HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF

EXERCISE

Every summer, a number of men enquire from us as to the desirability or otherwise of golf. Although many women are devotees of the game, they do not seem to worry, to the same extent as do the men, about golf as a form of exercise.

Most men seem to think it either necessary or desirable for them to indulge in some form of strenuous exercise. In many cases, their pride prompts them to show that they are as active as they were ten or twenty years ago. In general, women accept their age much more graciously than do men.

There is nothing peculiar about golf excepting to those who do not play!
It is a form of recreation which brings the individual to walk in the open air, to relax, to enjoy the company of others, and to gain personal satisfaction through improving his skill at the game.

There are some, however, who play at golf without deriving any relaxation or satisfaction. They are angry with themselves and irritable with everyone else. To take a stroke above the average spoils the day for them, interferes with their sleep and makes them generally unhappy.

Whether it is a question of golf, bridge or any other form of recreation it is best to give it up if it is found to control the player; it then ceases to be recreation.

A fairly safe guide, but not an absolutely reliable one, is that exercise which can be taken in comfort is good for the individual. After the age of forty, if is, in all cases, desirable to have a health examination at intervals in order to receive personal guidance in this important matter of suitable exercise.

Many men worry about their hearts.
One type of man goes on playing strenuously as if to prove thereby that his heart is all right; another fears any and all forms of exertion. There are several forms of heart disease and each individual who suffers from any one of these conditions requires medical supervision.

Exercise does not damage the health heart, but physical exertion may reveal the fact that the heart is damaged. Broadly speaking, the proper kind of exercise improves the heart and is used as a form of treatment, in certain cases, to help to restore the heart.

BOSTON, August 30—Tennis authorities the country over have been counting ten over Texas Wilmer Allison as far as future Davis Cup competition is concerned. They have been claiming ever since the Davis Cup matches the veteran's once deadly volleying lacks the crispness of former years.

SHERIFF'S SALE

me directed and issued out of the Supreme Court whereby I am commanded
