TORIES FEAR AN ELECTION SAYS DR. PUGSLEY

day and night, man after man on the Conservative side being placed in the chair with a view, contrary to the rule of the house, of declaring the opposition amendments out of order, and finally the expedient was resorted to of ignoring Liberal members who had the floor and declaring carried clauses of the bill then under consideration.

In these circumstances when the Liberal members saw the unlawful and revolutionary attempts on the part of the majority to tamper with the rights of the minority all the Liberal members on that famous Saturday night, which will be long remembered, rose as one man and protested against the tyrannical course which the government was pursuing.

As a result of our action the government was compelled to desist in the midst of disorder and ended in the speaker taking the chair and in the government afterwards abandoning their improper and tyrannical tactics. It was a great victory for parliamentary rights and for the liberty of speech. Subsequently, as readers of The Telegraph know, a resolution of closure was passed and here again the government made the great mistake of thinking that the people would tolerate their high handed and tyrannical methods.

INSULT TO LAURIER.

"Sir Wilfrid rose to move an amendment to the resolution of closure and after he had risen and had been recognized by the speaker as having the floor, the Conservative majority of the House on the motion of the member for Hastings, moved that Mr. Hazen, who had risen after Sir Wilfrid, should have precedence. This was done for the purpose of preventing Sir Wilfrid making any answer to the resolution for closure. It was a most tyrannical course and made the resolution of closure not like an ordinary rule of the House, in the framing of which both parties have always had the opportunity of joining, but was a resolution of the majority designed to prevent the opposition from having any hand in the framing of amendment to the rules. The bill was finally passed by the application of the guillotine and went on the way to the senate.

"In that body the bill met with a fate for which it was destined by reason of its iniquitous conception and the manner in which it had been forced through the Lower House against the protests of the representatives of practically one-half of the people of Canada and by a vote of a majority representative of only three provinces out of the nine provinces constituting the Dominion of Canada. The senate, however, did not declare its final objection to the bill but took the ground that it would not be proper to pass it until it had been submitted to the judgment of the country."

A SHAM AID PRETENCE.

As to the result of the senate's action, Hon. Mr. Pugsley said it was impossible to say.

"The government do not want an election. The Conservative members do not want an election for the reason that they are afraid to go to the people. They realize that if the question were submitted to the country they would go down to defeat. They are, therefore, prepared to submit to any humiliation rather than appeal to the judgment of the people. Whether they, however, can long resist taking such a course remains to be seen. The fact that the members of the government have intimated that they will wait until there is a Conservative majority in the senate to carry the proposal for contribution shows what a sham and pretence was their contention that an emergency had arisen, and that it was necessary to contribute three battle-ships to the imperial navy in order to ensure the safety of the empire. If they really believed this, and thought that the people would sustain them, they would dissolve parliament at once, in which case the election could be all over in three weeks and if the judgment of the country was found to be in their favor when the bill went again to the senate it would be passed without delay.

"I am of the opinion, however, that many members of the Conservative party in parliament and some members of the government as well have become convinced as a result of the discussion which took place, that the policy of establishing a Canadian navy is the best for Canada and for the empire, that it will be less likely to lead to friction such as would result from the policy of contribution. They would like to throw the Nationalists to the winds and proceed to carry out the resolution of 1909. At the present moment, however, Mr. Pelletier and Mr. Nantel are the bosses of the situation. How long this will be so remains to be seen.

CONCERNING HIGHWAY ACT.

"With regard to the Highway Act" Dr. Pugsley went on to say, "an attempt is being made by Conservatives, and it is a very improper attempt, to convince the people that the senate killed this bill for granting aid to highways. This is entirely incorrect, as all that the senate did was to amend the bill in order to provide that grants be paid over to governments of different provinces in amounts based upon the population of the several provinces as determined by each decennial census. If this amendment had passed it would simply be carrying out what the minister of railways alleged was his intention and the expenditure would be made subject to a standard of road making to be approved by the minister. Unless the government had the design of using the expenditure for improper motives, it is impossible to conceive of any reason why they refused to concur in the amendment of the senate and asked the supporters in the House of Commons to kill the bill. The first section which the senate struck out was entirely unnecessary and would lead to complications because it would have permitted the dominion government to engage in road making in a province, a work which everyone would admit had much better be left to the provincial authorities aided by dominion grants. The government was apparently not sincere in their desire to appropriate monies to the different provincial governments, because when the supplementary estimates were under consideration and after the highway bill was killed, Mr. Carvell moved that the words 'under the Highway Aid Act' should be struck out as not quite proper by reason of the bill not becoming law. He did this so that the minister of railways would be authorized to pay over the money to the provincial governments. The government and its majority very improperly ruled the amendment out of order and the result is that the approval of the money grant cannot be made, a result, I think, which the government was glad to see brought about, in the hope that they will gain more by having a grievance against the senate than by paying over the money to the province."

WAS WEAK AND RUN DOWN. NOT ABLE TO DO HER WORK.

Many women get run down, and are unable to look after their household duties, owing to their nervous system becoming unstrung. Day in and day out they have to go through the same routine of work, sweeping, dusting, cooking, etc. No wonder their work gets on the nerves and they become run down. When a woman gets into this state there is only one thing for her to do, and that is, to get something that will build up her system.

For this purpose there is not an equal to Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. Their restorative action is felt on every organ and tissue of the body, and in a short time the weakness will give place to strength and vitality, and make life worth living.

Mrs. Henry McIntosh, Oliver, N.S., writes:—"I would recommend Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills to anyone who is weak and run down. I was not able to do my work, nor rest at night for four years. After taking seven boxes, I am entirely cured, and can recommend them to anyone suffering from heart or nerve trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box; 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
