FREDERICTON, N. B., JULY 8, 1937.

His Excellency Pioneers

Lord Tweedsmuir is making official history by a 10,000-mile tour, which will take him to the Arctic shore beyond lands only recently recognized as worthy of serious consideration. Other Governors-General have travelled far, but kept closely to the beaten paths. The Scottish blood in the present incumbent of Rideau Hall may be summoning him to the little-known and distant "wilds" along trails of venturesome pioneers. He will be the first to cross the Arctic Circle and visit the rough frontier outposts. His motor car and horseback journey afterward will take him through the wildest part of British Columbia's interior, over the Rockies to the Pacific coast.

It may be the urge of the blood in his veins that calls him to these places. Nevertheless, he goes as the King's representative, and hereafter no one can say that the great empire bordering the Arctic Ocean is too remote or inconsequential for such attention. His trip will arouse greater interest in Canada's Northland. If the Governor-General thinks it worth while to see for himself what these areas are like, and show that the King's domain reaches far beyond the settled margin, more pioneering citizens ought to be induced to follow in his footsteps. Undoubtedly it is a magnificent holiday trip, but this is not all.

Where Now Mr. de Valera?

The Dail election and the plebiscite on the de Valera Constitution do not make easier an accurate interpretation of the Irish situation. In a country that has been herded about by the cries of political shepherds to the extent that the Free State has, President Eamon de Valera, with all the "cries" on his side, did not do so well. From the completed returns there is the large possibility that he will continue dependent on the support of Labor, a fact that can go a long way to cramp his domestic program.

To begin the campaign de Valera cried loudest on the Constitution issue with the result that he uncovered an unexpected and substantial opposition. Accordingly, he switched back to the threadbare Fianna Fail "unity" chorus, and on the vote, just in time to pull off a victory. His position with regards to the plebiscite is even less favorable. While he managed to gain a majority for its acceptance, it was far from the whole-hearted endorsement most countries would want for a charter so sweeping in its alterations, and after months of explanation, so open to question.

It is the Constitution which makes Labor's support of the Government uncertain. On most other issues, domestic or external, it can be fairly confident of union approval. But how stubborn Labor will be with its suspicion of "restrictions on trade unionism" is a matter for speculation. Providing the new "labor code" of increased wages, holidays with pay and security for seasonal workers, is not side-tracked along with the unity programme in the business of building the new Republic of Eire, the President may count on aid.

From the size of his programme and the extent of his promises, it would appear, however, that the President's first job is to get his financial house in order, which means settling with Britain. The subsidies on Irish farm produce going into the United Kingdom have imposed about all the burdens the taxpayers are in a position to bear. To add the cost of his social programme, and very possibly the upkeep of a navy and other items of home defense, is out of the question.

In 1935-36 the subsidies amounted to £5,421,000, or £639,000 more than the debt payments Mr. De Valera has been withholding from Britain would total. Last year, with the highest revenues in Free State history, and with only a very small part of his social programme in effect, his Budget showed a deficit of over £200,000. Elimination of the subsidies is the only course open outside of taxes, and elimination will call for a more explicit explanation of the Free State's position than any one has heard yet.

Freemen Entitled to Know

The world saw a superb exhibition of the process of democratic government when Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain went before the House of Commons to let all Britons and all the world know how the Government stood in the crisis over the withdrawal of Germany and Italy from the international naval control of Spanish waters.

You did not see Hitler or Mussolini going before their people to tell them what the chances were of being flung headlong into war. Nor would Stalin have paid his people that courtesy.

Before the House of Commons it was divulged just how many ships Great Britain had in the troubled waters off Spain. Further, the Prime Minister, unafraid of how Germany or Italy might misinterpret what he said, told the Commons that Britain's policy has been directed to only one aim, to keep the peace of Europe by keeping the war within Spain.

"We intend to pursue that policy as long as there is reasonable hope of avoiding spread of the conflict," said the Prime Minister.

Chamberlain did not put it this bluntly, but he let it be known that Great Britain is quite aware that however much any European country may sympathize with either side in the Spanish war, no country is a bit eager to get into a big war.

