DOCTORS FORM
NEW CHARTS
OF WEIGHT

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 27—A person's ideal weight is governed by the individual body build and the skeleton structure—not the "correct weight chart" on the scale on the corner, according to three doctors reporting in the present issue of the Journal Lancet, Minneapolis medical publication.

The ever present "correct weight charts," the doctors said, are mostly guesswork and fail to consider "individual variations in weight within a normal range of variations which may be due to different body structure."

The scientists are Dr. Helen B. Pryor, San Francisco; Dr. Robert O. Moody, professor emeritus of anatomy in the University of California, and Dr. Charles E. Shepard, director of men students' health service at Stanford University.

A child, the doctors say, may be considerably underweight, according to the "average" standard and yet be perfectly healthy and appear thin simply because he has inherited a slender skeleton. Under their system for determining correct weight, he will be "normal."

On the other hand, a thick-boned person carries more soft tissues and a heavy musculature that might raise his weight above the accepted norm. He, too, would be "normal" when his bodily characteristics are taken into consideration.

The doctor's new technique for determining correct weight works thus: They take the width of the hip-bones from the outside crest to outside crest at the point of the widest flare. Next, they divide this figure by the person's height times 1,000. This figure gives them their width-length index and expresses the width of the body in relation to standing height.

Charts they have computed after many physical examinations then form the basis for estimating the person's correct, or ideal, weight.

Five Men Are Dismissed From the Royal Dock Yards

(Special to The Daily Mail)
LONDON, Jan. 26—Five men have been dismissed from the Royal dock yards in London. This it is explained can be done without informing those who are dismissed the cause of their dismissal. The five men have entered a protest which will be brought before Parliament.

No defence is permitted in such cases. The first lord of the Admiralty gave the explanation that nearly ten years ago men were found guilty of agitating strikes and were likewise dismissed without explanation. By tampering with motors of warships all details will be kept in secret. It is felt that the government must have complete trust of its men. If anything should go wrong with ships on voyages the government would be blamed.

Storms and Severe
Weather Experienced
Throughout Europe

(Special to The Daily Mail)
LONDON, Jan. 26—Heavy seas are stirring up a lot of trouble in the Mediterranean, North Sea and the Straits of Gibraltar. The sea is so rough that small vessels have had to be pulled into port. The Danube and the Vistula are completely frozen over. The Port of Aberdeen the sea was so rough that the port had to be closed to navigation until great quantities of oil were poured on the waters. The city of London is completely surrounded with fog and workers have had to wear lights all day.
