

OPPORTUNITIES FOR SPIRITUAL WORK TO BE DONE IN PRACTICAL EVANGELIZATION

Are The Churches Going to Fail, Asks Mrs. Lloyd Boulter In A Paper Read At Sheffield.

At the Spiritual Conference of the sacrifice, but He also gave ample assurance that "the way of the cross leads home."

The minister who would grasp these opportunities of practical evangelization must have a great faith in his God, a great faith in the goodness of mankind in general, and a great vision. The layman looks to his minister for the confirmation of his faith. One man after months of great doubt was greatly comforted one Sunday when the minister in a very confident tone announced his text, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." The very assurance which rang in the minister's voice gave back to that man his lost confidence and hope.

A great understanding of human nature is expected of every minister for after all is not the minister's great task and privilege that of teaching his people the true art of living? The great majority of people are not really living, they are hedged on all sides by bonds which they seem powerless to break and which may never be broken unless the minister, with a great understanding can show them how to apply God's simple, happy truths to their every-day living. The whole teaching of Christ seems to centre around one theme, "The saving of man's souls," and what is this but the filling of men's hearts with a great Love. A man who is so filled with love for all good and holy things that it shows in his every act, has no room left for the devil and his dark thoughts.

Theological training may enable a minister to prepare an eloquent sermon but without sincerity it availeth nothing. A young minister while on vacation entered a home, where, had he but known it, the inmates were greatly in need of spiritual help. Very thoughtlessly this young man spent his time exposing the failing of his brother ministers and of those amateurs who led in prayers at his prayer meetings. At a later date the same people attended a service where this young man was called upon to lead in prayer. He did so very eloquently but his words were meaningless to the people who had listened to his thoughtless conversation. Can the blind lead the blind? Shall they not both fall into the ditch?

Personal, interested contacts are often of more value than many sermons to an individual. When the minister, as God's messenger realizes that only by becoming a part of his people's very lives can he teach them that religion means everyday Christian living, one of the greatest problems confronting the Christian church today will have been solved. The lot of the minister who is willing to share the burdens of his people is not an easy one, and he must necessarily feel at times as the Master did when He cried, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how often would I have gathered thy children together as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not!" but the example we are bidden to follow is a practical one. Our Saviour was supremely practical in dealing with men. He realized that some were sick and some were suffering and it was part of His every-day life to relieve this suffering in every possible way. His religion was carried into His every act.

We find men and women on every side of us today groping in a spiritual darkness as great as that of anyone who has never heard of Christ. Do the ministers realize this? If the minister does not manifest a sincere interest in the people and is not approachable how are the people going to take their troubles to him?

In every community we find men and women, respectable citizens too, who have no interest in church work. Does it ever occur to the minister to take a practical view of the story of the ninety and nine and manage in some way to come in contact with those men and women? To study them as Christ would study them? Do you think those men and women, if convinced of the minister's genuine interest in their welfare, could resist his appeal for their help in his great work?

One minister, who understood his people, stopped to chat with a young farmer who was cultivating his garden and in a quizzical tone asked, "Just what would happen if your horse didn't keep in the straight path?" "I expect he'd make a mess of things," replied the farmer. "All right, my lad," smiled the minister, "I won't preach to you," and warmly shaking the young man's hand, went on his way. That lesson went deep and has never been forgotten!

Discussion Groups, Brotherhood Groups and many other groups are firmly established in many places, but if these groups fail to maintain a better understanding between the minister and his people, and faith to cope with the everyday problems of the people, their value is greatly lessened.

Is it not possible that the minister, realizing his superior education and superior outlook upon life, is sometimes unconsciously patronizing when dealing with his people and fails to achieve his aim? A minister's theological training should be an unconscious part of him, a training which brings God closer to him than breathing, and if it hasn't done this it is useless in the great work of practical evangelization.

"Except ye become as a little child," It would seem that these words spoken by the Master, sets forth very clearly the conditions whereby any one, minister or layman, may enter into God's kingdom and share in God's work. They designate the starting point for all Christian endeavor. Is there a possibility that after years of college education and the perfecting of the brain as a thinking machine, this attitude of humility is hard to attain? In our great strivings after more culture and knowledge are we missing the best things? Are we mak-

IS 32, HAS $85,000 AND WANTS WIFE AND HOME

Young Nova Scotian Is Sick of Life in New England.

SALEM, New Hampshire July 15—Clarence A. Atherton, 32 who last fall was bequeathed nearly $85,000 from the estate of his Exeter uncle, explained today advertisements for a wife he inserted in several New England newspapers. According to Atherton, it is his ambition to contact some Canadian girl, preferably a native or former resident of Nova Scotia, with a view of marriage and return to the Maritime Provinces.

BORN IN SPRINGHILL

Atherton himself is a Nova Scotian by birth and former resident. Born in Springhill Nova Scotia in 1902 he has resided in Amherst and Saint John.

He came to New Hampshire to reside with his uncle at the latter's request six years ago. Since receiving the fortune and during the process of settling the estate, Atherton has divided his time between Methuen, Mass. and this town.

SAW NO HARM

"I can see no harm in advertising as I did," Atherton declared, when approached by newspaper reporters here today. "Can a man not take such a step without causing all this hullabaloo?" he demanded.

