For Two Years SUFFERED SEVERE PAIN IN THE BACK.

Many people fail to understand the significance of a lame, weak, sore or aching back.

When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Take notice to the warning and cure the backache on the first sign, for if you don't do this, serious complications are sure to arise, and perhaps develop into Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, the three most deadly forms of kidney trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the back and prevent any further trouble from the kidneys.

Mrs. D. J. McInnis, Carleton, P.E.I., writes:—"For two years I had a severe pain in my back. I was so bad that when I would stoop down I could not straighten up for quite a time. I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and they helped me so I kept on using them until I had used three boxes, and now I am completely cured. I think they are the only remedy for disordered kidneys."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents a box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Millburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

EGG ROLLING AT THE WHITE HOUSE

Washington, D. C., March 24—An army of infantry today invaded the White House grounds and remained in possession while President Wilson, his family and friends stood upon the portico of the executive mansion and made no effort to conceal their admiration and enjoyment of the spectacle. The "army" consisted of the whole juvenile population of Washington, or as much as it could be crowded on the White House lawns, and still leave room for the egg rolling festival which for years has been a fixture on Easter Monday. From 9 o'clock in the morning until late in the afternoon the youngsters frolicked around the grounds, rolling their colored eggs and playing games. They were given the absolute run of the place. No grown folk were admitted to the grounds unless accompanied by children, and there were the usual amusing incidents of small boys hiring themselves out in relays to inquisitive adults who desired to get a close view of the quaint and time-honored custom of Easter Monday in the national capital.

MAZERALL SETTLEMENT

Mazerall Settlement, March 19—Although late in the season the Valentine has appeared on the scene again.

The folks in this vicinity are about through hailing and good that they are, for the travelling is 'bad enough.

Mr. F. Smith of Lincoln passed through here a few days ago.

Mr. Alex Goodine has invested in a cream separator.

There is much doubt if Sandy of King Settlement has the right kind of a mineral rod to locate the pot of gold in the Lower Hanwell, but we wish him success just the same and if he has hope he will share it with the poor.

Mrs. H. Mazerall who is visiting her daughter in Fredericton, is expected home Easter.

The Grand drawing of prizes in aid of St. Patrick's church, New Market, will take place about the last of March and we are wondering who will be the lucky one.

FLORENCE FAIRBANKS ON FADS AND FASHION

New York, March 22—Contrary to the predictions of some fashion writers the long and narrow silhouette is still in vogue and there is to be found but little of the predicted fullness. On a tour through the fashionable shops and among the resorts where fashionable women gather, one may even see skirts that are narrower than most of the skirts six months ago. The slashes are deeper, too, and run higher up. Women have found that this slash is an absolute necessity for convenience in walking. At first the material used to overlap at the cut but now this has been done away with and the cuts are boldly displayed.

Draperies are used in many cases but in such a not to interfere with the slimness of the silhouette. Some of the best skirts have drapings that appear to have slipped off from the hips and lodged near the hem. The fullness is invariably up and down and the gathers run at right angles to the length.

Black is still a great favorite. The combination of black and white is used less extensively and preference is given to all black models. Some of the black tailormades of dressy or light materials have stitchings of heavy white silk. The object is principally to lengthen the figure, as the lines run up and down. Broche de laine or brocade woollen in one of the novelties. Brocade is also found in cotton effects, also crepe de Chine and silk.

Yellows were such a success during the winter that the color has been adopted for tailormades and afternoon gowns. The fashionable yellows are decidedly outspoken in color like khaki, copper, lemon, corn and brass which is a new shade promising to be very popular in the spring. Some of the yellows like sulphur are extremely aggressive. For street wear some of the best linings are in tulle, a greenish-yellow color not quite so loud as some of the other yellows.

Skirts have shortened a trifle and the jacket is decidedly shorter in some cases by four inches. The square effect in front is not seen unless one wishes to cling to the classic style. The new cut is either cut-away or it is round. If pockets are put in they are rounded likewise. Some of the jackets show revers on one side only, others no revers at all. The effect of the latter is very good. Braid of a dark color or even black borders some of the jackets, and runs about the plaits of skirts, in the latter case helping to produce the long lines.

While the skirt is shorter it is not markedly so. The thing most sought is that the feet and ankles should show when the wearer steps out. The best of the skirts have the slit in front running up half a yard or more. When one stands still the opening is hardly noticeable. It is in walking that the slit becomes apparent. Sometimes the slit comes at one side sometimes at both sides, sometimes at the back, according to the whim of the wearer or of the dressmaker.

Woolen tailored costumes, generally reserved for journeys and other practical purposes are made with skirts short enough to show the shoes, and wide enough to allow an easy stride. The fullness is cunningly hidden under a plait or panel, and thus ample width is gained, while preserving slender silhouette.

A skirt which easily accomplishes these important points is achieved by the use of two straight breadths, simply lapped about the figure with no seams. The lapping edges are rounded and trimmed with stitching, and a cluster of buttons is set in each corner. The laps, while unconfined except at the waist, are wide enough to conceal the leg. Hanging loose and straight from the shoulders the biplong coat of this costume has rounded corners to match the skirt, and the narrow fronts are secured by one button set at the bust line.

For hot Summer days there are one-piece dresses, built from dark plaided taffetas, with a belt or sash of plain silk selected to match one of the colors in the plaid. Invariably these have white collars and cuffs or frills. The blousing corsage closes in front and a cunning little handkerchief pocket is posed on the left side. Many of the skirres have have pockets, sometimes hidden in the plaits, sometimes openly displayed as patch pockets.

Short loose separate coats, deepening into a rounded point at the back, of red, bright green, or blue cloth are chosen for seaside or country wear with thin white dresses.

The new waistline, much higher in front than at the back that has been gradually evolved during the past few seasons, is now strongly emphasized in coats which lengthen narrowly at the back rounding from a high bust line above a short waistcoat or a high folded girdle. That it is excessively ugly and awkward does not matter in the least. One of the French designers of fashion carries this line into skirts as well as cutting them much shorter in the front than at the back. In a long skirt this effect is rather good, adding significance to a pretty foot.

Quite the correct thing with woolen tailored costumes is a plain shirtwaist with a masculine finish to the cuffs collar and cravat. With silk tailleurs one may indulge in the prettiness of blouses of fine crepe finished with open necks and flat turnover collars or the more extreme Medici collars in modified form, of fine lace or plaited tulle wired into place.

The next boxing show at Racine, Wis., will have as the star card a battle between Jesse Willard and Jack Heinan.

LABORER'S WIFE IS CUT FOR MAYOR

Topeka, Kas., March 24—The municipal campaign that ended today has been the most exciting that Topeka has experienced in many years. Tomorrow the voters will engage in a primary to determine the candidates to be voted for at the coming city election. The interest of the public is confined almost wholly to the mayoralty race, in which a woman is striving to win the nomination against four candidates of the sterner sex. The woman is Mrs. May Taylor. She is the wife of a laboring man and before her candidacy for mayor was unknown to Topeka people.

At the beginning of the campaign the politicians were inclined to treat Mrs. Taylor's candidacy as a joke. But they soon awakened to the fact that she was putting up a very serious fight and that the joke might be on them when the primary ballots were counted. Mrs. Taylor is making a strong bid for the vote of the working classes. She stands for a uniform wage and minimum work hours for all city employees. She promises to refund to the city all her salary above the minimum wage fixed for all employees. Her supporters believe she has a good chance to win.
