CANADA IS STILL AMERICAN MECCA

The dozen years of aridity in the United States were responsible for a great deal of travel to the Canadian provinces; there is no question about that. But with Uncle Sam going along under a licensed liquor and beer dispensation, figures from the Dominion are conclusive that Canada has other and greater attractions than her Ontario stores, and her Quebec drinker.

The present year has been America's greatest travel season since 1929. During August 2,885,480 persons were admitted to Canada from the States, an increase of 531,688 over the corresponding month in 1934. Motorists were the bulk of the visitors, 2,648,509.

Dominion officials are greatly pleased by the ever mounting increase. They are glad to see Americans any time and are world noted for their courtesy to visitors. And Americans are pleased to go where they are cordially received. Canada has its beauty spots as renowned as those in the States.

Figures are not at hand on the entry of Canadians into the United States during this year, but there are evidence that more of them came across the boundary of 5,500 miles, 3,100 of which are land, than ever before since the development of the automobile.

The good neighbors like to come and go because they respect each other, because they speak a common language. There is a freedom of international travel that appeals to both sides. There is no other boundary of the length of that between the two countries on which no gun or armament is to be found.

The United States is as glad to have her Canadian neighbors among us as Canada is to have us within her borders. There is nothing but goodwill between the two. Modern locomotion has made the two better acquainted than ever. The Americans in August doubtless helped Canadian trade materially, perhaps more than the Canadians, because of smaller numbers, helped us.

Other years are likely to surpass the record of 1935 in similar evidences of better acquaintance and even greater amity between the two.—Syracuse, N. Y., Post-Standard.

McADAM NEWS

McADAM, N.B., November 8.—Members of W. A. and friends gave Mrs. Wesley Cropley a Supper Bridge, at the home of Mrs. Ernest Hunter, on Wednesday evening. Mrs. Cropley made many friends, while in McAdam and will be greatly missed. She and her family left for Maxwell Thursday afternoon, where they will reside. She will later be joined by her husband, who will remain in McAdam until his work is through.

SANCTIONS PINCH ITALIANS

ROME, Nov. 9.—Premier Mussolini began "reprisals" yesterday against forty-nine sanctionist nations laying an "economic siege" around Italy.

He sought to inspire the nation with the idea of eating and buying only Italian products, decreeing: Meatless Tuesdays; "buying Italian"; increased prices for certain imported supplies, and voluntary restrictions by trade organizations to save light, fuel, paper and other products bought abroad.

Rain halted operations in Africa, and prevented a big sham battle in Duce proposed to put on today so the Romans could see what war looks like.

Sir Eric Drummond, British Ambassador, called on Mussolini, but officials said they saw no immediate prospects for a settlement of the conflict.

Meatless Tuesdays got a poor start. Butcher shops were closed, upon Il Duce's order, but many open air-markets sold meat, apparently thinking the order applied only to stores. Fascist leaders said, however, this would be remedied by next week. Tomorrow comes the first of the Wednesdays without beef, veal or pork.

Eight hundred thousand women are incorporated in the "house-by-house" campaign to use only Italian goods.

Fascists wrote newspapers urging a voluntary ban on foreign books. A good part of Italy arose an hour earlier to get to offices at 8 a.m., in a trade-organization plan to economize on light. Some industries are arranging their hours to save light and heat. Merchant associates are planning methods of curtailing the use of wrapping paper, because most paper is imported.

Prices went up. Foreign newspapers advanced 20 per cent., apparently in a move to discourage their purchase.

TIDES

The lowest tide in half a century was witnessed on October 12 by the people of Lubec, Maine. Men in hip boots were able to wade across the bay to Campobello Island, New Brunswick. The following day the waters of the Bay of Fundy rose to an unprecedented height. Boats tied up at wharves were lifted so high that their painters had to be cast off. Debris was washed into smoke-houses, and an army of rats were driven from their holes on the waterfront. Extreme low and high tides were also reported from other points along the Maine coast.

The Bay of Fundy has the world's highest and most rapid "bore," the term used for a tidal wave which advances rapidly as a sort of wall into funnel-shaped bays and estuaries. At Chignecto it rises to over fifty feet, with a crest of three to six feet. The bore in the Amazon does not exceed sixteen feet, and in the Severn, Trent and Solway Firth it attains a height of only two or three feet.

In all maritime countries elevation is based on the average level of the sea, and the task of bringing the data from seacoasts inland is an important part of geodetic surveys. The tidal recording machine is placed on the open seacoast and an automatic record of the level of the sea is thus obtained. The usual type of station is built on a crib and contains the recording apparatus and the well of the float. As the tides rise and fall and the level of the open sea is affected by climatic conditions, the level of the water in the well varies. The float consequently moves upward and downward with the water; these movements are recorded on a graph by a pencil controlled by the float. The record is removed either daily or weekly, and the hourly elevations scaled off. Tidal records are usually listed in lunar periods. Since the mean level of the water of the sea on a given day may vary by several feet from mean sea level due to local climatic conditions, seven years' observations at a primary tidal station are generally considered necessary for first-class determination of mean sea level.—New York Sun.
