HON. MR. FIELDING SETS ENGLISH TORIES STRAIGHT

Tells Them Reciprocity Agreement Was Not a "Treaty," as They State—Every Part of the Empire was Accorded the Same Terms as the United States—Ex-
Finance Minister's Letter in the London Times

Hon. W. S. Fielding has the following letter in The London Times of January 10:

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir.—Considering the very wide and always friendly interest manifested in colonial, and particularly Canadian, affairs for some years past, it is surprising that there should be so many grave misconceptions respecting the most important events in the Canadian dominion. One of these misconceptions was the subject of an interesting letter in your issue of December 20 from Sir Thomas Berridge, published under the headlines "Unionist Policy—the Canadian Argument."

Sir Thomas Berridge very properly takes exception to a statement made by a gentleman of much prominence in English public life. "It seems impossible (says Sir Thomas Berridge), in the hard straits to which they are driven, for Unionist speakers to avoid introducing controversial Canadian politics and placing before their British audiences an entirely erroneous view of the reasons which led a majority of the Canadian people to reject the reciprocity treaty with the United States. Here is Mr. F. E. Smith, in his Dudley speech, referring to 'the splendid bribe which the United States offered to Canada,' and stating that 'the Conservative party of Canada took their lives in their hands on behalf of England' in opposing this 'splendid bribe.'"

Sir Thomas Berridge justly points out that this is an entirely erroneous view of the Canadian question. He might easily have emphasized his contention by a little analysis of the results of the Canadian election, when we are told, the Conservative party of Canada "took their lives in their hands on behalf of England." If please observe the if—the last contest in Canada was on the question of being for or against England, there are some interesting facts which must furnish food for thought. Let me note briefly a few of them:

In three of the four great divisions of Canada (1, Maritime Provinces; 2, Quebec; 3, Ontario; 4, Western Provinces) majorities of the people decided against England.

In five of the nine provinces of Canada majorities of the people decided against England.

In the County of Halifax, repre-

It is a positive fact that Pape's Cold Compound, taken every two hours, until three consecutive doses are taken, will end the Grippe and break up the most severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach or limbs.

It promptly relieves the most miserable headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges. sent by the new prime minister, he was unable to carry a colleague with him in his struggle "on behalf of England." His fellow member for that old English county (including the City of Halifax) was elected against England.

In the Province of Nova Scotia, represented by the new prime minister, a majority of the people decided against England.

In the whole Dominion about 48 1/2 per cent. of the men who voted decided against England.

If this were the real state of the case, if very nearly one-half of a people hitherto noted for their loyalty to all things British, abandoned the faith of their fathers and proclaimed themselves enemies of Great Britain, it seems to me that Englishmen should find in the Canadian elections cause for the deepest sorrow rather than for the exultation that is so frequently heard from certain quarters.

Sir Thomas Berridge has done well in calling attention to the mischievous errors that are so widespread respecting public opinion in Canada. But it is unfortunate that at the very moment when he was removing a grave misconception and endeavoring to place matters correctly before the British public he was the unconscious instrument of publishing another idea equally erroneous and only a little less mischievous. Sir Thomas Berridge writes:

"In addressing the Canadian Society of New York in December, 1911, when I was privileged to be present, Mr. Borden made it quite clear that the reason for the rejection of the reciprocity treaty was a determination on the part of the majority of the Canadian people to be perfectly free and unfettered in regard to their fiscal arrangements and not to make these fiscal arrangements the subject of any treaty or agreement which would in any way interfere with their power to impose or remove tariffs in such manner as was best suited to the interests of Canada. I do not know that anything Mr. Borden has said, before or since, in any way recedes from this perfectly plain and intelligible position, a position as far removed as are the poles asunder from that stated by Mr. F. E. Smith."

It is quite clear that Sir Thomas Berridge is under the impression that what he calls the "reciprocity treaty with the United States" contained some provisions which interfered with the freedom of the Canadian people to impose or remove tariffs in such manner as was best suited to the interests of Canada. He will, I am sure, be surprised to learn that in this he is entirely wrong, and that the agreement in question did not contain anything of the kind in any shape or form.

