SHEPARD-GOULD WEDDING

dred million dollars and a peculiar will. The first great "wizard of Wall Street" wanted to keep all his money in the family. He also wanted to keep peace in the family. Accordingly he willed all his wealth to his children and stipulated that no child should marry without the consent and approval of the others. A forfeiture of half the child's share in the estate was to be the penalty for a marriage without this approval. Like many another will drawn under similar circumstances it failed, when put to the test, to fully serve its purpose. For, while the marriage of Miss Helen Gould as well as the marriages of several of the other children could not but be to the liking of the great financier, there have been matrimonial alliances in the family that probably would not have met with his approval were he alive to sanction them.

George Jay Gould, the eldest son, was married some six years before his father's death. Jay Gould was decidedly opposed to his eldest son's choice of a wife. When the son made it known that he was going to marry the beautiful Miss Edith Kingdon, a member of Augustin Daly's company and a talented actress, the founder of the family protested vigorously. George Gould won the day. Afterward Jay Gould became extremely fond of his daughter-in-law and her interesting children. He was quite reconciled to the match after it was consummated. The Goulds have been married more than twenty-five years and their union appears to be an unusually happy one.

Edwin Gould, the second son, has been happily married for twenty years. His wife was Miss Sarah Cantine Shady, a step-daughter of a noted New York physician. Miss Shady was a beautiful and accomplished girl, not wealthy and not closely identified with the "swell set." The family advisory committee gave its unqualified approval to Edwin Gould's choice.

The matrimonial bark of Howard Gould, the third son, has not had such smooth sailing. When quite a young man Howard Gould had an affair with Miss Odette Tyler, an actress considerably his senior. It was reported that they were engaged to be married. The family advisory committee was called together and the proposal was negatived. Howard went abroad, where he met another actress, Miss Katherine Clemmons, a California beauty. Once more the advisory committee met and the result was a threat to divert $5,000,000 of Howard's patrimony if he persisted in marrying Miss Clemmons. Howard did persist. In fact, he told the family to keep the $5,000,000 and straightaway he married the actress. The family afterward relented and let him keep all his inheritance. Howard also relented and in 1909 he was divorced from his wife after a sensational suit in which the names of William F. Cody ("Buffalo Bill") and Dustin Farnum, the actor, were freely mentioned.

Frank J. Gould, the youngest son of the financier, has also figured in domestic troubles that have brought him more than an average share of notoriety. In 1901 Frank Gould was hastily married to Miss Evelyn M. Kelly, grand-daughter of the late Eugene Kelly, who was for years Jay Gould's greatest business enemy. The marriage was not a happy one and in 1909 Mrs. Gould obtained a divorce. Almost immediately after the divorce Mr. Gould went abroad and married an actress of the same family name as his first wife, though the two were not related.

The matrimonial troubles of Miss Anna Gould, Jay Gould's youngest daughter, filled columns of space in the newspapers some years ago. Her marriage in 1895 to Count Boni de Castellane, an impecunious scion of a noble French family, was disapproved by the family council, though it gave a reluctant consent. In the fourth year of the union the cables told of the final parting of the Castellanes and that divorce proceedings would be instituted because of the intolerable cruelty and infidelity of the Count, committed while he was squandering $7,000,000 of the Jay Gould fortune which his American wife brought him. The final decree of divorce was granted in 1906 and some two years later the former Miss Anna Gould became the wife of the Duke de Talleyrand-Perigord, Prince de Sagan, a distant relative of Count Boni de Castellane.