Here is how these crises usually wash up: In his speech, Chamberlain said the German naval officers who thought an attempt had been made to torpedo their ship might have been honestly mistaken and that, therefore, it was easy to understand why Germany indignantly withdrew from the non-intervention patrol.

This olive branch was pleasantly (perchance eagerly, received in Berlin, whose press made conciliatory acknowledgment, and there we see the face-saving and the resumption of less tense relations.

Ann so, let us hope, it goes.

What is the big idea of selling berries at eight cents per box and three boxes for twenty-five cents. Why charge the man who buys three boxes the extra cent. This is being done both in the markets and in the stores. It is like the chain stores which sell the tea pot and then sell the lid—"only more so."

The President of the York and Sunbury Historical Society told the County Council that the Fredericton City Council is giving the Society's application for a grant favourable consideration. The aldermen claim that they turned the application down because they did not feel that the City Council could bear the financial burden and because they could not pledge future Councils to the grant. The two statements do not seem to agree. It would be nice to get the grant if the County Council have the money to spend. But why not keep the records straight.

The 3-Minute VapoRub Massage

Massage VapoRub briskly on the throat, chest and back (between and below the shoulder blades). Then spread it thick over the chest and cover with warmed cloth.

Almost before you finish rubbing, VapoRub starts to bring relief two ways at once—two direct ways:

1. Through the Skin. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster.
2. Medicated Vapors. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by body heat, are breathed in for hours—about 18 times a minute—direct to the irritated air-passages of the nose, throat and chest. This combined poultice-and-vapor action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation—helps break congestion.

Marijuana

(Continued from Page One) ada do not consider this particular drug to be a problem in this country, but they are watching the situation in the United States closely. As far as Toronto is concerned, city police have no record of persons having been arrested for possessing the harmless-looking cigarettes.

In the past four years, according to R.C.M.P. officials, there have been about a dozen arrests in the Western Ontario division. About three weeks ago a negro was arrested by the R.C.M.P. for having two marijuana cigarettes in his possession. The investigation failed to show he was selling them to others.

The majority of the twelve cases were in Windsor and London, cities close to the international border. Under the Federal Narcotics Act, persons found possessing marijuana cigarettes face a $200 fine and six months imprisonment.

Immediate deportation to the country of origin is the fate that awaits a non-citizen who breaks the law in this respect. Selling the drug brings a heavier punishment, with a maximum of seven years imprisonment.

Marijuana, peddled to many young people in the United States, causes insanity in many cases. Its effect is often unpredictable. It is known to turn quiet, respectable youths into raving murderers, seeking victims to satisfy their delusions.

County Councillors

(Continued from Page One) protests. It was pointed that the legislation representatives of York County were in sympathy with the attitude of the opponents of the measure.

It was explained that the purpose of the government's proposed action was to protect the salmon. The fish spawn in the Tobique area and the federal department deem it advisable to permit the fish to reach the spawning grounds without interference.

The matter was discussed at considerable length, each councillor voicing his approval of the suggested resolution.

Prior to the adjournment of the meeting, Councillor J. A. Doherty made inquiries regarding an item of $250 on the county accounts for the transportation of five prisoners to the Maritime Penitentiary at Dorchester. He contended that amount of $50 per head seemed a large sum. He asked that Judge Slipp be called to the meeting to explain the arrangements in connection with the transportation of prisoners to the penitentiary. The councillor further explained that, contrary to the opinion of many people, the judge who sentences a prisoner has nothing further to do with the latter. He said he wanted Judge Slipp present just to "clear-up" any misunderstanding. The matter will likely be taken up at a later session of the council.

Palestine

(Continued from Page One) der which the United Kingdom has ruled Palestine following the conquest of the country by British forces during the Great War. The proposed British zone under the plan would require the issuance of a new mandate from the League.

The government white paper contained a stern warning that pending the establishment of the scheme the British government will maintain peace, order and good government in Palestine. Should serious disorders break out again the British high commissioner will delegate powers over the whole country to the officer commanding the military forces.

