In choosing and using a soap for your "Little Fairy" you will find no soap so mild, so neutral, so agreeable to tender skins as FAIRY SOAP.

Being made from products that you could eat, FAIRY SOAP agrees with even the tender skin of a babe.

FAIRY SOAP

is white—pure—floating. It comes in a handy oval cake. We could charge you five times the price asked for FAIRY SOAP and we could add nothing to its quality.

In higher-priced soaps you are paying for high-priced perfume and fancy wrappers—not better soap.

GRAND CIRCUIT FOR 1913 DOES NOT PLEASE EVERYONE

Boston People Sore Because Readville Was Dropped in Favor of Windsor, Ont.—Montreal Favored

Commenting on the organization of the Grand Circuit for 1913 Frank G. Trott in the Boston Globe says,— While the longest and perhaps the strongest, chain the famous organization has ever had, it is certain to arouse considerable adverse comment from the men who have to pay shipping expenses. Even its makers cannot with justice claim that it is ideal, but as it offers 16 weeks of racing on tracks familiar to followers of the big line the doubling of so many miles will be accepted with the best possible grace.

READVILLE ACTION A SURPRISE

The dropping of Readville and the coming in of Windsor were the real surprises of the stewards' session. The passing of the two-minute track as a circuit member cannot fail to bring a feeling of something more than regret. Once the greatest racing ground in the land, its decline has been steady for the past few years, and only the devotion of Andy Welch to the sport has kept it going since the New England Trotting Horse Breeders' Association hauled down its flag.

The loss of Readville does not mean as much now as it would have a year ago, for then Rockingham was something of the future. Now it is of the present and a remarkable success.

Once the excellent plant at Salem, N.H., would hardly have served as a substitute for Readville, but in these days of quick and easy transportation by automobile Rockingham is almost as near Boston as the Norfolk County track was when built.

Windsor for years had the circuit's curtain-raiser, with ambitions to become a member, but the influence of the Detroit management was strong enough to keep the bars up.

In applying for dates this year the man controlling the track across the river from Detroit would have liked to have had a place next to the Blue Ribbon meeting, and it is not certain that he will accept the early date allotted him.

MONTREAL TURNED DOWN.

The application of Montreal was also turned down.

The Canadian city would have made a nice connecting link between the west and east had it been possible to arrange the dates satisfactorily. The stewards did more than arrange the make-up of the circuit last Tuesday. Their vote of deciding to bar horses from early closing events after winning a certain sum is a matter that will extend beyond the present year and there is a divided opinion as to the wisdom of the move.

INTERCOLLEGIATE HOCKEY SCHEDULE RE-ARRANGED

Mt. Allison Plays U. N. B. Here February 28—Local College Plays Acadia and King's Away From Home—Track Meet May 23—U. N. B. Drop Out

St. John, Jan. 21—The intercollegiate hockey league which was formed some time ago between U.N.B., Acadia, Mt. Allison and King's College, owing to the feeling on the part of some of the colleges that the schedule of twelve games drawn up at the time was too lengthy had to be readjusted, and accordingly another meeting of representatives of the colleges was held here last evening, the meeting taking place in the Royal.

The fixtures decided at during the previous meeting of the representatives of the college athletic association called for twelve games, or home and home. In so arranging the schedule, the representatives thought that in this way the financial phase of the question could be worked out more advantageously. The faculty of some of the institutions, however, were not in favor of such a lengthy schedule and at last night's meeting the previous number of games was cut in two reducing the league to six games. While the twelve game arrangement would have made the competition more keen, the continued mild weather, making hockey conditions a doubtful proposition may after all work out more satisfactorily.

The league will open Feb. 8th at Sackville, the initial contest being between Mount Allison and Acadia.

The other fixtures in the league are: Feb. 12, U.N.B. vs King's at Windsor; Feb. 14, U.N.B. vs Acadia at Wolfville; Feb. 19, Mt. Allison vs King's at Sackville; Feb. 25, U.N.B. vs Mt. Allison at Fredericton; Feb. 28, King's vs Acadia at Windsor.

The indications among the Maritime colleges are bright for a good season although a short one. The reports from the different institutions are that the teams in most cases are fast this year, and while the weather has been unfavorable for getting into Al trim, when the season opens all will be able to send good teams into the fight for intercollegiate honors.

ANNUAL TRACK MEET

At the meeting the annual track meet was also discussed and May 23 fixed as a tentative date. The present outlook is that only two of the colleges will take part in the contest this year, Mt. Allison and Acadia. U.N.B. which in the past has been a factor in this annual competition in field events, has decided to drop out of the contest this year as the closing date is so early that it would be a difficult matter to take part.

The elimination of U.N.B. from the track meet will be regretted by all the colleges, as the triangular contest has in the past been intensely keen.

