WHAT'S BREWING IN DEUTSCHLAND?

General Ludendorff, in his seventies now, has been popping out of retirement with weird interviews and strange speeches, of the kind that presage a bid for public office, early publicity for a book of memoirs or the desire to appear mad in a world that's rather gone that way. Ludendorff wants it known that he's a pagan, hates the Jews, and thinks that only a Prussian of the blood-and-iron type should be at the helm of Germany's ship of State. Ludwig, in his biography of Hindenburg, painted Ludendorff as the real brains of the German High Command in wartime, and "Hindy" as a bluff old duffer who looked the part, and was willing to take both credit and blame for Ludendorff's plots and plans. Ludwig gave us the idea that the Kaiser fairly hated the sight of Ludendorff, and was really ousted from Germany under Ludendorff's cunning machinations; but, then, Ludwig is a German Jew, and no doubt thoroughly despised the lot of them. Bernard Newman, an English writer, and one-time war spy, in his recent book, "Secret Servant", plays up Ludendorff as the shadowy master-mind behind all the recent goings-on in Germany, and Hitler as his acolyte ready to step aside for his master when the opportune moment comes. Is it that, or are both of them working for the ultimate return of a Hohenzollern?

A New-Found People

In that Australian, part known as Papua of the vast island of New Guinea, a new people, numbering some 100,000, has been discovered, to the amazement of anthropologists. This people secluded on plateau walled off by limestone cliffs amid a mountainous country, dwell amid fertility and in a state of idyllic contentment, and are of an organ unguessed and unknown.

It seems a pity that this Lost Tribe should have been discovered. It lived on unknown to the rest of the world and the rest of the world was unknown to it. Could not these people have survived unrevealed and been saved from the benefits of civilization and progress? But being discovered, what must be their fate?

Though they have everything they have needed, they will be urged to acquire riches, and though they do not know impoverishment, they will suffer poverty. They farm with wooden spades, as they hew timber exactly square with wooden axes, but must be induced to buy spades and mowing machines and steel axes and gradually be caught in the dragnet of modern exporting and importing, of tariffs and blights. They move only at the rate of the fleetness of the foot, but will be abjured to ride at 300 miles an hour and to fly at 400. They live ideally, without worries, but will be expected to adopt progressive methods so that their morals, which may be impeccable, shall be imbued by the ethics of the known world.

Or, having found these people, so content though so backward, so self-contained because so self-complete, why could not civilization take its lesson from them, rather than insist that they destroy their unimpaired in-

HICKS SAYS NOVEMBER COLD AND STORMY

A Hicks from Nova Scotia, forecast a pleasant fair October, and we had it. For November he is far less favorably inclined, November 1935, he states in the Eastern Chronicle, will be cold and stormy above the average. Especially will this be true in the northerly parts. Several wind storms of tornadoic fury will be the order as the vast low pressure areas move from west to east. Some few local hailstorms will also visit the portion swept by these storms which usually occur on the southwestern flanks of the low pressure areas. While these tropical features are at work in the southern parts on the northwestern flanks storms of a frigid nature will be at work, bringing snow sleet, blizzards. Think of it! All at the same time and in the same storm areas, tornadoes, hailstorms, thunderstorms together with snow, sleet, blizzards moving in one trainlike order! Much fog and rain will add to the discomforts of those living in parts of the country subject to such visitations. Notwithstanding these things many parts of the country that are isolated from the paths of regular storm movements will have their usual absence of storms.

November 2 to 6.—Heavy rain and thunder will probably come in the southern part of the country while some heavy snows will likely come in the north. A cold wave will originate in the northwest by the 2nd. This wave will travel south and east up to the 8th. Clearing and colder weather will come to many places at this period, while in other parts the weather will continue unsettled. Always bear in mind that while the western parts of the country are having the worst of a storm period, the eastern sections generally speaking, are having fair weather, and vice versa.

November 8 to 17.—This will likely be a severe storm period. The north will probably have some of the worst snow storms of the season. Heavy gales on the Pacific coast. Great Lakes and north Atlantic will be laden with ice sleet and heavy snow squalls. A cold wave that has been raging for some time or since the 15th will break southeastward from the 17th to 20th.

November 20 to 24.—Rain south and snow north will be the most notable things to expect in this period. Change to milder at the beginning and to colder at the end of this period will be the natural order of these disturbances and changes. Clearing and colder up to the 25th generally. It is likely that some hard winter storms will appear on the seas and Great Lakes. Whatever the conditions are the regular order of storminess will be carried out reaching the western parts several days before reaching the east.

November 25 to 30.—This also will likely be a severe storm period. Certain phases of the moon and the combined influence of certain other planets would indicate very severe weather changes. Following a mild spell some very severe snow storms will be experienced. A very cold wave is due to organize on the 29th, and pass from the west to the east into December. This will be a very cold wave over much of the country in general. According to this Mr. Hicks November is to be a "humdinger".

Bees and Tartaric

Beekkeepers are continually being advised to add a small amount of tartaric acid to sugar syrup when feeding such syrup to bees as winter stores, states the progress report for 1930-31-32 of the Bee Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture. The claims made for the use of tartaric acid are that it prevents the dividuality. Why not, in other words, regain what we have lost, instead of compelling them to gain what perhaps, the world is beginning to fear it might better have long lost?

Who dare say which would be the better? Whether it would be kinder to lead these new-found isolated people into our ways, or for us to retrace our steps to theirs? The suggestion mortifies our progressive state of mind, but it must appeal to multitudes who, though civilized, would dearly love to enjoy the comfort, the security, and the immunity from social catastrophes enjoyed by this primitive people amid the valleys they fill and reap.

