STANLEY DOUGLASS

Everyone who knew Stanley Douglass will learn with regret of his accidental death this morning under tragic circumstances. Mr. Douglass has for several years held a prominent place in the business life of this city and other parts of the community. He was a kindly gentleman, a good husband and father and an excellent citizen. During the past few years Mr. Douglass and his family have had their share of trouble. The sympathy of the community will be extended to them in this their latest bereavement.

LLOYD GEORGE'S NEW DEAL

Politics in Britain is shaping for a duel between Neville Chamberlain and Lloyd George. Mr. Chamberlain stands for middle conservatism, and is really the controlling force in the Conservative Party machine. Mr. Lloyd George has stood aloof from politics for three years, and now re-enters the arena as an old public servant, freed from party ties, bent only on stirring the politicians to more strenuous constructive action.

Neville Chamberlain is a purist in finance and somewhat bureaucratic. The latter would cut the traces with the past when epast methods have failed, and fake bold experiments in the light of common sense. Mr. Chamberlain has been the incarnation of that stubborn orthodoxy and carefulness which rescued Great Britain from the reckless finance of the Socialists three and a half years ago. Mr. Lloyd George has given new inspiration to those who are insisting that the time for extreme caution and orthodoxy is over and that the nation now needs an attack all along the line on the evil of unemployment.

The campaign which Lloyd George has opened is not an attack upon the Government as such. It is a demand for a new program of action, he himself offering his support to any Government or any group of politicians which will accept his method of grappling with unemployment. It is the method which he has always advocated; it is similar to that of President Roosevelt, though he was urging it long before Mr. Roosevelt was President.

Six years ago, when asking, as he is now, that there should be large expenditure of public money on useful public works that would absorb the unemployed, he was ridiculed by Conservatives. But now the situation has changed. The need of the country is greater, and money is cheaper. There are many Conservatives in Parliament who believe that the planning and re-equipment of industry is needed both to improve its permanent organization and to give work to the unemployed. They believe that it is better to spend money on public works that are economically sound than to spend it, without any return, on doles. These Conservatives, therefore, no less than Liberals, have been cheered by Mr. Lloyd George's stirring campaign, and have informed their party chiefs of their resolve that he should have a hearing.

In his opening speeches Lloyd George has not claimed that he has given an exhaustive statement of the details of his program. He has suggested that there is urgent need of expenditure on schemes to electrify railways in urban areas, to house the working classes, to improve the roads to drain land, to co-ordinate water supplies, and to recondition the land and the farms for agriculture. These are preliminary suggestions, but to explore the possibilities to the utmost he demands the appointment of a body of businessmen and economists who would make a comprehensive survey of what is needed to re-equip the country for the purposes of industry, agriculture and transport.

His speeches, delivered with his unflinching energy, have made a profound impression. The Government at first pooh-poohed them. Then, under the pressure of public opinion, it became more respected. Now the Prime Minister has written to Mr. Lloyd George asking him to transmit the details of the plans which he has prepared, and promising the Cabinet's careful consideration of them. The issue will next have to be debated within the Cabinet. It will have to decide whether it will repose on the orthodox policy of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, or whether it will swing round toward the methods of Mr. Lloyd George. If it takes a middle course, and no more, it will have to face severe criticism from its own backbenchers and the formidable attacks of the most powerful platform orators in the country.

O. K. O. KAYED?

After a struggle of about eighty years, O. K. has achieved social recognition. The Judicial Committee of the British Privy Council has not only recognized its existence, and that it has a meaning. It has done more, much more, than this. It has told the world precisely what that meaning is.

Faced by these cryptic letters on certain documents in a recent lawsuit, the Privy Council determined, after exhaustive deliberation, that the phrase meant the details in the papers under examination were correctly given. The decision may be taken as O. K.

Words and phrases in the English language have many anxieties unknown, for example, to the component parts of French. Any French word knows perfectly well whether it has been accepted as a worthy member of the standard language. On that point the authority of the Academy is supreme. There is no such authority to decide matters like these in English. That is why it is important for English slang words and phrases with social ambitions to get themselves used by people in responsible situations.

Yet even now its future is not beyond doubt. Many locations favored by high authority, even by authority by high authority, given by authority failed to secure final approval. Thomas Hardy used industriously to split his infinitives; but there still remains a preference for infinitives that are undivided.

Thus there is still time for O. K. to be linguistically reversed; to be in fact, K. O.'d. But at the moment one offers it one's respectful congratulations, tempered by a certain caution as to what may happen in the future on its having moved up in the world.

SNAPSHOTS

Women who formerly went to Saint John to patronize a certain line of business can now be served in our own home town.

When you are thinking about spring shopping do not forget the "Home-Owned Stores" whether our home merchants remain in business or not depends upon your support. Are you going to let your home town merchant drop out and give his place to mail order houses who send your money away.

Our radio service on Sunday was just as bad as on the previous Sunday. Local people who wished to get outside points were again only able to get CFNB and the Canadian broadcasting connections. The attention of the Saint John office has been called to it. Local radio authorities claim that the St. John men blame it on the Maritime Electric system.

If radio fans are to be confined to one station then the sooner that they know this the better. The Daily Mail has been giving the public a radio programme each day. On Saturday this paper publishes a programme for Sunday also. It is not our fault if the public can get only our local station. Ask those who are employed by the government to clear these things up.

Not until home lessons start will the Dionne girls fully realize the advantages of being quintuplets.

In spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to the thought that Jean Harlow is free again.

DEER SLAYING

Grand Falls, N. B.,
March 22nd, 1935.

The Editor Mail,
Fredericton, N. B.

Dear Sir,

We would be glad if you would publish the brief remarks we have been asked to communicate in reference to the illegal deer slaying that has been taking place recently in the Counties of Victoria and Madawaska. It is regrettable that publicity of this nature had to appear in our press and of such recognition that necessitated comment when this condition could have been prevented had the department, responsible for this administration, given our suggestions and reports serious consideration in the proper time which would have saved thousands of dollars for the revenues of our Province, and been in the interest of our Sportsmen's Industry.

Since the active inception of our branch three years ago we have given the department every co-operation and detailed reports every winter of the existing conditions in this locality which, apparently, they did not believe until however we did impress upon them last winter the urgent need of action and representatives of the department were dispatched here to investigate and after remaining three or four days returned to Fredericton, and we were advised, reported conditions were quite satisfactory when deer were being illegally slaughtered by the hundreds.

We cannot understand their attitude in this respect when the expenses of such useless investigations have cost what would have employed a Game Warden for two months, and would no doubt have prevented the results that have just occurred and saved this additional expense on extra Wardens now in rounding up these violators, all of which represents about one third of the actual destruction. When you realize the public monies expended each year through the Provincial Publicity Bureau and in the interests of the Boston Sportsmen's Show to invite our American friends to take advantage of our game industry no wonder they ask: "Why do you want us to come to New Brunswick when all the game is allowed to be slaughtered in the winter months?" These people are wise and surely the department must realize this considering the reception the Provincial representative received at the last show.

We are glad our efforts at last have aroused public opinion to the extent of putting this department into action and that it may continue to give the efficient service for which it was organized. Further dereliction of the department, in this respect, should not be tolerated.

Assuring you of our co-operation at all times in the interest of the preservation of our game and in anticipation of Governmental support to prevent any similar occurrences, we are

Yours very truly,
Grand Falls Branch N. B. Fish and Game Protective Association
W. V. Powers, Secretary.

Four Big Developments Expected from Changes

cated by the budget announcement that the Dominion Government was considering assistance to the provinces in refunding their debts.

From Quebec City came Premier L. A. Taschereau's stamp of approval on the liquor excise cut. He said it would "tend to curb bootlegging."

In Ontario, a liquor board official estimated that a month would be required before the price reduction—from 35 to 50 cents a bottle—would go into effect because present stocks must be disposed of.

Will Be Passed Along

R. J. Dinning, chairman of the Alberta Board, said in Edmonton, that the reductions would be passed along, but did not estimate the amount.

In Vancouver, British Columbia board officials waited further details, but believed the decrease would be 75 cents a reputed quart.

The Quebec chairman, L. B. Cordeau, said in Montreal, that the consumer would benefit by the cut, but old stocks would first be disposed of.

Earle Scott of the Consolidated Distillers, Toronto, and Fletcher Ruark, secretary-treasurer of Hiram Walker and Sons, Ltd., Walkerville, said the bootleg trade would suffer and a chance to compete with United States firms would result.

Seagrams Ltd., officials in Waterloo, Ont., expected price reductions of 25 cents a bottle, while L. D. Sinclair, general manager of Gooderham and Worts, Toronto, said the approximate reduction would be 50 cents on a 26-ounce bottle.

Discontinuance of the gold tax was described as a "fine thing for the mines of Ontario" by the province's Minister of Mines, Hon. Paul Leduc.

Change For Best

In British Columbia the general opinion was reported as finding the change for the best. A. E. Bull, secretary-treasurer of the Pioneer Gold Mines of C. C. Ltd., said the new system "provides a tax more squarely on profits and is therefore much fairer."

G. C. Bateman, secretary of the Ontario Mining Association Toronto, said discontinuance of the gold tax would have a beneficial effect upon mining companies and that he had no criticism to offer regarding a change in the depletion allowance.

D. L. H. Forbes, president of Teck-Hughes Gold Mines, Ltd., Toronto, said the tax had been wrong in principle and that 13 companies would benefit by its discontinuance. He added that the depletion allowance changes would affect big shareholders seriously.

There will be 20 reporters from newspapers outside Montreal present and eight telegraph lines for their convenience have already been placed in a room close to the chamber where the session will take place.

RESERVE THURSDAY NIGHT

On Thursday evening next the friends of the Conservative party will gather at the Oddfellows' Hall at eight o'clock, where a smoker and general good time will be held. Premier Tilley and Hon. D. A. Stewart, Minister of Public Works will address the gathering. There will be other speakers. Cut this reader out and stick it in your hat.

HALIFAX, March 25—Accompanied by his pair of "water skis" and plans to walk across the English Channel, Louis Emil Friedrich Walther, 41-year-old German war veteran, left Halifax tonight in the Cunard White Star liner Alaulia, bound on a great adventure which he says, will prove man's mastery of the sea.

Herr Walther, who has strolled along Montreal harbor and crossed the Detroit River from Windsor to Detroit on his waterproof, inflated boots, does not think the current infested choppy waters of the Channel will affect his progress.

And as for heavy seas, he laughs with a nifty glint in his eyes and says, "why I like rough water."

His "skis" were perfected by two years of hard work and $3,000 capital. Weighing 55 pounds, they resemble airplane pontoons more than anything else.