Negotiations between Canada and other countries in relation to commercial affairs were not unusual. They were not confined to the questions with the United States. The desire of Canada to obtain admission for her products into foreign markets on favorable terms was general. In the more than fifteen years during which I held the position of Canadian minister of finance it became my duty to carry on, sometimes alone, sometimes in association with a colleague, negotiations respecting tariffs with numerous countries, and out of such negotiations came amicable arrangements, either by treaty or good understanding, not only with the United States, but also with France, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Japan. If the arrangement with the United States differed from the others in any way, it certainly did not in the direction which Sir Thomas Berridge supposes. He refers twice to the "reciprocity treaty" with the United States. He may be surprised to learn that no treaty was made. Every treaty does necessarily bind a country for a specified time. In the case of the arrangement with France it would have been quite correct to say that it tied the hands of Canada in tariff matters for a time, because that was a treaty made in solemn diplomatic form. But that treaty, which did bind Canada and the empire, was approved by an overwhelming majority of the Canadian parliament, including the present prime minister. Thus, when there was a real binding of Canada's hands little or no exception was taken to such a course. But in the case of the reciprocity question with the United States, not only was there no treaty, and no such binding as Sir Thomas Berridge has been led to suppose, but there was a very emphatic declaration to the contrary. The agreement took the form of an exchange of letters between the Canadian ministers and the United States secretary of state, and the letter written by the Canadians setting forth what had been agreed upon distinctly stated that the agreement was to hold only as long as both parties found it satisfactory, and that both the parliament of Canada and the congress of the United States reserved complete freedom to arrange their tariffs from time to time as they deemed best.

I hope it has been made clear that in the Canadian elections there was no question of anybody being for or against England and that the reciprocity agreement contained not a line that interfered with Canada's fiscal freedom.

I do not venture on any general discussion of the reciprocity question for several reasons. First, the sub-

ALL YOU NEED IS A CASCARET TONIGHT

No Headache, Bilious Stomach, Coated
Tongue or Constipated Bowels
By Morning

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out of the system all of the constipated waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love to take Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

ject is not now a fresh one and I do not suppose the British public would feel interested in any extended observations on it. Secondly, I do not wish to ask the use of your columns for the discussion of the "controversial Canadian politics" very properly deprecated by Sir Thomas Berridge. Thirdly, I realize that the present brief discussion arises out of the conflict between the rival political parties in the United Kingdom, and into that I have no wish to enter. I therefore confine my remarks to the two important points raised by Sir Thomas Berridge's letter.

Yours faithfully,

RECIPROCITY REPEAL SETBACK TO CANADA

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 19—Canada's relations and feelings toward the United States as impressed upon the people of the British Dominion were described in a forcible address by Mr. Justice William Riddell of Toronto, delivered at the annual dinner of the Canadian Society of Philadelphia, held in the roof gardens of the Bellevue Stratford last night.

That the abrogation in 1866 of the reciprocity treaty of 1854, between the United States and Canada delayed the progress and prosperity of the Dominion for many years while new markets for the products of the country were being found was one of the principal declarations of the distinguished jurist. Another was that Canada is satisfied to remain a Dominion.

Every Province of this country was referred to by the speaker, who pointed out to Philadelphians born on Canadian soil the advantages of the various sections.

EFFECTS OF AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Mr. Justice Riddell asserted that the revolutionary war was one of the greatest boons for the United Kingdom, and was responsible for present conditions in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

"Canada has shaken off the lethargy and have moved onward and upward. Everywhere in the Province can be seen signs of progress. Land does not make a nation. It is the high-minded men who are citizens or subjects."

THE FRENCH-CANADIANS
"I cannot tolerate men who say that French-Canadians are a source of regret to the Dominion. We are proud of that sturdy race, and they have helped much to make the country what it is today."

"Canada is as free as any country on the face of the globe. After reciprocity agreement, which, by the way, was marked by Champagne and drunkenness, the country received a setback." The speakers then declared that the country had lived down the disadvantages it had been put to, to after the abrogation in 1866.

Before Mr. Justice Riddell was called upon the diners drank a toast to the President of the United States, and then sang "The Star-spangled Banner." The King was then given, and "God Save the King" was rendered.
