Child's Song in Spring

The silver birch is a dandy lady,
She wears a satin gown;
The elm tree makes the old churchyard shady,
She will not live in town.

The English oak is a sturdy fellow,
He gets his green coat late;
The willow is smart in a suit of yellow
While brown the beech trees wait.

Such a gay green gown God gives the larches—
As green as He is good!
The hazels hold up their arms for arches

When Spring rides through the wood,
The chestnut's proud, and the lilac's pretty.

The poplar's gentle and tall,
But the plane tree's kind to the poor
Dull city—
I love him best of all.

Artists and Executives Entertained

At the conclusion of the Community Concert last evening the artists and the members of the executive were entertained at the home of the president Mrs. A. P. Crockett. The artists left this morning for Saint John.

METROPOLITAN OPERA STARS GREETED BY LARGE AUDIENCE IN NORMAL SCHOOL AUDITORIUM HERE LAST EVENING

Composition by Local Composer Included on Program

A large and appreciative audience greeted Frederick Jagel, leading tenor and Helen Olheim, mezzo-soprano artists of the Metropolitan Opera Association last evening in the auditorium of the Provincial Normal School. The concert was the last of a series of concerts which have been sponsored by the Fredericton Community Concert Association and was pronounced the best yet.

The offerings included numbers from several of the great masters such as Handel, Brahms, Strauss, Ponchielli, Charles, Quilter, Alkin, Hutchinson, and Elinor Warren, Miss Olheim's repertoire included Bach, Schumann, Manne, Rubinstein and others. Miss Olheim possesses a charming personality and graciously responded with several encores, two of which were particularly pleasing.

"The Haveners" from the Opera Carmen by Bizet was sung in perfect French and convincing expression. Of special interest to a Fredericton audience was the number "Golden Slumbers Kiss Your Eyes" written over the week-end by Robin Bayley and dedicated to Miss Olheim and which she sang last night in a sweet manner.

Frederick Jagel needs no introduction to Fredericton. This famous tenor was born in Brooklyn, New York. His career has been a swift one. It started when a wealthy business man heard him singing solos in a church and offered to finance him. He went abroad and in August, 1924, made his debut at Livorno, the birthplace of Mascagni, singing Rodolfo in "Boheme." Engagements followed in the major cities of Italy, Holland and Spain and during those first three years he sang 194 performances of major roles.

All the time, however, that Jagel was making a European reputation for himself he had one idea in the back of his head—the Metropolitan Opera Company. Finally his day came. He was singing at the Dal Verme Theatre in Milan when General Manager Gatti-Casazza heard him and immediately signed him up for the season of 1927-28. Frederick Jagel's first season at the Metropolitan proved to be the prompt fulfillment of a promise. His debut as Rhadames was acclaimed by both press and public. Since then he has gone steadily forward. He has been heard regularly at the opera house ever since and with cumulative success.

Every number was well received, the artists being delighted with the reception which they received from their audience the last number a duet "Gloria" by Verdi, probably claimed the highest acclamation of any number on the program. The composition affording a splendid opportunity of showing the rich tones and executive power of the voices of the artists. The accompanists of the evening were Paul Sargeant at the piano for Mr. Jagel, and Gibber King at the piano for Miss Olheim.

The encores at last night's Community Concert held at the Provincial Normal School were: by Jagel: "Sylvia," by Oley Speaks; "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," "Hop-Li-Rickshaw Man," by Kathleen Lockhart Manning, "O Paradiso" from "L'Africana," by Meyerbeer. By Miss Olheim: "Haveners," from the Opera Carmen by Bizet, "The Cuckoo," by Martin Shaw, and "Golden Slumbers Kiss Your Eyes," dedicated by Robin Bayley to Miss Olheim.

CARACAS, Venezuela, April 27—The airmail plane "Venezolana" was missing today over the wilds of the Venezuelan-Brazilian frontier with a crew of three and William Armstrong Perry, American newspaperman. Violent storms prevented scouting planes from starting a search. The plane has been unreported since Friday.

Popular Devon

had proceeded up the hill toward the crossing, unaware of the approach of the motor train. The roar of the motorcycle is believed to have drowned out any sound of the train and the fact that it is difficult to see the approach of a train at that point, until a motorist is about 50 feet from the top of the incline, combined to make the tragedy possible. The victim's dragging feet as he reached the track were not enough to halt his progress.

