Facing Both Ways

PREMIER WILLIAM ABERHARTT talks one way and legislates another. What he says is that the Alberta Government has no intention of interfering with the general business of banking, and that dictatorial methods will not be used by his administration. He says also that Albertans and their government have no intention whatever of separating themselves from the Dominion. He says further that the banks would suffer no loss in co-operating with the Government of Alberta.

What he proposes under the actual banking legislation adopted at the recent session of the Legislature, is that the Alberta Government be given control of bankers in Alberta through its Social Credit Board, and that bank managers and employees be required to take out licenses. Read in connection with the recent letters explaining policy to Social Credit members of the Legislature and the letter to Canadian bankers, the Premier's protestations do not square with the facts. He intends to interfere most flagrantly with the sound credit operations of the banks and to force the extension of credit to all Alberta citizens at the rate of $25 a month. He intends to do that or all the laws and the letters of explanation have been dust to throw in the eyes of electors and are meant to hide the paucity of the Government's accomplishments.

The Premier and his Minister of Municipal Affairs, Hon. Lucien Maynard, should get together before making public statements as to what the policy really is. Hon. Lucien Maynard is quoted in despatches from Alberta as saying that the banks could "close up and get out" if they refuse to do what the Government wants them to do; that is, place the depositors' money at the disposal of the Social Credit Board for payment of a monthly dividend of $25 a month to each adult.

Hon. Lucien Maynard is credited with being a very shrewd politician. That being so, what is one to think of the thoughts which such a man keeps in reserve when he says in a public speech that "it is the duty of the Government to provide food, clothing and shelter for the people." Throughout the depression and to this day every Canadian Government has been doing just that for all those who have been in need of them. But it is acting for the rest of the people of Canada who pay more taxes out of their earnings and productive activities, and it is doing this as a temporary but regrettable measure until every adult has a chance to improve his condition by "his own" efforts. Governments have a duty to preserve peace, law and order for those who are the real providers of food, clothing and shelter; that is, for the producers and workers of Canada and their dependents.

One of the encouraging by-products of the latest legislative attempt to try out economic lunacy in Alberta is that the newspaper press of Canada, including that of Alberta, is almost a unit in condemning the irresponsible legislation enacted by the recent Alberta Legislature in an obvious attempt to embroil Province and Dominion in a jurisdictional squabble.

Provincial rights has been a rallying cry for generations, and sometimes with real reason, in Provincial campaigns. But it also has often been used as a herring drawn across the trail when a Government felt public support falling away and wished to divert attention from its record. But the attempt has never been so flagrant or so absurd as the one just made by the Aberhart Government. It is time that the people of every Province should make it plain that above Provincial or any other kind of rights stand the rights of individual citizens, and that other rights are valid so long as they aid most the general public. When Provincial politicians ignore the terms of Confederation and deliberately take rights which were given to the Dominion Parliament and Government by the British North America Act, they are committing a crime against the unity of Canada. If they want the Confederation pact amended, the proper way is to place their case before the Royal Commission just constituted by Ottawa with the Hon. Newton Rowell at its head.

Every citizen of Canada has cause to value his citizenship both in Dominion and Province, but he gets the greatest benefit from his dual citizenship when Provincial and Dominion Governments and law-making bodies do their proper work within their allotted sphere. These governments should be a team playing for the good of all Canadians, and wherever there arises a doubt as to the position and powers and duties of any player in that team, the Supreme Court and the Privy Council are available to pass upon any reference to them.

The greatest weakness of the Alberta legislation is that it proposes to do away with the umpire—an umpire who is provided to meet just occasions. Premier King's request that the umpire should decide before action takes place under the startling and unprecedented laws just enacted at a special session, is reasonable and conciliatory. Premier Aberhart states that he is dumbfounded that such a request should be made. No other Canadian of experience was surprised, and even Mr. Aberhart seems to be dumbfounded more for public consumption than otherwise. The whole absurd affair is one more sign that the Social Credit experiment is now on its way to its predestined and final doom.

"To Err Is Human"

IN the hurry of turning out a daily paper mistakes are inevitable, but apparently no other mistakes are so unforgivable. Let a name be misspelled or wrong initials given and there is vigorous protest. Much of this kind of news comes in by telephone, and many voices are notoriously indistinct. The public speaker claims he is misquoted, when, as a matter of fact, the paper's report indicates what he did say, perhaps in a moment of carelessness or departure from his text.

But not all mistakes are in the press. The Gananoyue Reporter, prompted perhaps by experience, has been looking into this business of getting things wrong, and here is what it has discovered:—

An editor, who had his attention called to a mistake in one of his columns, didn't feel so aggrieved when he recalled that on the same day there was a letter in his postoffice box that did not belong to him; he called 98 on the telephone and got 198; he called for a spool of No. 50 thread and got a spool of No. 60; he got his milk bill and there was a mistake of ten cents in the company's favor; he felt sick and the doctor told him that he was eating too much meat, when he hadn't tasted meat for two months; the preacher turned in his church notes with the name of the society president misspelled, and the editor got the blame for it; the garage man said his car was missing because it needed a new timer, and he cleaned the spark-plugs and the flywheel has run fine ever since. And no doubt you can pick out a few more that could not be blamed on the editor.

