

ARE OUR YOUNG PEOPLE SELFISH AND DISCOURTEOUS?

Disregard For Others Seems To Be Custom Of the Present Day

One might naturally expect from old by the young, and in the treatment of the weaker sex by the stronger.

In these matters it is only too plain that social relations are characterized by thoughtlessness and selfishness. So far as concerns the treatment of women by men, and especially of young women by young men, it is unfortunately only too true that the weaker sex are themselves largely to blame. If they showed by their social manner that they expected consideration and polite treatment they would generally receive it. In their eagerness to have what they call the freedom of conduct that men practice they get into a position where they are not getting the courtesies that men ought to show to women, and men are forgetting that they have a duty in that matter.

It is to this gradual change in the social relations between men and women that we may, in part at least, ascribe the very marked lowering of tone which characterizes now the ordinary gatherings of men and women. The manners of the ordinary social party now are as lacking in real manly courtesy towards women as the roughest gatherings of uneducated people used formerly to be. This is not a gain, but a loss; and the worst of it is that many young people seem to feel that it is a gain, and not a loss. The good manners and courteous consideration which were seen in social gatherings not very long ago, were a healthy reaction from an age, when women were despised and not respected; and nothing is more certain than that history often repeats itself and that respect for women is, under relaxed and ill-mannered customs, again growing less.

The effects of selfishness are still more regrettably shown in the treatment of the old, or elderly, by the young. Society is built upon the home. Without courtesy there is no such thing as good manners; and when it is not practised in the home, it is very unlikely to be practiced anywhere else. The lack of courtesy and consideration from children to their parents is not only regrettable; it is often disgraceful. Again, let the blame be divided fairly. Many parents have themselves to blame.

Having done all in their power to make their children selfish, by spoiling them, they must take their share of the blame, and a large share it is. The mushiness of parents over their children, the secondhand self gratification they find in the spoiling of them, make us wonder how it is that the children are not even more selfish than they are; for from infancy they have been spoiled, indulged, allowed their own way discussed before their faces and praised in their own hearing; have had their smallest wishes gratified at once and even anticipated before they knew what they wished. It is small wonder that they think only of themselves, ahead of their parents and of everyone else.

They are self-struck young nuisances, made so in many cases by their own parents. They should be taught in school if it is not too late, that pleasure can be meanly got and meanly enjoyed; and that when so got, and so enjoyed, it is not at its best and is not satisfying. The young are now in daily fear that, if they stop to think of others, they will lose a moment of enjoyment for themselves. They go after pleasure as to a rush bargain counter; they shoulder in they elbow out and after a while they find there is something wrong; that they are not having as good a time as they expected; but they never realize that the fault is in themselves and in their selfish ways.

BIG BUSINESSMEN

AVERAGE $31,750

WASHINGTON, June 6—A $31,750 pay check was shown in Security Commission reports today to have gone in 1934 to the average chief executive of an industrial corporation substantial enough to list its securities on a stock exchange.

Nearly 80 per cent of such executives received less than $50,000. Seven hundred and seventy have reported their earnings to the commission. Last year they received an aggregate of $24,480,972.

Of the 771, a total of 172 executives received $50,000 or more. The range of payments was from a few hundred dollars to $365,000.

Some 2,000 more corporations have yet to file salary information, but it was not expected the additional filings will greatly affect the $31,750 average.

Of the 172 executives receiving $50,000 or more, 118 were paid between $50,000 and $75,000; 29 between $75,000 and $100,000, and 25 over $100,000.

Thomas J. Watson, New York, president International Business Machine Corp., received the highest total, $365,358 in salary and bonus.

A LITTLE COMPANY GROWN BIG

IMPERIAL OIL was a little Company in 1880. There was then only a handful of employees. A dozen or so products were the Company's stock in trade.

Today nearly 18,000 Canadian men and women are engaged in making and selling 714 different Imperial Oil Products. So, counting their families, there are about 90,000 people directly dependent for livelihood on this Company and its operations. 90,000 is a lot of Canadians.

Imperial Oil's growth depended upon more than growth in population and demand. Fair dealing, honest value and the ability to meet new needs with new products and new services all played their part. Of course a loyal, capable staff was indispensable. Such a staff was built up by fair and considerate treatment. Good wages, sickness and death benefits, retirement pensions, group insurance, industrial councils—these are some of the measures by which the Company has recognized its responsibility to the men and women in its employ. These men and women have recognized in turn their responsibility to the Company. By loyal, whole-hearted service they have helped it to make better products at lower cost and thus become "a big company."