Perhaps we dream, and know too well that what civilization has lost for the world in all the gain it has secured for it, cannot be so readily relinquished, and civilized man, caught in the mesh of the machine he has constructed, must whirl on and be whirled on. But why in the name of humanity, embroil these primitive people who have just been discovered Why? not let them be?

DOGS CAN SKIP MEAT IN DIET

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—You can forget about Fido's dinner the next time you go to the corner butcher shop, for dogs do not need fresh raw meat, according to an article on the meat shortage by Leon F. Whitney in the November issue of the American Kennel Gazette, official magazine of the American Kennel Club, governing body of pure-bred dogs in the United States. Although the dog's natural food is fresh raw meat, he receives the same nourishment in a variety of other food items on some of which he thrives even better.

"We are confronted with a condition, not a theory," writes Mr. Whitney, "and the condition is that nearly every dog breeder believes, rightly or wrongly, that his dogs must have fresh meat, and meat is scarce and mighty expensive. So breeders and dog owners in general are wondering if there is any way to beat the meat shortage. They are asking how they can cut down on the amount of fresh meat they can feed, and still maintain their dogs in good condition."

"The truth is that a dog doesn't absolutely need any meat at all, to say nothing of fresh raw meat. What can we do to eliminate the raw, lean meat from our feeding regime? Simply use other animal and vegetable protein, or beef dehydrated. The meat packers have many grades of beef scrap in general. But a few offer for sale products made by the vacuum process from which about the only thing that has been removed is the fat, which is pressed out. Such dehydrated meat is most excellent dog food, and is used in most of the better grade dehydrated dog foods on the market today, which is one of the reasons why they give such gratifying results when used in place of raw meat."

"But in my estimation, after many tests and study of all the available comparative tests, fish is fully as good for dogs as is meat. Of course, dogs do not readily take to it, but once they learn to they love it. How do I know? Well, during the past three years my dogs have been in splendid condition. My bloodhounds, five generations of which have been raised without a morsel of fresh meat, are ready for their job of man tracking any time."

re-granulation of the syrup and assists the bees to invert the sugar. At the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, a considerable amount of sugar has been fed to bees every winter without adding tartaric acid and without any apparent injurious effect on the bees. Further, from the results of an experiment carried out during the three years, it would appear to be unnecessary to add acid or any other agent to a solution of two parts sugar and one part water as winter food for bees. The main feature of the experiment was that in no case where a straight solution of sugar and water was given to the bees did the solution recrystallize in the combs, and the inversion of sugar was as equally progressive as

FORESEES SULKY IN BIG REVIVAL

NEW YORK, N. Y., October 31.—The $50,000,000 enterprise which is the American harness turf, looks back on its best season in ten years, with indications 1936 will witness an extended Grand Circuit embracing cities from coast to coast, increased private ownership for personal matinee racing and greater public acclaim over the comeback of the sulky sport.

The swan song of the 1935 Roaring Grand, in the Kentucky Blue Grass, proved such a success this Fall that another year is expected to see the big time harness loop both pushed up earlier in the season and pushed on further in the Fall, with top-flight horses campaigning in California and other western states.

New enthusiasm appears in several guises, according to E. Roland Hariman, president of the Grand Circuit. This year saw more horses raced, richer purses offered, more days of competition and much greater crowds than in a decade. More horses changed hands and at higher figures. Yearling sales are definitely up, with the Old Glory Sale this fall in New York certain to equal if not surpass the boom 1929 year.

Rosalind was the year's stand-out performer among juveniles and Lawrence Hanover gave Greyhound his toughest competition for honors in the three-year-old class.

Crowned Crack Trotter

Rosalind, crowned the crack two-year-old trotter this season, looms up as the winter book favorite for the 1936 Hambletonian Stake. Stepping the fastest half and quarter mile chalked up this year by a performer of her age, Rosalind, owned by Gibson White of Lexington, copped the $5,000 Junior Futurity here in straight heats timed in 2:05 1-2 and 2:03.

In winter books on the Hambletonian already being made up, Rosalind by Scotland, is easily first choice for the trotting derby, with Rosette and Ruth M. Mack rated next. Winning six times and losing only two, Rosalind's record compares favorably with that of Greyhound's when he was a youngster last year when he accounted for seven victories with two defeats.

Greyhound, too lame to risk starting in the $14,000 Kentucky Futurity, which would have been his ninth parade to the post this season, did not suffer one defeat all this year, accounting for eight straight victories in as many starts. That makes him tops on the harness turf. But in Lawrence Hanover, winner of the Kentucky Futurity, Greyhound had a worthy rival in the opinion of all keen observers of the sport. They will battle each other again in 1936. At that time both are expected to lower their records well under two minutes, with Sep Palin more than likely going out with Greyhound to beat Peter Manning's world mark of 1:56 3-4 set in 1921.

with the tartaric solution, showing that the bees required no assistance so far as the inversion of sugar was concerned.

It pays to advertise in The Daily Mail.

Restless Nights - Peppless Days Take the Joy Out of Life

The potent cause lies in the hurried life we lead, in the extreme nervous tension and fever heat with which we follow in the pursuit of wealth, position and pleasure.

Late hours, want of necessary rest, excessive mental or physical exertion all put a strain on the system it is unable to withstand. No wonder then you pass restless nights and get up in the morning with no ambition to go about your daily tasks.

Take Milburn's H. & N. Pills and see what they will do for you.
