Student Praises
Eminent Teacher

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 10—Tribute to the late Sir William Osler, the great Canadian who has been called the first physician of the world, was paid by Dr. Lewellys F. Barker, Baltimore, in delivering the Osler Oration at the joint meeting of the American and Canadian medical associations.

Speaking before the section on the practice of medicine, Dr. Barker, student under Osler and now emeritus professor at Johns Hopkins University, reviewed his illustrious teacher's life from his birth in Bondhead, Ontario, in 1849, to his departure for England in 1905 to become professor at Oxford.

"No physician who has dwelt among us more than William Osler deserves to be classed with the 'immortals'—his memory will surely be cherished and revered during the generations to come," Dr. Barker said.

"Osler was a man of diverse interests and according to those who knew him, he illuminated all that he touched. As a research student he made many original investigations, notably on the parasites in pork that cause the disease called trichinosis, malaria, typhoid and tuberculosis," he continued. "Moreover he interested himself in the public health aspects of these conditions and helped to start the movements that have made them comparatively rare diseases. More obscure conditions attracted his attention and at least two diseases bear his name because of his assiduous work on them."

Dr. Barker described the organizations of teaching by Osler at Johns Hopkins which was the model after which the present methods of teaching medicine have been developed. He it was who put students into the wards to learn of disease by actual study of the sick.

Private practice was a small part of Osler's life, but as his reputation grew he was called on more and more. The burden of his work in addition to his teaching was one of the reasons he left Baltimore for Oxford. Dr. Barker said. In this connection Dr. Barker remarked that although Osler did not use psychotherapeutic measures as they are known today, he was an excellent "intuitive psychotherapist," realizing that "the inspiration of confidence and the instillation of hope can often be more effective than physic."

In the midst of his multitudinous activities Osler wrote several books, some of which were still classics as textbooks, and no less than 730 articles on a wide range of subjects. Some of his philosophical essays were among the most treasured literature of physicians today, Dr. Barker said.

Dr. Barker ended his tribute with a picture of Osler, the man. His personal qualities endeared him to all, and inspired the loyalty, the devotion and the affection of those who knew him and especially those who worked with him.

MAY REFINANCE ONTARIO BONDS,
TO SAVE PROVINCE ANNUAL TOTAL OF THIRTY MILLION DOLLARS

Legislation Expected At Autumn Session of the Ontario Government

TORONTO, July 13—Elated with the success of his initial 20-million dollar, over-the-counter bond issue, Premier Mitchel F. Hepburn is toying with the idea of introducing legislation at the Autumn session which would permit him to refinance Ontario bond issues at present cheap interest rates even before they have matured.

The Ontario Treasury Department is making a survey of outstanding Ontario issues and studying the possibility of retiring them for other issues paying lower rates of interest. In many cases Ontario bonds bear interest as high as 5½ per cent. Premier Hepburn believes that these should be called by the province and re-sold to the public at present low rates.

While the maturity dates on these bonds will not occur until 1946, 1948, and 1949, there is a clause in them which makes them callable at par at any time the government desires. Thus there could be no suggestion of repudiation if Premier Hepburn was to call them in, in the near future, if he is able to retire them by the sale of other Ontario bonds bearing very low rates of interest.

The difficulty confronting the Ontario government in respect to such a policy is the effect it would have upon the entire Ontario bond situation. The issues bearing high interest rates are selling far above par with the result that the yield upon them is not very different from more recently marketed Ontario debentures.

Those who purchased these bonds above par would have to take a small loss on them, but the government is said to take the opinion that this could hardly be blamed on the administration should the latter undertake to retire them.

The highest selling bonds outstanding are those bearing 5½ per cent, which mature in 1946. The present market price of this issue is between $112.75 and $114.25. This would probably be the first to receive attention should Premier Hepburn determine to call them in at par in accordance with the terms of sale.

Of Ontario's outstanding bonds just over $260,000,000 bears interest at 5 per cent or over. There are two small issues of $15,000,000 each which bear interest at 6 per cent. These were put out by the Drury Government when money was scarce following the tightening effects felt in all countries immediately after the war.

If the government could finance any large portion of these bonds at present low interest rates, it would mean a tremendous saving in what have hitherto been "fixed charges" of the province.

The interest charges paid by the Ontario and the Hydro Electric Power Commission on capital expenditures represented in the 260 million dollars of outstanding Ontario bonds bearing interest at more than 5 per cent, amounts to over $60,000,000 annually.

If Premier Hepburn could successfully call these bonds at par at the present time and redeem them with sums raised by new issues at present low rates, a saving of $30,000,000 a year could be made without adding one cent to the capital debt of the province.

It is with the possibilities of such a scheme that Premier Hepburn is now studying. The total debt of the province for which there are outstanding debenture issues was $652,077,094 at the close of the last fiscal year. Over half of this sum represents capital expenditures made by the Hydro Electric Power Commission which pays the government interest for sums advanced through sale of such bonds.

With almost half the total outstanding obligations of the government paying interest at over 5 per cent Premier Hepburn realizes $30,000,000 could be saved if these bonds were redeemed and refinanced by new loans at existing rates between 2 and 3 per cent.

The saving of $30,000,000 a year would pay the complete costs of operating the Ontario Government for six months out of every year. That is the feature which appeals to Premier Hepburn.

Its possibilities will be publicly discussed by Premier Hepburn when he commences his coast-to-coast tour in the coming general election.

GIVING OUR VISITORS A SQUARE DEAL

Hon. A. S. MacMillan, Minister of Highways in the Nova Scotia government, is making a special appeal to the people of Nova Scotia by means of large space advertisements in the newspapers, asking for co-operation in the cultivation of the tourist industry. This may be regarded as an appeal to the enlightened self-interest of the people, for as the tourist trade prospers, the reflex influence thereof will be felt by everyone in the country. The interests which most directly benefit by the tourist trade are those which provide transportation, accommodation and services of various sorts and, of course, shopkeepers. It is of the utmost importance to these classes of our population that the travel industry should be greatly enlarged, and the rest of the population will share indirectly in their good fortune. But customers must always be well satisfied to be kept in a good humour and disposed to give the favourable word-of-mouth advertising that is so valuable. Hence the importance of everyone assuming that attitude towards visitors which will leave them with a favourable impression. So the people are being asked to do all they can to keep their properties and their communities in attractive condition, to be friendly, helpful, and hospitable towards all visitors, to watch for and help to check any tendency to "hold up" the visitor through the charging of unreasonably high prices, to support and actively help the local associations that seek to develop the business locally, in short to do everything they can to make visitors sorry to leave, glad to send their friends, eager to come again. What goes for Nova Scotia goes for the Maritimes generally. The people ought to support the efforts of their respective governments in whatever way they can in order that the tourist traffic may be permanent, ever increasing and profitable. Store keepers have a very special interest in this matter. Likewise they have a very special opportunity to back up the appeal of the government by talking the matter over with their customers. If every merchant were to say a few words on the subject to every customer from time to time, how tremendously more effective the government's campaign could be made.