EXTREMES OF FORTUNE FOR TWO OLD STARS

In 1885 and 1886 the St. Louis Browns, champions of the American Association, and the Chicago, champions of the National League, were participants in the World's Series. The Browns were managed by C. A. Comiskey, who also was captain and played first base. Adrian C. Anson led the Chicago and also covered the same position. Each drew a fat salary and ruled with an iron hand. Comiskey today is one of the richest baseball magnates in the game, while Anson is practically broke. Yet for a time it seemed as if these conditions would be reversed. Anson was drawing $15,000 a year from the Chicago Club and held a block of stock, when Comiskey, having scored a failure with the Chicago Brotherhood Club, admitted that he had lost his savings in that wildcat venture. Comiskey drew a fair salary as manager of the Cincinnati Reds several years later, as Anson began to lose his grip in the Windy City. Anson finally was released by the Chicago Club, whose offer to subscribe $50,000 to a benefit fund for the big Swede was promptly declined. Anson entered politics and was elected city clerk of Chicago. He opened a billiard hall and bowling alleys and prospered. He was on the top wave of popularity while Comiskey was left by the Cincinnati Club and was forced to seek employment in a minor league. Anson forgot all about baseball and plunged more deeply into politics. Soon he met with reverses and it wasn't long before he found himself on the rocks. Comiskey meanwhile had joined hands with Ban Johnson in projecting the American League, and wisely organized the Chicago White Sox. He made money from the outset, while Anson, compelled to fall back upon the National League for help, was appointed chief of umpires. Comiskey continued to reap the golden harvest but his old rival finally was turned adrift by the magnates of the older circuit so that he again had to shift for himself. He asked them to elect him president of the league, but they coldly turned him down. Comiskey built a $500,000 ball park and still had money. Anson got a job in McGraw's billiard parlor, giving exhibitions with the cue for a small salary. In these days of baseball prosperity Comiskey is rich, while the old captain of the Chicago is hustling as best he can. In view of Anson's long and honorable career, in recognition of his loyalty to the National League when the Brotherhood movement threatened to wreck it, it seems hard to believe that the magnates have forgotten Pop Anson, the man who helped so largely to put Chicago on the baseball map.

SPORTS OF ALL KINDS

Pitcher Cy Morgan will report to the Kansas City Club of the American Association in the belief that the Chicago American League Club will purchase his release.

A pretty fair ball team could be made up of managers next season. Stovall might play first, Evers, second, Tinker short, Huggins third, Clarke, Stahl and Birmingham the outfield. Doyin could catch and the pitching staff could be selected from Callahan, Griffith and McGraw. Any one who has seen McGraw pitch to the recruits down at Marlin knows that when it comes to twirling he is right there.

The veteran catcher Heinie Peitz of Cincinnati has been signed as coach by the St. Louis Nationals. Outfielder Ellis is to be turned over to the Los Angeles Club.

Manager John Evers of the Chicago National Club has contracted for the uniforms to be worn by his players during the coming season. The pencil stripes will not be seen on the home uniforms, which will be clear white. The road "togs" will be dark blue. On the breasts of the home uniforms the word Cubs will appear in blue letters and the same word in white letters will appear in the trailing suits. Plain blue military sweaters will go with both uniforms.

HARD TIMES FOR MAJOR CLUB MANAGERS ARE FORECASTED

Disappointments Bound to Occur—Evers Said to Have Trouble in Store For Him

J. Ed. Grillo in The Washington Star says editorially:

"There was an unusually large number of major league managers who lost their jobs last year. This year may see a repetition of a number of men in charge of teams making failures. There are bound to be disappointments, for there always will be a second division as the result of a race, and those clubs that finish at the last four usually reflect discredit on their manner. Evers and Huggins are not going to have an easy time of it if they happen to make a failure of their regimens. There are a lot of folks in Chicago who were and are still for Frank Chance. There is going to be a strong feeling against Evers unless he can keep his team in the race. What is true of Chicago is true of St. Louis, so far as Huggins is concerned. Bresnahan was popular and the individual who takes his place must deliver or be condemned."

It is possible, judging by what we hear from Los Angeles, that "Artie" Snaler will stand for the ordeal of "perfumed notes in gay New York, if John McGraw will offer a balm for his wounded sensibilities in the form of a bonus to his salary.

Speculation about Hal Chase's prospective position on the New York American Club, is Frank Chance should decide to take an active part in games, has led to shifting him to all kinds of positions. Wonderful player though he is, it might be that in some positions he would be a square peg in a round hole.

The local Curling Club chose a strong quartette of skips to go up against Carleton today. They are J. H. Hawthorn, T. A. Wilson, F. P. Hatt, L. C. Macnutt.
