THE HUNGARIAN METHOD

The resignation of the Hungarian cabinet has just been announced, the reason for which is contained in the following despatch:

"The Hungarian cabinet, of which Dr. Ladislas von Lukacs is premier, has decided to resign. The determination is due to the acquittal of Deputy Desacs in a libel suit against him by the premier, whom M. Desacs accused of corruption and characterized as 'the world's greatest Panamist'—a Panamist being one of the persons involved in the corrupt transactions by which the Panama Canal Company (1879-93) obtained political assistance.

"The court found that M. Desacs had established proof that Premier Lukacs at the conclusion of certain contracts with the Bank of Hungary had accepted a sum exceeding $750,000; and that, although the premier derived no personal pecuniary benefit from this money, which was devoted to promoting party purposes 'from a legal and moral point of view, it is not permissible for a minister to accept any money from any concern doing business with the state.'

"For these reasons the court held that the statement made by Deputy Desacs were privileged."

What old-fashioned people these Hungarians are anyway! Last winter a member of the Ontario legislature charged that a member of the government of that province, Hon. W. J. Hanna, provincial secretary, had accepted a contribution from a contractor who had a claim against the province. The charge was admitted, but instead of the government or any member of it resigning, the member making the charge was severely censured for doing so.

Whither are we drifting in Canada in the matter of public morals? Just imagine a government in Canada, especially a Tory government, resigning for such a trivial thing like that.

ULSTER AND HOME RULE

To British sympathizers with Ulster's resistance to Home Rule a constant source of embarrassment is, of course, the oft-repeated declaration of Sir Edward Carson and his associates that, general election or no general election, Ulster will resist just the same. This is too much for the constitution-loving Briton and even Lord Willoughby de Broke now thinks it prudent to refrain from associating himself with the extravagant threats of his Ulster friends. The well known "die-hard" peer is chairman of the committee of the "British League for the Support of Ulster and the Union," an organization launched some little time ago with a great flourish of trumpets. Evidently support has not been forthcoming quite as freely as people were at first led to suppose, for Lord Willoughby de Broke is busily engaged sending round the hat on its behalf. He has issued a circular in which he insists that it is the duty of British Unionists to convince the government that they are as much in earnest as the Ulstermen and intend to stand by them. It is doubtful, however, whether they will ever succeed in convincing the Ulstermen themselves for Lord Willoughby de Broke makes it clear that the league only proposes to "stand by them until at least we have had an opportunity of voting against the repeal of the Union." This is, of course, a wise reservation to make in appealing to the British public but it will not evoke much enthusiasm in Ulster.

BRANCH BANKS

As President D. R. Wilkie intimated at the annual meeting of the Imperial Bank of Canada the other day the continued expansion of branch banks is not proving to be all beer and skittles. He pointed out that in place of more branches there would in all probability be less later on. In truth the smaller places in Canada, and some of the larger ones, appear to be very much overbanked. The Toronto Saturday Night thinks that the chartered banks of Canada today are, as regards branches, in much the same position as the churches, there are too many of them per capita. The uniform person is as likely as not to run away with the idea that the average small town branch bank of which there are literally hundreds in Canada, are all making money. As a matter of fact most of them are not doing any such thing according to those in the banking business themselves and who should know. Here, for instance, is briefly stated a typical case in one of the smaller Western Canada centres, the figures being those of a prominent bank official: Deposits from the public $50,000, of which sum $35,000 is loaned at 7 per cent interest, the remaining $15,000 being retained for contingencies. From other sources $500 additional income is secured making a total gross income for the year $2,950. On the other hand, rent, clerk hire (three clerks), taxes, postage, etc., eats up exactly $5,100 a net loss, for the year of $2,150. Duplicate this instance many times over and you have according to this bank official, the position of the banks as regards a great many of their branches. Is it any wonder then that the president of the Imperial predicts less branches in place of more?

WHAT IT MEANS

What Mr. Borden's proposed contribution to the British Admiralty really amounts to may be realized from the following figures taken from the financial statements of the several provinces of the Dominion for the fiscal year 1911. They cover the total expenditure of these provinces for the year and as such include all the outlays on account of the carrying on of the government, the salaries of ministers, members and officials, the sums spent on education, agriculture, the work of factory inspection, the management of public lands, mines and forests, provincial fisheries, the administration of the liquor license laws, the establishment and maintenance of hospitals, asylums and public charities, roads, immigration, the administration of marriage, property, civil and criminal laws, the interest on provincial debt and speaking generally, all the functions pertaining to the provincial governments which include in some of the provinces the operation of railroads, telephones, hydro-electric power, prison farms, etc.

Halifax Echo:—The amount of advertising that Nova Scotia has already received as a result of Longfellow's Evangeline is, of course, incalculable. Thousands of travellers visit the Province each year expressly for the purpose of worshipping at the shrine of the Acadian maiden. But the end is not yet. Evangeline is to be dramatized.

Regina Leader:—Mr. Borden's somersault on this navy question can only be explained and is so explained on the ground of his alliance with the anti-Canadian Navy Nationalists.

St. Thomas Journal:—No one need look for a general election until the Government has had time to go gerrymandering the country that an entirely new map of the political ridings will be necessary.

inspect a number of institutions for the care of the insane. Mrs. MacNeill will accompany him on his transatlantic trip.

Dr. MacNeill is a native of Prince Edward Island and a graduate of McGill University. He has been a resident of Saskatchewan for about eight years and has achieved success not only in the practice of his profession but in the arena of politics. Five years ago he was elected to the Saskatchewan legislature for Hanley as a supporter of the Liberal government of Hon. Walter Scott, and was re-elected in 1912 by a greatly increased majority. The doctor is planning to leave for the Old Country about the middle of July.

ENQUIRING FOR LAND

A prominent Toronto financial and real estate company has written the Publicity Commissioner stating it is their desire to purchase some desirable land in Fredericton, which they are anxious to put on the market. This enquiry for land is the direct result of the advertising the Publicity Committee is now carrying on.

Mr. W. C. Mebner of the archives department is in the city the guest of his sister, Mrs. Ketchum.

STOLE FROM PARENTS TO BET ON RACE

(Montreal Star.)

Willie Kazoo (that is not his real name but it will do for the present), has got the racing bug stuck fast beneath the little peaked cap which he wears far back on his head. If he had his ambition he'd be a jockey, but as it is he steals money to bet on the races, gets caught by his indignant father and is hauled up before Judge Choquet in Juvenile Court.

On Monday Willie Kazoo suddenly disappeared from his comfortable home and with him went $20 which his mother had been keeping to buy groceries. Out to the Blue Bonnets went the boy, who, by the way, is only thirteen years old and out to the Blue Bonnet went the cash that he had purloined.

With his heart beating a patter in time with the music made by the tapping of the horses' hoofs on the turf, Willie Kazoo could not forbear to take a flier on the horse which had won his favor. Somehow he placed some of the money and somehow, strange to say, he won six dollars.

As soon as he realized that he had made six dollars, Willie Kazoo decided that he could do this every day of his life and therefore be independent of his family. Thereupon he came into the city, bought a .38-calibre pistol and put up at a hotel near the G.T.R. station.

On the morning he again started out for the races but this time he found instead of the horse of his choice his father with an ominous frown bedarkening his brow. The father said little but brought his delinquent child into Juvenile Court.

Mrs. Kazoo, Willie's mother, wept copious tears to see her son before the seat of justice in court yesterday. Judge Choquet remanded the boy for eight days.
