A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST lost is going to buy the books, the clothes, pay the tuition and even start a college fund. I just can't."

"You've got to," said Sinton. "This is plain enough. You go far in the swamp at your own risk, even in daytime."

"Uncle Wesley," said the girl in a whisper, "last night before I went to bed I was so happy I tried to pray, and I thanked God for hiding me 'under the shadow of his wing.' But how in the world could any one know it?"

Wesley Sinton's heart gave one great leap in his breast. His face was whiter than the girl's now.

"Was you praying out loud, honey?" he almost whispered.

"I might have said words," answered Elnora. "I know I do sometimes.
I've never had any one to talk to, and I've played with and talked to my self all my life. You've caught me at it often, but it always makes mother angry when she does. She says it's silly. I forget and do it when I'm alone. But, Uncle Wesley, if I said anything last night you know it was the merest whisper, because I'd have been so afraid of waking mother. Don't you see? I sat up late and did two lessons."

Sinton was steady himself. "I'll stop and examine the case as I come back," he said. "Maybe I can find some clew. That other—that was just accidental. It's a common expression All the preachers use it. If I was going to pray that would be the very first thing I'd say."

The color came back to Elnora's face.

"Did you tell your mother about this money, Elnora?" he asked.

"No I didn't," said Elnora. "It's dreadful not to, but I was afraid. You see, they are clearing the swamp so fast. Every year it grows harder to find things, and Indian stuff getting scarce. I want to graduate, and that's four years unless I can double on the course. That means $20 tuition each year and new books and clothes.
There won't ever be so much at one time again—that I know. I just got to hang to my money. I was afraid to tell her for fear she would want it for taxes, and she really must sell a tree or some cattle for that, mustn't she, Uncle Wesley?"

"On your life, she must!" said Wesley. "You put your little wad in the bank all safe and never mention it to a living soul. It don't seem right, but your case is peculiar. Every word you say is a true word. Each year you will get less from the swamp, and things everywhere will be scarcer. If you ever get a few dollars ahead, that can start your college fund. You know you are going to college, Elnora?"

"Of course I am," said Elnora.
She jumped from the carriage and soon found that with her books, her lunch box and the box of arrow points she had a heavy load. She was almost to the bridge crossing the culvert when she heard the distressed screams of a child. Across an orchard of the suburbs came a small boy, after him a big dog, urged by a man in the background. Elnora's heart was with the small dying figure in any event whatever. She dropped her load on the bridge and with practiced hand caught up a stone and flung it at the dog.
The beast curled double with a howl.
The boy reached the fence, and Elnora was there to help him over. As he touched the top she swung him to the ground, but he clung to her, clasping her tightly, sobbing and shivering with fear. Elnora carried him to the bridge and sat with him in her arms. For a time his replies to her questions were indistinct, but at last he became quieter and she could understand.

He was a white of a boy, nothing but skin covered bones, his burned, freckled face in a mortar of tears and dust, his clothing unspeakably dirty, one great toe in a festering mass from a broken nail and sores all over the visible portions of the small body.

"You wouldn't set a dog on a boy for just taking a few old apples when you fed 'em to pigs with a shovel every day, would you?" he said.

"No, I would not," said Elnora hotly.
"You'd give a boy all the apples he wanted if he hadn't any breakfast and was so hungry he was all twisty inside, wouldn't you?"

"Yes, I would," said Elnora.
"If you had anything to eat you would give me something right now, wouldn't you?"

"Yes," said Elnora. "There's nothing but just stones in the package.
But my dinner is in that case. I'll gladly divide."

She opened the box. The famished child gave a little cry and reached both hands. Elnora caught them back.

"Did you have any supper?"

"No."

"Any dinner yesterday?"

"An apple and some grapes I stole."

"Whose boy are you?"

"Old Tom Billings."

"YOU'LL SUFFER ALL YOUR LIFE"

That's what the Doctor told him

"Fruit-a-tives Cured Him"

CHESTERVILLE, ONT., Jan. 25th 1911 "For over twenty years, I have been troubled with Kidney Disease, and the doctors told me they could do me no good, and that I would be a sufferer for the rest of my life."

"doctored with different medical men and tried many advertised remedies, but none of them suited my case."