While the press is not seeking exoneration for the mistakes it makes, there is some satisfaction in knowing that it is not a solitary offender against accuracy. The trouble that follows is because so many people are watching for errors in the paper; eager to protest, while there is no public interest in a wrong telephone number, an incorrect bill for the milk, or a foolish diagnosis of what is wrong with the flywheel, or the physical structure of its owner. These are affairs for the individual, while what a paper prints appears to be everybody's business. After all, why shouldn't it be?

SNAPSHOTS

The members of the City Council and of the Board of Trade who were preparing the civic reception for the Acadians from New England had all their trouble for nothing. The visitors evidently could not gather their different cars together for the return trip. Whoever had the arranging of this trip for the Acadians, should have made sure of his arrangements before he put our local organizations to all this trouble. Once having made their arrangements they should have strained a point to keep their engagements.

Owing to improvements made at the County Jail following the carding out some time ago by The Daily Mail, that institution is now doing a rushing business. There is a large increase in the number of boarders. While the board is awful and not in it with the Queen Hotel, for instance, none of the boarders leave until they are requested to do so.

New Brunswick did not get much of a look in for a start in regard to the Royal Commission. This province was passed over when the members were selected. This is getting away to a bad start.

There are two kinds of co-eds: those who are class conscious, and those who are conscious of class.

It may be just a coincidence, but you'll notice when the world is a mess the ladies wear hats to match it.

As we understand it, the idea of social security is to care for everybody except those who are too poor to make trouble.

COST OF

Pacific Railway in the southeast. There are 27,500 acres under irrigation near Taber, also in the south, and several smaller projects. There is no question but what irrigation will produce bumper wheat crops in the driest of years, such as has been experienced recently, but the cost has been largely prohibitive. It cost farmers in the Lethbridge Northern area $50 a year for water rights per acre, plus $5 a year for maintenance. The Province guaranteed the bonds to the extent of $5,000,000 and later was forced to go deeper into the scheme. Today the Government is involved to the extent of $10,000,000.

"The only solution appears to be to write this debt off," one informed observer said. "The whole history of irrigation proves the co-operative form is best. Where farmers run the scheme themselves they will see rents are collected."

On the other hand, farmers have harvested good crops where in six years others in the same year have not had a paying crop. It is predicted the best-paying crop since 1929 will be harvested on the Lethbridge Northern scheme, with some yields running as high as forty bushels to the acre. Last year irrigated land gave an average of twenty-four bushels of wheat to the acre, as against six bushels elsewhere in the district.

The Lethbridge Northern scheme has been of particular benefit to the sugar-beet farmers, and some 20,000 acres is under cultivation this year, with prospects of a ten-ton per acre yield. More than 3,000 are sown to canning and seed pea and bean crops.

MET LAST NIGHT

Routine business occupied the attention of the management of the Fredericton Exhibition, Ltd., in its weekly meeting last night. Various committees reported, and it was stated this morning that everything is progressing satisfactorily for the opening of the event on Sept. 11.

ONTARIO, Aug. 19—Premier Aberhart speaking yesterday at a Social Credit picnic stated that he and his government would continue to further the work of the Social Credit system which he claims has been the only possible remedy under existing conditions in Alberta.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—Max Schmeling, German heavyweight completed his fifth trans-Atlantic crossing yesterday. He conferred with Uncle Mike Jacobs about his fight with Joe Louis. The German fighter stated that Tommy Farr would be a walkover for the brown bomber.

ROME, Aug. 19—Military manoeuvres in Sicily have ended. Mussolini in a speech said that invasion of Sicily was impossible. However, the Italian premier stated that the military would further be strengthened. The King of Sicily reviewed the troops today and tomorrow Mussolini is to make a speech.

landings alone were valued at slightly more than $2,570,000 on the market, but all four Atlantic provinces share in the lobster fishery. Like the sardine, the lobster is largely used for canning, and Canadian canned lobster rates high in export markets as well as within the Dominion, but in recent years a big business in live lobsters has been developed with the United States.

Cod $3,000,000 Fish

The cod stands next to the lobster among Atlantic fisheries products, so far as annual marketed value is concerned. As a matter of fact, until a comparatively few years ago the cod was in first place. The 1936 catch amounted in value to $3,299,100 in round figures. Codfish is marketed in a number of different forms, but, mainly, fresh and dried. Canada has done a big export business in dried cod for a great many years, though the trade has suffered in re-
