Do not be disappointed if Mr. Strange cannot answer you immediately, as many inquiries are coming in which must be answered in turn.

If you wish a character analysis from Handwriting be sure to send in $1.00 for a 3 months' subscription to The Daily Mail if a resident of Fredericton or 75c if living in the rural districts, as our Free Reading offer applies only to new subscribers and requests for readings unaccompanied by a cash remittance will not be answered.

ROSEBUD

Dear Mr. Strange:
Please give me an analysis of my handwriting.

ROSEBUD.

You are very artistic, Rosebud. Your eye for color, arrangement and system would fit you well, if trained for the calling of window dresser or decorator. I note also your natural aptitude for elocution. Whenever the opportunity presents itself that you may assist in theatrical performances avail yourself of such. Public appearance upon the stage would unfold many characteristics which ordinarily lie dormant. You have written with a fine hand. The impression suggests to my mind the type of personality with abundance of reason, logic and human understanding. You have certainly abundance of courage and determination, and from indications in general nothing would prove more gratifying to yourself than the reward such as you could merit, through the use and expression of your spiritual gifts.

As a friendly suggestion, write a daily letter to an invisible or imaginary friend. Write down everything that enters your mind. If this practice is followed faithfully for a period of six months you will realize your innate ability as an inspirational writer.

I shall be pleased to know, Rosebud, the progress you have made.

KATE

Kindly give me a reading of my handwriting, and oblige

KATE.

You write a benevolent hand, Kate and no doubt if given the opportunity to render services to humanity there would not be the slightest hesitation on your part to co-operate with those who may feel the need of such assistance as your powers and understanding permits. Your handwriting reveals melancholic tendencies. This you must guard against. Avoid the chronic frown. These characters prove very depressing, causing oftentimes the strongest of men to fall.

I can readily discern your station in the social plane of life, and although you have not been as fortunate to the extent as many of your brothers and sisters, still and all you have a purpose in the great scheme of worldly affairs, and therefore no embarrassment need be felt by yourself.

Oftentimes we sense a degree of inferiority of ourselves when introduced or entertained by others, whose stations in life appear to differ from the plane of our own.

Remember Kate, no matter what a calling in this life consists of we are nevertheless members or links of a great chain. You and I are individual links and no matter what our station may be one link is of no greater importance than its corresponding link. Now, just keep alive the spirit of hope, and cheerful outlook upon life's problems.

I would like to suggest Kate, that you pursue a course of studies in English, say during the coming winter season. You will I am sure, derive a considerable amount of pleasure as well as personal benefit should a course of this nature be pursued. The advantage will mean a broader outlook and a deeper understanding of yourself and a finer appreciation of the human family.

TUN

130 Prince St.,

Saint John, N. B.

Dear Mr. Strange,

I have read with great interest your column on character analysis from specimens of handwriting. Revealing traits of character either from writing or other methods has always appeared to me a fascinating art.

I wish to take advantage of the splendid offer, and have submitted a paragraph from a letter received from a correspondent in China. I would appreciate very much an analysis of the enclosed specimen, and also an extra copy of The Daily Mail.

Thank you, Mr. Strange.
G. A. V.
As to radio broadcasting, I don't have much enthusiasm. This is because of the lackness of good music. China is a country without music. We used to have musicians 3,000 years ago. But after the dynasty of Ching when a big Tyrant burned all the books in the country, including The Book of Music nobody paid any attention to that art. But I think music is reviving in China these years. I object to the imported "jazz." It is too jumpy.

TUN, Shanghai.
Your friend's handwriting, G. A. V. is without doubt the finest specimen I've ever had occasion to read. From the first to the very last letter, I was deeply impressed with the regularity and uniform style of his writing.

Let us visualize his phrenology. The mental photograph such as I have received from the enclosed specimen portrays an unusually large upper forehead just below the hair line. Directly in the centre of this region there is a large or rather decided protuberance. This is recognized by phrenologists as the faculty for analytical reasoning. The temples are quite full, permitting him to create and construct. When both qualities are full, such as revealed to me, he should not hesitate in utilizing his physical forces in stimulating life and action of his mental powers. I am astonished indeed by the remarkable skill of the writer, and I am inclined to suggest to the people of the western world that much can be gained in the light of knowledge from a race who have for many years been considered as inferior.

Your friend, Tun will, during the course of time, contribute much valuable knowledge and practical benefits in the interest and well being of his country. It is with great pleasure to me to have the opportunity of analyzing a specimen of handwriting such as you have submitted. Best wishes to you and your friend.

C.G.I.T. PAGEANT WELL RECEIVED BY LARGE AUDIENCE

"Pied Piper of Hamelin" Presented in Normal School Here

"The Pied Piper of Hamelin," a colorful pageant presented by the Fredericton group of the Canadian Girls in Training was enjoyed by a large audience which almost filled the spacious auditorium of the Provincial Normal School to capacity last evening. Directed by Mrs. A. L. Gerow, the program was based on the ancient legend of the "Pied Piper" who rid the town of Hamelin of rats. Also featuring the entertainment were specialties which were enthusiastically enjoyed by all present.

A choir of fourteen voices under the direction of Mrs. J. E. Page sang several popular songs in a scene entitled "Campfire." There was also a clever dancing act by several girls of the C.G.I.T. group which contributed much to the success of the evening's program.

The scene of the pageant was the mayor's parlor in the Town of Hamelin. It described the arrival of the yellow-coated stranger, carrying the mysterious pipe who promised to rid the town of rats for a thousand guilders. The following two acts described the procession of the rats, the latter being represented by cleverly arranged cardboard replicas of the rodents.

The stage was colorfully arranged and provided a suitable setting for the entertaining performance. During the evening Mrs. J. F. PPage and Mrs. A. L. Gerow were made recipients of lovely bouquets as tokens of appreciation for their efforts in making the program a success. The presentations were made by Evangeline Selig. The dancing was under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Bebbington.