Nearly a year ago, I tried "Fruit-atives". I have been using this fruit medicine nearly all the time since, and am glad to say that I am cured.
I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit of doing what the doctors said was impossible.

I am now seventy-six years old, and in first class health."

GEO. W. BARKLEY.
In all the world, there is no other remedy that has cured so many cases of so-called "incurable" kidney disease, as "Fruit-a-tives".

This famous fruit medicine acts directly on the kidneys—beating and strengthening them—and ridding the system of the waste matter that poisons the blood.

"Why don't your father get you some thing to eat?"

"He does most days, but he's drunk now."

"Hush! You must not!" said Elnora.
"He's your father!"

"He's spent all the money to get drunk, too," said the boy, "and Jimmy and Belle are both crying for breakfast. I'd 'a' got out all right with an apple for myself, but I tried to get some for them, and the dog got too close. Say, you can just throw 'em out?"

"Yes," admitted Elnora. She poured half the milk into the cup. "Drink this," she said, holding it to him.

The boy gulped the milk and swore joyously, gripping the cup with shaking fingers.

"Hush!" cried Elnora. "That's dreadful!"

"What's dreadful?"

"To say such awful words."

"Huh, pa says worse 'an that every breath he draws."

Elnora stared into the quaint little face and saw that the child was older than she had thought. He might have been forty by his hard, unchildish expression.

"Do you want to be like your father?"

"No; I want to be like you. Couldn't a angel be prettier 'an you? Can I have more milk?"

Elnora emptied the flask. The boy drained the cup. He drew a breath of satisfaction as he gazed into her face.

"You wouldn't go off and leave your little boy, would you?" he asked.

"Did some one go away and leave you?" questioned Elnora in return.

"Yes; my mother went off and left me and left Jimmy and Belle, too," said the boy. "You wouldn't leave your little boy, would you?"

"No."

The boy looked eagerly at the box.
Elnora lifted a sandwich and uncovered the fried chicken. The boy gasped with delight.

"Say, I could eat the stuff in the glass and the other box and carry the bread and the chicken to Jimmy and Belle," he offered.

Elnora silently uncovered the custard with preserved cherries on top and handed it and the spoon to the child. Never did food disappear faster.
The salad went next, and a sandwich and half a chicken breast followed.

"I better leave the rest for Jimmy and Belle," he said. "They're 'st fightin' hungry."

Elnora gave him the remainder of the carefully prepared lunch. The boy clutched it and ran with a sidewise hop like a wild thing.

Elnora covered the dishes and cup polished the spoon, replaced it and closed the beautiful case. She caught her breath in a tremulous laugh.

centres may be affected.

worn out by household cares and duties themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

the heart or nerves, flagging energy or physical breakdown, do not wait until

Heart and Nerve Pills for over three months. I was so nervous I would imagine everything, and would spring out of my bed at night."

I tried the doctors, but they did me no

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY CALENDAR FOR 1913

Bringing visions of comfortable and luxurious travel through a territory unrivalled for scenic beauty, the calendar of the Intercolonial Railway just received with the compliments of the Traffic Dept., is warmly appreciated as a happy reminder of past enjoyments and a delightful inspiration for future travel.

The calendar is as usual very handsome and is printed in exquisite taste. On a hand tooled background of maple leaves is an oval centre piece printed in quadra color showing the Ocean Limited speeding through a scene where ocean and land with a setting of fleecy clouds combine to form a very beautiful picture. Over this is the emblematic moosehead encircled with a halo of scarlet with the words "The Foot Line—The Peoples Railway" in pale yellow. Set in the four corners are reproductions of the four I.C.R. booklets descriptive of Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. The lettering is done in white with gold outline while the tab is chocolate brown with white figures showing the statutory holidays being marked by squares of shaded white and gold. On each side of the tab in white lettering on a tablet of gold. On each side of the tab in white lettering on a tablet of gold are some cheerful facts concerning the splendid through trains the Ocean Limited and the Maritime Express.

The design of the calendar is greatly enhanced by a surprising of gold on a background of maple leaves. As a reminder of the Intercolonial and its fine train service it is excellent. As something both ornamental and useful for office use it is much to be desired.

Alice Gale has been engaged in the cast of "The Master of the House."

Walter Belasco, a brother of David Belasco intends to go into vaudeville.
