W. A. LOUDOUN

Many friends of W. A. Loudoun, Comptroller-General of the province, will regret to learn of his serious illness and will hope for his early recovery.

Mr. Loudoun's duties at the present time are necessarily heavy and exacting. He has been in his present position for several years and is looked upon as a capable and worthy official, popular with all parties and with the public generally.

MARITIME RIGHTS

When the railway commission met at Moncton yesterday Joseph Sedgwick, K.C., representing the province of Ontario, threw a monkey wrench into the machinery. According to his contention the province of Ontario is out to destroy the Maritime Freight Rates Act.

It is up to the Maritime Provinces to fight Ontario to a finish on this affair. The scrapping of the Maritime Freight Rates Act will work incalculable injury to this part of Canada. The decision of the court will hold even greater interest for people of the Maritime Provinces, now that Ontario has made an appearance before the court.

Ontario counsel opposing an application before the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada created a sensation by flatly declaring that the Maritime Freight Rates Act was unconstitutional. The "preliminary objection" came from Joseph Sedgwick, K.C., representing the Ontario department of agriculture at the hearing of the Maritime Transportation Commission's application for a reduction in potato rates.

"I am a little afraid to answer my friend now," responded C. J. Burchell, K.C., Halifax, counsel for the commission. "Afraid that if I said what I would like to say I would say too much. So I had better think over what I am going to say. I just say as quietly as I can that Ontario is still part of Canada. It is not a foreign country. Heretofore we have had entire sympathy from the great province of Ontario as well as hearty sympathy from Quebec in our problems down here."

Mr. Burchell had outlined a claim for extending to the Maritime Provinces a reduction of three cents a bushel granted in the freight rate on potatoes to and from points in Ontario and Quebec. The case was entered primarily as a test of the validity of section eight of the Maritime Freight Rates Act, which gave the Maritimes a statutory advantage of a 20 percent reduction in freight rates. The section provides that this advantage is to be maintained.

Having saved Maritime shippers millions of dollars since 1927, the act was described by Mr. Burchell as the lifeline of Maritime trade. "It took us 60 years of fighting to get out of the wilderness and get this act to let us trade with the rest of Canada," he said. Reductions elsewhere in Canada on some 50 products, including potatoes, had nullified the freight rate advantage.

If the effect of section 8 was to establish a fixed differential between the Maritime Provinces and Ontario, and place Ontario at a "permanent disadvantage in its own market," said Mr. Sedgwick, "then, and in that event only, I propose to submit to this tribunal or to whatever tribunal this case may go that the whole of this act is probably a violation of the terms of the British North America Act."

Assistant Commissioner MacLean, presiding in the absence of the board's chairman, Hon. Hugh Guthrie, said that this was outside the board's jurisdiction. Mr. Sedgwick explained that he wanted to put his views on record at the outset.

"The clear intent of the B.N.A. Act is that there should be absolute equality between the joining provinces," declared Mr. Sedgwick, "and we find that intent crystallized in Section 121, which says in terms that all articles of the growth, produce or manufacture of any one of the provinces shall from and after the union be admitted free into each of the other provinces."

The counsel for the Maritime Transportation Commission takes issue with the startling claims of the Ontario lawyer. Other concessions are asked for.

British National Gov't Won Out By Good Majority

Lansbury, his predecessor, both increased their majorities by several thousand. Sir Stafford Cripps was re-elected in Bristol East, but Miss Margaret Bondfield, former minister of Labor, failed to come back in Wall-send, where she was beaten by another woman, Miss Irene Ward, Conservative.

Labor opened with a series of rapid gains, but then slowed down. The government developed strength in unexpected quarters. Salsford, regarded by the Conservatives a key city, was held by the government—to the surprise of the experts who counted on heavier Labor gains.

The industrial districts showed a curious swinging in political fortunes. All of Birmingham's 12 divisions remained solidly Conservative, but Labor captured four of Manchester's 10 divisions.

Social Credit's first venture into British elections was unsuccessful, H. C. Bell losing his deposit in the Erdington division of Birmingham. Reginald Kenney, running as "National Dividend" candidate, suffered the same fate in Bradford North.

Harry Pollitt, British Communist leader, was easily defeated in Rhonda East by H. Mainwaring, Labor.

In Northern Ireland there were no Labor candidates, and a straight fight developed in five constituencies between Conservatives and Republicans or Nationalist Abstentionists. Disorders featured the voting in Armagh and Fermanagh and Tyrone. At Lurgin the police made a baton charge to break up fighting near the polling booth. During the day many attacks were made on automobiles carrying voters to the polls.

Ministers Elected

Cabinet ministers elected included also Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, in the Edghaston division of Birmingham, and in Hastings Lord Eustace Percy, minister without portfolio. Minister of Health Sir Kingsley Wood, whose seat in Woolwich West had been considered doubtful, went in by 7,276.

Last night's count gives the following popular vote by parties:

Government
Conservative	4,125,186
Liberal National	345,950
National Labor	163,403
Opposition
Labor	3,721,701
Liberal	528,562
Ind. Labor Party	22,205
Communist	13,655

Sixty-seven former Labor M. P.'s who lost their seats in 1931 were included in the results. Of these 37 will return to Parliament, 30 being defeated. Labor's strength appeared to be midway between that of 1929, when it was strong enough to form a government with Liberal support, and 1931, when it was overwhelmed by the National Government parties.

Women Fare Badly

Women fared badly in today's election. Of the 60 running, 29 heard their immediate political destiny announced as returns came in from ridings in which votes were counted to night—and only three could look forward to saying "Mr. Speaker!" For all three it was an old story. Viscountess Astor won her seat in Plymouth Sutton with ease, though her 1931 majority of 10,204 reduced to 6,097 as her Labor opponent, G. Ward, cut into the Conservative vote.

Anglo-Canadians

Of six Anglo-Canadians running in today's elections, two were defeated, two elected, and two had to wait until ballots are counted in their constituencies tomorrow to learn their fate.

Beverley Baxter, formerly Lord Beaverbrook's right hand newspaperman, won Middlesex Greenwood easily with a majority of 21,823. He is a Conservative.

Bartle Bull, son of W. Perkins Bull of Toronto, won out in Middlesex Enfield as a Conservative, defeating W. Mellor, Labor, by 5,530 votes.

Arthur Haycock Ontario-born Laborite, lost out in Salford West, where J. F. Emery, Conservative, won; and Sigmund Samuel, Toronto, failed to hold Wilsden West for the government. S. P. Viant, Labor, had a 2,330 majority there.

Captain Peter MacDonald, the Nova Scotia Conservative, who sits for the Isle of Wight and Viscount Duncan-

N.S. LIQUOR REPEAL
PLEBISCITE URGED

HALIFAX, Nov. 15—A plebiscite on repeal of the Nova Scotia Liquor Control Act was urged on the Provincial Government today by a delegation from the Sons of Temperance.

Members of the delegation also termed clubs with liquor licenses as a "social menace" and asked immediate closure.

Failing repeal, they asked that a compensation fund be established out of the province's liquor profits to recompense families of victims of highway accidents in which Government liquor was a contributing factor.
