HON. DR. PUGSLEY

service was not assured had interfered with getting the men. The admiral had also said that the large number of desertions by men who had enlisted was due to the fact that most of them came from inland points and were not accustomed to sea life. They had found it ungenial. The admiral had further stated that no effort had been made to enlist men from among the fishing population of the dominion but that when that effort was made plenty of suitable men would enlist. There was no doubt that this was the case. Canada today had eighty thousand fishermen. There were many sailing from Newfoundland who would come into a proper Canadian naval service.

Dr. Pugsley said that service in the Canadian navy could be made most attractive to the young men of the country and most useful to the dominion, both in the way of defence and in training men for useful occupations in private life.

He did not agree with the bargaining for representation in the councils of the empire as a condition for Canada's contribution for defence. What Canada did for defence should be done without demand for return, just as the British preference was granted. The other question should be settled apart and on its merits.

He declared that Premier Borden had been largely controlled in the course he had taken by the dictation of Henri Bourassa and his Nationalist friends.

RIGHT TO TAKE MONEY DIS- PUTED.

Mr. F. D. Monk had raised the constitutional question of the right of the Canadian government to send a great sum of money of the people of Canada for expenditure beyond the control of the Canadian government. He would not say that Mr. Monk was absolutely right according to the letter of the British North America Act, but certainly the framers of the Confederation never contemplated giving any Canadian government authority to take advantage of its majority to send millions of the hard earned taxes of the Canadian people out of the country for expenditure in a manner beyond their control. For one he protested against it and would go to the people of the country with every confidence that by their votes they would condemn it.

What he and the Liberal party stood for was an effective Canadian navy, ready to go to the aid of Britain in time of need. Dr. Pugsley concluded amid great Liberal applause.

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Terrible Kidney Disease

MOUNTAIN, ONT., DEC. 14TH, 1910

"For six years, I suffered from dreadful Kidney Disease. My legs and lower part of my body were fearfully swollen and the pain was awful. Five different doctors attended me and all said it was Kidney Trouble, and gave me no hope of getting well."

A kind neighbor told me to try "Fruit-a-tives"—and in a short time the swelling went down, the pain was easier, and then "Fruit-a-tives" cured me.

used Pete. He pushed back his hat and followed Elnora. She plunged fearlessly through bushes, over underbrush and across dead logs. One minute she was crying wildly that here was a big one, the next she was reaching for a limb above her head or on her knees overturning dead leaves under a hickory or oak tree or pushing aside black muck with her bare hands as she searched for buried pupae cases. For the first hour Pete bent back bushes and followed, carrying what Elnora discovered. Then he found one.

"Is this the kind of thing you are looking for?" he asked bashfully as he presented a wild cherry twig.

"Oh, Pete, that's a prometheal I didn't even hope to find one."

"What's the bird like?" asked Pete.

"Almost black wings," said Elnora.

"with clay colored edges and the most wonderful wine colored flush over the under side if it's a male and stronger wine above and below if it's a female. Oh, aren't I happy?"

"How would it do to make what you have into a bunch that we could leave here and come back for them?"

"That would be all right."

Relieved of his load, Pete began work. First he narrowly examined the cocoons Elnora had found. He questioned her as to what other birds would be like. He began to use the eyes of a trained woodman and hunter in her behalf. He saw several so easily and moved through the forest so softly that Elnora forgot the moths in watching him. Presently she was carrying the specimens and he was making the trips of investigation to see which was a cocoon and which a curled leaf, or he was down on his knees digging around stumps. As he worked he kept asking questions. What kind of logs were best to look beside, what trees were pupae cases most likely to be under, on what bushes did caterpillars spin most frequently? Time passed, as it always does when one's occupation is absorbing.

When the Sinton had taken Mrs. Comstock home they stopped to see if Elnora was safe. She was not at home, and they had not seen her along the way. Mrs. Comstock called about the edge of her woods and received no reply. Then Sinton turned and drove back to the Limberlost. He left Margaret and Mrs. Comstock holding the team and entertaining Billy and entered the swamp.

Came Out Almost Facing Pete Corson.

Elnora and Pete had left a wide trail behind them. Before Sinton and Margaret of calling he heard voices and approached with some caution. Soon he saw Elnora, her flushed face beaming as she bent with an armload of twigs and branches and talked to a kneeling man.

"Now go cautiously," she was saying. "I am just sure we will find an imperial here. It's their very kind of a place. There! What did I tell you! Isn't that splendid? Oh, I am so glad you came with me!"

Sinton stood and stared in speechless astonishment, for the man had risen, brushed the dirt from his hands and held out to Elnora a small shining dark pupa case. As his face swung into view Sinton almost cried out, for he was the man of all others Wesley knew with whom he most feared for Elnora's safety. She had him on his knees digging pupae cases for her from the loose swamp loam.

"Elnora!" called Sinton. "Elnora!"

"Oh, Uncle Wesley," cried the girl, "see what luck we've had! I know we have a dozen and a half cocoons, and we have three pupae cases. It's much harder to get the cases because you have to dig for them, and you can't see where to look. But Pete is fine at it. He's found three, and he says he will keep watch along the roads and through the woods as he hunts. Isn't that splendid of him? Uncle Wesley, there is a college over there on the western edge of the swamp. Look closely and you can see the great dome up among the clouds."

"I should say you have had luck," said Sinton, striving to make his voice natural. "But I thought you were not coming to the swamp?"

"Well, I wasn't," said Elnora, "but I couldn't find many anywhere else, honest I couldn't, and just as soon as I came to the edge I began to see them here. I kept my promise. I didn't come in alone. Pete came with me. He's so strong. He isn't afraid of anything, and he's perfectly splendid to locate cocoons. He's found half of these. Come on, Pete. It's getting dark now, and we must go."

They started for the trail, Pete carrying the cocoons. He left them at the case, while Elnora and Sinton went on to the carriage together.

"Elnora Comstock, what does this mean?" demanded her mother.

"It's all right. One of the neighbors was with her, and she got several dollars' worth of stuff," interposed Sinton.