Attempted To Turn

The train is said to have struck the machine while it was almost midway of the tracks. There is some belief that the victim attempted to make a right turn in the direction the train was going, but too late.

Conductor and motorman, who succeeded in stopping within 400 or 500 feet, came back, assisted in carrying the body into the small station house, and then proceeded on to Fredericton.

The crossing at Pamelene runs through a partial hill. There are no wigwag signals. Bystanders said at the scene that ten accidents have occurred there within the past 10 years. The R.C.M.P. constables were told that in the summer time, when the cottages there are occupied, about 280 families pass this crossing each day, which, with trucks carrying store supplies, would make about 500 trips across the tracks daily.

Police said last night that a number of witnesses would be summoned for the inquest, including the conductor, James Ahearn, the motorman, and possibly others on the train.

Mr. Jamer had only lately taken the summer camp at Pamelene, sharing it with a friend, William Casey, of the purchasing department of the C.P.R. Since the disappearance of snow he had been accustomed to driving out to his camp in the early morning after working hours, and returning to his newspaper duties in the late afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pogson were owners of the camp at Pamelene, and the tragedy prostrated Mr. Pogson yesterday.

He is survived by his father, George A. Jamer, sr., Devon; three brothers, Daniel, manager of Price Brothers, Buckingham, Que.; Watson, Saint John, official of the Ford Motor Company, and George A. Jamer, jr., Devon; also one sister, Kay, registered nurse, of Halifax, who flew to Saint John last evening by plane.

The funeral will take place at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow, Wednesday, afternoon, with service at the home in North Devon by Rev. George Telford and interment at the Rural Cemetery in this city.

HITLER'S OFFER IS DISTRUSTED

LONDON, April 27—While strongly favorable to accepting Chancellor Hitler's suggestion for a new world economic conference at its face value, British public opinion does not believe there is sincerity behind the offer.

In the present lull in European affairs, efforts on behalf of peace are being redoubled, but such activity is not apparent in totalitarian countries. While believing no hope, however forlorn, for bringing Germany into a new settlement should be overlooked, the British press is recalling past occasions when Hitler's words were meaningless, and also his refusal to co-operate with the League of Nations raw-material inquiry.

It is being noted that, after shaking George Lansbury's hand, the Fuehrer hastened to inspect 15,000 storm troops and a long procession of tanks, armored cars and heavy artillery. The next day he signed a decree speeding up air armaments.

The quarter whence Hitler's offer is most severely criticized is the Conservative Yorkshire Post, with which the Eden family is closely connected. The Post takes umbrage at the fact that the Fuehrer coolly disregarded innumerable invitations to negotiate a European settlement made in recent months by the British Foreign Secretary.

The German press have clarified the situation since Hitler's statement was made, indicating a high price will be attached for co-operation. Germany is willing to attend the conference if her colonies are returned and a handsome loan arranged in London and New York.

In the meantime progress toward peace is being achieved by democracies. Ardent support is being given in British Liberal circles to Belgian Premier van Zeeland's mission and the efforts of the Scandinavian powers to enlarge trade. It is recognized that the only escape from collapse or war lies in lower tariffs, enlarged trade, disarmament and a revived League of Nations assuring collective security.

Herr Sandler, Foreign Minister of Sweden, announced the success of his group of powers including Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and Switzerland, in the negotiation of agreements reducing tariffs and also pooling armament information.

BILBAO, Spain, April 27—The British freighter Sheafghat entered Bilbao harbor today, becoming the sixth British vessel to run the rebel blockade.

PROF. JAMES STRANGE

Do not be disappointed if Mr. Strange cannot answer you immediately, as many inquiries are coming in which must be answered in turn.

If you wish a character analysis from Handwriting be sure to send in $1.00 for a 3 months' subscription to The Daily Mail if a resident of Fredericton or 75c if living in the rural districts, as our Free Reading offer applies only to new subscribers and requests for readings unaccompanied by a cash remittance will not be answered.

Prof. James Strange who is sojourning in Fredericton is much impressed with the scenery of Central New Brunswick. Writing to The Daily Mail Mr. Strange says that we in this part of the province should be proud of our scenery and of our highways now in course of improvement. Professor Strange gives his impressions as follows:

I have heard considerable comment regarding New Brunswick's scenery and believe me I received an "eyeful" Sunday. It so happened that a gentleman requested to accompany him on a motor trip across country. The invitation was gladly accepted.

