponsored by the Australian Broadcasting Commission.

A Commercial of the Gravest Importance
Discussing ill-advised commercial announcements on the air, Robert Ripley, whose "Believe-It-Or-Not" broadcasts are heard over NBC every Sunday, remembers a commercial announcement that he saw in France that establishes a new high for poor taste. In a cemetery on the outskirts of Paris is a grave marked with an antiquated tombstone which reads: Adam Fine Rests Here
His sorrowing wife is continuing His business at the same old stand.

Whirlwind Week-end For Guy Lombardo

Three careers at once is okay with Guy Lombardo, but it's a bit like juggling with both hands and doing an off-to-Buffalo all at once. So Guy and his Royal Canadians are doing a "ready, get set, go" for a two weeks' engagement at Broadway's Paramount Theatre with the concurrent problem of playing at the Roosevelt Grill and for their weekly rehearsal and Sunday broadcast at 5:30 p.m., EST, over WABC-CBS.

Here's the time-splitting Lombardo week-end:

After Thursday's supper music session, ending at 2 a.m., at the Roosevelt, Guy and the boys tear into an all-night rehearsal session which lasts till dawn.

Five shows at the theatre Friday, with a dinner music period at 7 p.m., back to the theatre for a performance, and immediate return to the hotel for the supper dance session lasting till 2 a.m.

Saturday, a repeat on the hectic schedule without letdown, plus a conference setting new numbers, discussing new orchestrations for the coming week, lasting till about 3:30 a.m.

Up Sunday to the Columbia Playhouse for a 9 a.m. first broadcast rehearsal; then to the theatre for an 11:30 appearance; back for complete dress-rehearsal of the air show at 3:15 p.m.; another flying trip to the Paramount—then to the studio for the 5:30 air programme and back to the theatre for the remainder of the five shows.

On Thursday, a friend called Guy and asked if he'd play at a benefit on Sunday night!

OAKIE COLLEGE

When the Hollywood onslaught of 1929 plunged American vaudeville into darkness, the headline team of Shaw and Lee went down to obscurity. A few weeks ago, radio, via Jack Oakie's College, revived the comedians in the world's only "double talking" act and eclipsed their previous footlight fame.

Al Snaw and Sam Lee didn't peddle pencils when vaudeville hung out the "dark" sign. Instead, they made a long belated European tour. If America was taunting its nose at stage shows, England wasn't. The Brits kept Snaw and Lee for seven months, then Paris fed them.

New York tempted them again, so back home they went to play the few remaining vaudeville houses.

In 1934 they moved to Hollywood. "We kept hoping something would break," they relate. "In the meantime we played golf."

They got a guest spot on Shell Chateau. A comedy picture for Republic came next. Last year they were in "King of Burlesque" with Jack Oakie. Their latest achievement is Warner Brothers' "King and the Chorus Girl."

Double talking was an accident. In the vaudeville days, Shaw read a line, Lee read a line, and by mistake they both said "huh." The audience laughed, and henceforth they never did a stint without at least one double "huh."

Radio might like it, they decided, and practiced "Hello, we're Shaw and Lee, comedians, you need us on your show," delivered it to Sam Moore, producer of the Tuesday night show, in Hollywood. He liked it, gave them a line of script to read. They gasped but talked it together without rehearsal. They were hired as faculty members of "Oakie College."

In the 14 years they've teamed together, one has never appeared without the other. That's why they feel they can become a sensation not only as double-talkers but as double-doers, as well, opening closet doors together in comic pictures, closing bureau drawers.

"We have the feel of each other," they'll tell you.

"I know what Lee's going to say before he does," says Shaw. "We even make the same mistakes in bridge," says Lee.

Their families live in the same apartment house. Their wives are inseparable, their children in the same class at school.

"If we didn't know each other so well," they admit, "we couldn't do this stunt. Intonation is tremendously difficult. We must practice and practice each line before we're sure of it. It generally takes at least two blow-ups at rehearsal."

"I have to know when Lee's going to take a breath," says Shaw. "It's as difficult as learning a song," declares Lee.

"We think, eat and sleep alike," say they.

Last week Shaw thought to surprise Lee at the Tuesday night broadcast. He brought a new gray suit. But Lee got there first—wearing an identical suit, a size larger.

Joe Penner and his wife are one of the inseparable couples in Hollywood BUT there is one person whom Joe won't allow in the studio when he broadcasts—his wife.

