GAS SALES AND LUMBER REGULATIONS

This week's Royal Gazette, gives notice of regulations with respect to the Gasoline Sales Act, which will be enforced at once. The new regulations concern tax, rebate of tax, grades of gasoline and specifications for gasoline, etc., which shall apply to all those selling gasoline in the province. The regulations are made under section 29 of Chapter 17 of the Acts of 1935, known as "The Gasoline Sales Act." Regulations also in connection with minimum wage scales have been fixed by the New Brunswick Forest Operations Commission for the lumbering industry of the province and are now in effect, according to the Royal Gazette. The regulations, under the Forest Operations Commission Act include the procedure for reference of disputes to the Commission.

DANGERS OF CENSORSHIP

If we may judge by reports in the German Press, organ of the newspaper profession in that country, the Hitlerite government should have consulted German psychologists before undertaking press censorship. The result of the attempted control of news, we are told, has been to multiply a thousandfold the circulation of word-of-mouth rumor and gossip. The authority quoted neglects to enlighten us as to nature of the matter dealt in by this "oral press service," but that easily may be left to the imagination. If the gossip were favorable to the aims and methods of Hitlerism, it would not be gossip. Intelligent public opinion demands truthful news, but, where this is denied, it will take avidly to the next best substitute. If we know anything about gossip, the censoring regime in Germany has not gained much by its censorship.

A BALD HEADED MAN MAKES MOAN

A Bill now before the Ontario Legislature, to make barbering and hair-dressing a learned profession with examinations and fees and things like that, wrings a moan of anguish from Dr. Belanger, M.P.P., who asks, as a bald headed man, why he should pay as much for a haircut as a man with a full crop, like Premier Ramsay MacDonald. The question will bear discussing. In the first place what right has Dr. Belanger to be bald headed? It is all very well to urge early piety as an excuse, but H. G. Wells, who has a mane on him like an African lion, does not hold with any such reasons. He puts it down to lack of a balanced diet, too little exercise and similar causes—in a word, makes it a man's own fault, and says that in his Utopia it will be reckoned an outrage on nature, and a matter for punishment if any man goes out of life with as little hair as when he came into it. The reply to this challenge is that hair and brains do not go together, and that hard thinking has a lot to do with alopecia, premature or otherwise. At which Mr. Wells rises again to remark that he has been thinking continuously for a large number of years, and has never yet turned, much less lost, a single hair over it. It is apparent that Dr. Belanger has started something, but when he asks why there shouldn't be a cut rate for bald heads, we submit that he hasn't a leg to stand on. The obvious answer is that the barber spends more time—and time is money—hunting for hair to cut than he does cutting it. Anyone who has only a few hairs left on the place where the hair ought to grow knows how particular he is to have his scanty tresses cut, trimmed and draped in such a manner that the wide open spaces are decently covered. It is not that he is ashamed of the open spaces, but that people may suspect that they are empty. And so it is the meticulous task of the barber to conceal these hiatuses, so waste and void, with the art that hides art, and to the satisfaction of an irritable patron who would be insulted if he were told that there was nothing worth looking for.

Large Funeral For Mrs. George A. Jammer Today

The funeral of the late Mrs. George A. Jammer took place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home at North Devon and was one of the largest funerals seen in this vicinity in recent months. All classes of citizens of Devon, and many from this city turning out to pay a last tribute of respect to her memory. The funeral procession proceeded to this city and interment was made at the Rural cemetery. An impressive service was held at the home by Rev. George Telford of St. Paul's United Church and favored hymns of the deceased lady, including "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Abide With Me" were rendered by the choir of St. Paul's church. The pallbearers included the four sons and two brothers of the late Mrs. Jammer. The mourners were Geo. A. Jammer, Sr., Daniel Jammer, Watson Jammer, George A. Jammer, Jr., Donald Jammer, P. S. Watson, Harry A. Watson, Rev. Dr. Robert A. Watson, of Boston; William A. Kesson, John A. Watson, P. Jack Watson, Warren Jammer, Kenneth Jammer, Kenneth Hiscock, Randolph Jammer, Carl M. Watson, MacGowan Watson, and John A. Jewett. A very large number of beautiful floral tributes rested on the casket.

York Conservatives To Hold Convention

(Continued from Page One) as yet regarding the date of the elections. It may be announced within the next few days, or again it may be up in the air until the June meeting of the Provincial Government. It is probable that only Premier Tilley knows the date and that he is not telling any person just yet. All news given out from Saint John regarding probable election dates is just guesswork and one guess is as good as another. It is probable, however, that at the latest two months from now will see the elections about over. That's all any one can say for sure just now.