As I was about to enter the car in waiting I was introduced to a man whose personality and manner appeared outstanding in character.

From general appearance the average individual would this sort of person to be coarse, burley and a desperate roughneck. I was, however, favorably impressed by his sincerity of motive and genial personality. Rough though he be upon the outside surface, he was nevertheless an appreciation for culture and spiritual refinement within the innermost part of his being.

So often do we fail to recognize the finer qualities that exist beneath the outer coat of such men, instead, we perch upon some high pinnacle without allowing due consideration for our fellowmen and value our personality one hundred per cent.

Following the usual preliminaries in that of introductions, etc., we started on our journey. The personality of the day was indeed one which added much joy to the charm of motoring. It wasn't long, however, until I began to see sights of interest. I was delightfully pleased on leaving the main highway to realize for myself the truth regarding the many comments, of the beautiful landscapes which I had heard so much about prior to my arrival here.

People bred, born and reared upon the same threshold as a general rule, seldom appreciate the personality and charm as exist around the old homestead. This is a natural trait of man, and from all indications, we need the change of scenery and environment in order to appreciate more fully the old landscapes and countryside where youth had its fling.

As we motored along the sub-trunk road, my interest became deeply aroused not by scenic beauty alone, but also by the occasional movements of wild life. While my eyes were scanning the horizon, I could not help sensing the natural possibilities and future prosperity in store for this particular section of Canada. The personality of any country is likened to the personality of man. The natural features and characteristics lie within the border of each community or settlement. It may be cultivated or allowed to lie dormant. In the event of the latter the material consequences will be the accumulation of weeds, smut and deterioration.

I was delightfully pleased however to note along the route, the many splendid improvements in the way of road construction, as well as private development and progress in the rural districts.

The people of the province of New Brunswick can well afford to boast of its natural features and characteristics lie within the border and scope of each individual community or settlement. It may be cultivated or allowed to lie dormant. In the event of the latter cause, the natural consequences will result in the accumulation of weeds, smut and deterioration. The splendid work and the many changes in regards to the highway route will be appreciated by visitors from other parts of Canada and the United States. The people of the province of New Brunswick can well afford to boast of their tourist resorts to the outside world.

Upon arrival to our point of destination, I must confess the capacity of our intestinal fortitudes was somewhat below par, so we decided to replenish the larder with a healthy refreshment.

While sitting in the luncheon booth my attention was attracted by a number of individuals whose bumps of curiosity were overflowing with idle interest at the sight of us. Anyhow we managed to receive the necessary stimulus and fuel to carry us safely back to our original starting point.

I would like to mention at this point that we were on arrival to our destination, the capacity of our intestinal fortitudes were somewhat below par so we naturally decided to replenish the larder with a supply of food. We sat together in an old fashioned booth and waited patiently in anticipation for the arrival of a waitress for it wasn't long however before a young lady made her appearance. Her calling in life might appeal to some individuals as just ordinary. Oftentimes have I heard the remark, "Oh, she is only a waitress. Whether a waitress or anything else, favorably impressed by the personality and conduct of the waitress who so efficiently and courteously served our wants. Her calling in life might appeal to some people as just ordinary. Oftentimes have I heard the remark, "Oh, she is only a waitress. Whether waitress or anything else, these people render a valuable service to mankind. Although we delight in priding ourselves on our importance, we fail to recognize or allow any credit to men and women whose station in life differs from our own. We usually rest into the restaurant bellows with all the bronchial force the old antiquated expression, "Service." Failing to acknowledge the least sign of thanks and appreciation.

Individuals who have failed to understand kind treatment when administered by these faithful servants would be well advised to delve into inner sanctions of their own souls, and by careful analysis, the faults underlying the true self could be eradicated from the personality plane of thought and kind matters substituted in place thereof.

Unkind attitude without reason bestowed upon any servant, engaged in menial work is a gross insult such remarks as she is ONLY a servant girl tends to make my blood boil. After all said and done we must all bear in mind, regardless of station in life we are all members of the great universal family, each one endowed with some particular talent, to serve in the many duties of life.

I hope as time passes we will all endeavor to view the finer side of life and that we may become more tolerant and charming in our personality.