"I came down here to spend the last remaining years of my uncle's life with him and now that everything is finally settled, I intend to go back to Nova Scotia. Furthermore, I would like to go back married to some Canadian girl, one from Nova Scotia if possible, so that we could quietly settle down without being forever pestered by real estate agents and a small army of men and women who have every conceivable kind of proposition to offer a chap who has just come in to a considerable sum of money. My life has been a bedlam of agents and salesman ever since it was known that I was to receive my uncle's fortune.

"I'm tired of it and I do not want to go all through it again down home. So, if I can find the right little girl, one who has perhaps been through the mill here in the States and would like to go back to Canada as a married woman, why I shall certainly be interested to meet here. That's all there is to it."—Truro News.

(A few months ago a young lady advertised in The Daily Mail asking for a husband. She received over one hundred and sixty answers, and is now married.)

During the Voice's vacation his schedule will be filled by Jacob Tarshish, who, as "The Lamplighter", has built a large following for himself through his philosophical broadcasts over the Mutual network. Before his 1-month series over the Mutual network, Jacob Tarshish was a mid-west favorite through his program on stations in Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio.

The Lamplighter will be heard over seven CBS stations on week days at 12 noon A. S. T. and Sundays at 6:45 P. M., A. S. T.

ing of religion a strange, mysterious thing, when it should be the simplest, happiest thing in our disordered world?

Men on every hand are crying out for a practical religion! Is the church going to respond to this urgent call of distress?

There cannot be one religion for the minister and another for the people!

Let No Tear Fall Because Jelly Weeps

(By Katharine Baker)

There really isn't any need for the housewife to weep if she finds that her sparkling jelly has seeped through the paraffin cover and a spot or two of syrup is congealed there. That gentle oozing is called "weeping" and a little of it is normal. The jelly is not affected by this weeping unless yeast or mold start growing on it.

To prevent "weeping" jellies, fully ripe fruit should be used in the jam or jelly making, and when the jars are filled, a half inch space should be left clear at the top and hot paraffin, to make a layer, about 1-8 inch thick, poured on the hot jelly.

When this has cooled, add a second and heavier layer of paraffin and roll each glass gently to make the paraffin run around the edges for a perfect seal. Then cover the jar with clean tin covers or securely fastened paper and store in a cool, dry place, free from dust and mildew.

"Floating fruit" is the usual worry in jams and here, too, the use of fully ripe fruit will minimize the trouble. Crushing the fruit thoroughly, cooking for the exact time specified, and cooling and stirring before bottling will also lessen the trouble.

Only in the newer short boil recipes does fully ripe fruit give perfect jam or jelly. The old long cooking recipes used under-ripe fruit and boiled it a long time to try to concentrate enough of the jelly-making substance called pectin, to get a set. Fully ripe, full-flavoured fruit lacks pectin but the addition of pure fruit pectin in short boil recipes gives a perfect jam or jelly with all the flavour and colour of finest quality fruit.

Raspberries will not make jelly no matter how long they are boiled unless pectin is added. This simple recipe gives a perfect jelly at low cost.

Raspberry Jelly

4 cups (2 lbs.) juice.
7½ cups (3 1-4 lbs.) sugar.
1 cup bottled fruit pectin.
To prepare juice, crush thoroughly or grind about 3 quarts fully ripe berries. Place in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly and paraffin at once. Makes 11 six-ounce jars.

Tasty Macaroni Dishes

Do you want something "different" for the family—something that will "just touch the spot" at the evening meal? Then try one of these tasty, healthful, easy-to-prepare macaroni dishes. Either recipe is very easy to follow, and the result is very easy to enjoy.

Macaroni With Tomato Sauce

Break the macaroni into short lengths. Cover with plenty of boiling water and boil until soft, twenty to thirty minutes generally being required. Stir occasionally with a fork to prevent sticking to the kettle. Turn into a sieve and drain thoroughly. Place in the serving dish and cover with tomato sauce. Serve grated cheese with it. This cheese may be mixed with the tomato sauce.

Baked Macaroni With Cheese

2 cups macaroni, broken into short lengths.

1-4 pound grated cheese
2 tablespoons butter.
1½ cups milk.
Salt and pepper.

Boil and drain the macaroni as directed in the preceding recipe. Arrange a layer in the bottom of a pudding dish. Over it sprinkle some of the cheese and scatter over this bits of butter. Add a sprinkling of salt and pepper. Fill the dish in this order, having macaroni on top, well oiled with butter, but without cheese. Add milk enough to just cover well and bake until a golden brown hue, one-half hour usually being sufficient. Serve in the dish in which it was baked.

Chocolate Sundae

1 Junket Tablet
1 tablespoon cold water
1 pint milk
3 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla flavouring
To make junket: Make junket according to directions on circular in package. Set away to chill. When ready to serve add 2 or 3 tablespoons of chocolate sauce to each dish.

To make chocolate sauce: Mix 2½ tablespoons cocoa and ½ cup sugar thoroughly with ½ cup of milk, adding very slowly at first so as not to make lumpy. Cook over a slow flame for ten minutes. Let cool.

This is the giddy season when the elderly Lothario fixes his faded eye on a slenderized flapper, grins at her with all his bridgework, and fancies he is exerting "sex-appeal!"

"The maker of history always wears a hair shirt," says an historian. Hence the effigy in bronze so often shows a hand thrust into the vest.