Advantages For Both

Advantages of the scheme for both Jews and Arabs are listed by the commission in its report.

Partition of the country would secure establishment of a Jewish national home and remove any prospect of its being subject to Arab rule. It would be a national home they could call their own and its citizens might admit as many Jews as they themselves believed the country could absorb. It would be a Jewish nation in which Jews would cease to lead a "minority life."

The Arabs too would obtain national independence and freedom to co-operate with Arabs in neighboring countries. They would be relieved of the fear of being "swamped" by Jews through immigration. Their holy places would be protected and guaranteed against ever coming under Jewish control. To compensate for loss of territory they would receive a subvention from the Jewish state and a grant of $10,000,000 from the British treasury.

Eight Thousand

(Continued from Page One) Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons Britain has no intention of offering new proposals at Friday's session of the 27-nation non-intervention committee on a hands-off Spain program.

He did say, however, that 'His Majesty's government attach the greatest importance to withdrawal from Spain of all foreign combatants who already are there and will continue to do its utmost to bring this about.'

While Eden will wait on Count Dino Grandi, the Italian ambassador, and Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German ambassador, to take the initiative on any new proposals of the non-intervention group is expected to insist on the withdrawal of Spanish war volunteers.

That would be preliminary, British sources say, to consideration of the Spanish insurgent General Francisco Franco's position that he be accorded belligerent rights.

His statement that the insurgents might 'close our doors to those who showed their enmity toward us in our hour of need' worried some business quarters, however.

These sources asserted that Britain in 1936, imported about $25,000,000 worth of iron ore of which nearly $5,000,000 worth came from Spain.

Observers said loss of Spanish trade would be a severe blow but would not prove disastrous.

TAKE THE HEAT ON HIGH (or Keep In High Gear This Summer)

WHEN the heat comes, some people, like old cars, can't make the grade—they have to slip into "second" or into "low". The heat slows them, saps their "horsepower". Why can I, a youngster of almost 80, who, judged by conventional standards, should be on the scrap heap, drive in high through the hottest summer, defying Mr. Sol, just as in winter I scorn Mr. Zero? The answer is foods. People give no thought at all to the foods they ought to eat, only the foods they like. They follow the herd. Herd intelligence is notably no intelligence at all.

If people would really think, they would realize that bodily health depends upon the blood that feeds the body cells. The blood depends upon the kind of foods which build the blood. Therefore the kind of blood that flows through our bodies can make us shrivel and shiver on cold days and wilt and wither on hot days. The cause of both is viscid, ropy, toxic blood, derived from denatured, dead, demineralized, constipating foods.

Here is how to prove me right or wrong. During the hot spell, make your breakfast of Roman Meal, Bekus-Puddy or Lishus, all you can enjoy with milk or cream, raisins or chopped dates, not body-heating sugar. Make thick enough to chew thoroughly. If hot cereal is not liked, cook any of them the previous night, allow to cool, place in refrigerator and serve for breakfast, with sliced or canned peaches, ripe bananas, fruit jelly, p-s-serve, or honey with cream or milk. Drink Iced Kofy-Sub, sweetened with brown sugar, or preferably honey, added while hot, a very delightful and healthful beverage. For noon meal a salad of fresh fruit or raw vegetables, Iced Kofy-Sub. For evening meal, a large fruit or vegetable salad, sprinkled with grated nuts, grated cheese or cottage cheese, or lightly steamed vegetables if salads are not liked, as second choice. Any kind of juicy fruit for dessert. Iced Kofy-Sub or hot Kofy-Sub if hot drink is preferred.

Train the intestines to eliminate after each meal. It is of utmost importance to exercise all groups of muscles briskly, fifteen or twenty minutes daily, to the point of deep breathing, to burn up internal poisonous waste. If you do not know how, send fifty cents for my book "SYSTEMATIZED

Do not fret or worry and—well, I stake my reputation on this assertion—follow this program for one month, or at most two, and so remarkable will be your improvement, you will always follow it.
