Prepare to Fight Back
All Garden Enemies

Protection against insects and diseases in the garden should be quick and timely. Many attacks can be foretold, and defense organized in advance. You may expect the same insects to prey upon your crops that appeared last year, and should have a lethal dose waiting for them, instead of waiting until they have done considerable damage before you fight back.

A complete arsenal for garden defense consists of three materials, one to kill insects that suck plant juices, one to kill insects that eat plant tissues, a third to check attacks of fungus and other diseases. Another way to define these munitions of war is as follows:

Contact poisons, to kill sucking insects, such as nicotine sulphate, pyrethrum, and rotenone.

Stomach poisons, to kill leaf eating insects, such as arsenate of lead, calcium arsenate, or rotenone.

Fungicide, such as bordeaux mixture, dusting sulphur and lime-sulphur for some uses.

Nicotine and arsenic are poisonous, but the gardener who exercises reasonable care in their use incurs no danger. Rotenone and pyrethrum are gaining wide acceptance for spraying and dusting, because they are not poisonous to animals, but are deadly to insects. They are offered under various trade names, both for use in sprays and dusts. It is possible to obtain the other materials mentioned for use as both sprays and dusts, so the gardener may take his choice in the method of application.

Both methods have their advocates. On the whole dusting takes less time in preparation and requires less expensive tools. Spraying, on the other hand, is more effective for contact poisons, and is preferred by some in all cases.

ARAB WORLD
MAY JOIN BRITISH
BLOC OF NATIONS

LONDON, May 15. — Arab circles have said that if a settlement with Palestine Arabs is achieved through the British plan to be announced later this month it will be followed by an effort to bring the entire Arab world into line with the Anglo-French non-aggression front.

The plan would include Palestine, Britain's Near Eastern and East African colonies and dependencies, and Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Turkey and Iran.

Meanwhile Chaim Weizman, Zionist leader, arrived by air from Jerusalem yesterday and was received by Prime Minister Chamberlain and Malcolm MacDonald, Colonial Secretary. Weizman came here in an attempt to obtain postponement of the White Paper on Palestine and reconsideration of the British plan.

(In Jerusalem the Zionist Action Committee decided on a policy of passive resistance to the plan.)

Arabs expressed belief the proposed settlement would ensure peace in the Near East and clear the road for diplomatic reorganization. One step might be the extension of the Tehran accord of 1937 which linked Iran, Iraq, Turkey and Afghanistan in a mutual assistance agreement. They said talks have been in progress to expand this agreement to take in Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

The Near East was reported as showing lively interest in intensive British aerial preparations in Kenya Colony where Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham was sent as Governor to reorganize East African and Middle East Defences.

TO BRAZIL TO CUP OF COFFEE?

ROME, May 15 — Count Costanzo Ciano, president of the new chamber of Fascists and Corporations, announced today that no more coffee would be served at the Chamber bar because of a national shortage. The Senate was expected to follow suit.

Ciano's action came after an admonition to all Fascists by Achille Starace, Secretary General of the Fascist party to reduce coffee consumption radically if they did not stop drinking it entirely.

Fascists admitted that the supply of coffee was exhausted because Benito Mussolini was determined to

BRITISH PAPERS
O.K. STATEMENT

British newspapers praised the declaration by Mr. Chamberlain that any attempt to change the status of the Free City of Danzig by force and thereby "threaten Polish independence" would bring war.

The press also was pleased with the announcement that Britain had agreed to advance £5,000,000 credits to Rumania to offset dependence of that nation upon German armaments. The credits were expected to be used to purchase British armaments.

The Times (Independent) said the trade accord provides "a firmer basis for promoting Anglo-Russian trade and thus will help Rumania preserve the economic independence without which she could not long retain her political freedom."

The Times said the speech was "one of the most important he has ever delivered" and "it may be hoped it will attract at least as much attention everywhere as the much-heralded speeches of leaders of other nations."

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) commented that the German Government now had no excuse for misunderstanding Britain's position and attacked the "German propaganda machine" for "disseminating the most fantastic nonsense about our policy."

It was "permissible to doubt whether in the long run peace can be preserved if the Nazis are minded to keep Europe under a perpetual nervous strain and are prevented from embarking on some cherished aggression only by fear of the resistance they will meet," The Telegraph added.

carry out his national self-sufficiency campaign and would not permit any further exodus of gold for what he calls dispensable luxuries. The shortage is a severe blow to Italians. Many persons are unable to buy coffee at all. Some cafes have stopped dispensing coffee, and coffee bootleggers are beginning to appear.

As soon as it was known that Countess Edda Ciano, daughter of Mussolini and wife of Count Galeazzo Ciano, Foreign Minister (the son of Count Costanzo Ciano) had left for a visit to Brazil, was circulated the report that she had gone to get a cup of coffee.

MORE EVIDENCE
INSANITY NOT HEREDITY

CHICAGO, May 15 — New evidence that insanity is not inheritable was announced before the American Psychiatric Association.

Until recently it was believed that the children of families which have a history of insanity are likely to acquire one of the various mental diseases. Dr. Horatio Pollock and Dr. Benjamin Maizberg of the New York State Department of Mental Health declared.

However, an intensive study of 300 patients at state asylums and of their parents, brothers and sisters, and other relatives failed completely to show that the diseases followed any patterns which hold true for physical characteristics.

The New York psychiatrists said they set out to prove that the rule of like father, like son is true but could not. The failure casts doubt on the supposition that persons who have, or have had, insane relatives are predisposed to mental disease, they declared.

They studied, as far as the families would permit, the records of 175 patients with dementia praecox — the split personality disease — and 155 patients with extreme mental depression.

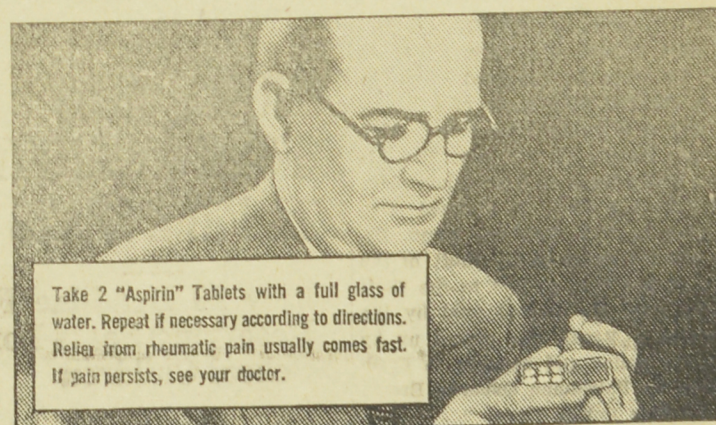

"According to the old rule we should have found definite ratios according to the Mendelian law of heredity but this requirement could not be met in our family data," they reported.

It is a grave mistake to infer that the transmission of mental disease from generation to generation is a fatalistic process, Dr. Pollock declared, since the environment in which a person grows is just as important as his heredity.

"There must not only be a seed but a ground in which to plant the seed," he explained. "Inferior stock may still enable, through proper nurture, to achieve a life of a fair degree of usefulness. On the other hand we know that even the soundest of stock may succumb to the repeated onslaught of an unfavorable environment."