LONDON CALLING

When London Calling-1600 is broadcast from Daventry, England, this evening, listeners should imagine themselves living 300 years ago and hearing the sort of programmes that might have been "on the air" in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, the British Broadcasting Corporation advises. "Suppose an Elizabethan citizen in his gabled cottage twiddled the dials of his five-valve receiver, what would he have heard?" the BBC asks. "News, undoubtedly, in an age of great discoveries. Sport—there would be commentaries on bear-baiting, cock fighting, and memories of the late Sir F. Drake's victories at bowls. Master Will Shakespeare might do a radio version of one of his successful productions at the Globe Theatre. An Armada veteran might talk of sea fighting in his day. Variety?—well, many of the jokes would be censored today."

"A Cambridge professor has schooled the cast in the correct Elizabethan pronunciation, which to us today seems very strange—something like a mixture of Yorkshire dialect and Irish brogue. If listeners to London Calling-1600 try to imagine that wireless had been discovered in the year 1600, and if they are not too fussy about dates and anachronisms, they will enjoy an unusual and entertaining programme." This programme was heard at 6:30 p.m., EST, Feb. 25, over GSC, 31.3 m., 9:58 meg.; GSB, 31.5 m., 9.51 meg.; GSA, 49.5 m., 6.05 meg.

TWO'S COMPANY

Long before Gracie Allen met George Burns she was an Irish colleen in an act billed as "Larry Reilly and Company." She would probably still be with this act except for a booking in Hoboken after she was with the act a year or so.

When she arrived at the theatre, the marquee read only "Larry Reilly." So Gracie quit. "Why did they leave off 'Company'?" she protested. "Nobody can get away with cutting me out of the billing."

LUDLOW

A fudge party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Hovey on Friday evening. Games and dancing were participated in and a good time was enjoyed by all.

Visitors to Fredericton over the week-end were Regina and Shirley Hovey, Geneva Young and Sharp Pond.

Pat Carr, Jap Palmer and Jack Hovey spent an evening recently in Boiestown.

Miss Grace Long was the supper guest of Mrs. B. Lyons on Sunday.

Mrs. Richard Carr and Elva Clowater of Boiestown spent Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Henry Hovey and Mrs. Arthur Carr.

Mrs. Raymond Hovey spent Monday with Mrs. Kathleen Munn, Boiestown.

Miss Geneva Young spent Monday evening in Boiestown, the guest of Mrs. John Whalen.

CHILD ALBUM

The story of "Madeleine de Vercheres" has been chosen for "The Story Book Lady" for the next chapter of "The Children's Album," to be heard by youthful listeners of the CBC eastern and midwest network on Tuesday, March 2, at 7:30 p.m., EST, from the CBC Windsor studios. This is another pleasing yet thrilling story based on some of the romantic periods in the history of New France. Listeners will again hear of the unselfish and courageous work of this young girl and her two brothers in the defence of a French-Canadian fort against an attack of the fearless Iroquois Indians.

MATRONLY SENATOR SPEAKS ON DIVORCE

OTTAWA, Feb. 26—Senator Cairine Wilson has expressed approval of more liberal divorce laws contained in a bill now before the British House of Commons.

Senator Wilson, mother of eight children, said the grounds of desertion over a period of three years, cruelty, incurable insanity, or a committed death sentence, which would be added to adultery as grounds for divorce in England, are reasonable causes for petitioning for divorce.

Another clause in the bill which would make it impossible to obtain a divorce on any grounds during the first five years of marriage would, Senator Wilson felt, lessen the tendency of young people to rush for a divorce after the first serious quarrel, and would encourage more serious consideration before entering marriage.

Women are freer more independent today and will seek an escape from an unendurable marriage, whereas the former generations of women had to endure what they got, she said. More liberal divorce laws would create the escape from such impossible situations as those caused by conditions mentioned in the bill.

Such a bill, she thought, might also lessen the practice of Canadians obtaining divorces in the United States and then returning to live in Canada in a married state that is not legal under Canadian law. The grounds of mental cruelty suggested by Miss Mary Duncan, convener of the Laws Committee of the Calgary Local Council of Women would allow too much leeway to be included and would be used perhaps more by women who are not "as good sports as men in married life," said Senator

Lr. Queensbury

The recent snow fall is very welcome as there is still a lot of hauling to do.