Chief Justice Baxter Opens R.C.M.P. Probe

(Continued from Page Eight) youth answered, "He didn't threaten me", he said in response to a query. He had not been kept without food or sleep. Witness told C. F. Inches, Commission counsel, that the questioning had been conducted on a fair basis. There had been three occasions, when Scott was interviewed. Q.—"Had you any complaint of treatment to you on any of those occasions when you were interviewed?" A.—No. Witness remembered of the talks he had with Sgt. Peters. Scott's counsel, Mr. Ramsay had asked witness not to talk within his advice. Witness said he had answered Peters' questions willingly. Sgt. Peters Called Sgt. B. G. Peters, in command of the Bathurst detachment was the second witness called. He has been stationed as head of the Bathurst section since 1928. He recalled incident of the burglary charge, involving Scott. Witness told of his visits to the jail and of interviewing Stanley Scott regarding a burglary at Salmon Beach. Witness had questioned Scott, and conducted the questioning in a friendly way. Several days later Sgt. Peters saw Scott again, questioning him again on the burglary matter. The second time he had questioned Scott in a little storeroom. Constable Russell was with witness at the time. On third occasion Sgt. Peters was alone with Scott and talked with him for fifteen minutes. Scott had told witness that Mr. Ramsay, his counsel, had said not to talk to Peters. Witness had answered that Ramsay had nothing to do with him and that it didn't matter whether he (Ramsay) was there or not. Mr. Dougherty examined the witness. On no occasion had Sgt. Peters used force or threats while talking with Scott. Mr. Inches cross-examined the witness. Q.—Why did you take Russell with you on the third occasion? A.—I had no special reason other than he probably was with me at the time. No Ill-Feeling Witness said there had been no ill-feeling between him and Scott on the occasions of the questionings. Witness said that possibly he had used the phrase "turning King's evidence". Scott had been in jail on that occasion for under the Game Act specifically charged with giving false information to a game warden. Albany M. Robichaud The third witness called was Albany M. Robichaud, clerk of the peace at Bathurst. He recalled Sgt. Peters interviewing him. Constable Russell Mr. Dougherty next called Constable Frank H. W. M. Russell. Examined by Mr. Dougherty, the witness told of being with Sgt. Peters at the time the latter had examined Scott. Q.—Did Sgt. Peters use any violence or threats during the time you were there. A.—He did not. Sgt. Peters had questioned the accused on the burglary. The questioning was done in an ordinary conversational manner. Examined by Mr. Inches. No other witnesses were recalled. Second Case The second case taken up was the Williamson case. Superintendent Salt was called as the first witness in the case. On August 11, 1934 complaint had been made to the R. C. M. P. of an elderly man named Ramsay, being knocked down by a car. Witness had been there on leave of absence. He had had a conversation with Sgt. Peters, who investigated the case. He reviewed the case. A man named Gordon Rene Williamson was 23 years of age, and at the police, Major Salt had conversed with him. He asked Williamson where he was on the night of the accident. Williamson had said he was with a man named William Branch "minute by minute". Q.—What methods did you adopt? A.—I simply asked him straight questions. Witness found that Williamson had been at the scene of the accident near the time the accident occurred. Williamson had left the fair grounds, where he had at first said he was with some other people, rather than Branch. Sgt. Peters and Williamson had had a conversation and Williamson had told Peters he wanted to tell witness the whole story. Waited Half Hour Major Salt had asked that the accused tell his story to Constable Russell instead of him. Witness waited for half an hour for Constable Russell to arrive. During the time that Major Salt sat with Williamson, the latter had "bubbled" out pails of his story. Witness said he had warned Williamson that it wasn't necessary to tell him anything. Witness had used no third degree methods on Williamson. When Russell arrived, witness told Constable Russell to warn Williamson and not to ask him any questions. It was quite impossible for Constable Russell to know what has gone on between himself and Williamson. Mr. Veniot, said the witness, had charged that he had used third degree methods and that Russell was aware of the conversation which took place between Williamson and Major Salt. Sgt. Peters was re-called as a witness in the Williamson case. He told of examination of the man and of questioning him. Witness had seen Williamson with William Branch driving in a car on that day. In examining Williamson witness had made no threats whatever. He had not taken the man into custody. Witness told of a conversation which Williamson had had with Major Salt in the police office. He had not been present, nor had he heard the conversation. Peters had heard part of a conversation in which Williamson had said: "I done it and I want to tell you all about it." Williamson was speaking with Major Salt at the time. Albany M. Robichaud was called again. He had acted as crown counsel in the Williamson manslaughter case. He said that Sgt. Peters was not required as a witness. It was not because of the police that the confession of Williamson had not been entered in court that day. His Lordship declared that his duty was to find out if something purporting to be a confession was obtained from Williamson by improper methods. It was not because of the failure of the police that the confession was not allowed in the evidence. His Lordship believed that Mr. Robichaud's statements covered that part of the matter without trying the court. Sgt. Peters was asked if he had told Williamson there were spots on the car. Sgt. Peters said he might have. The part of the examination of Constable Russell at court was shown to the Commission. Constable Russell was called. He described the part he took in the examination of Williamson. He had taken (Continued on Page Five)
