ANOTHER U.S.A. BUCKLE.

Another belt-buckle, bearing the United States' coat-of-arms, has been discovered. City Auditor J. D. McKay discovered this in his garden, George street. It is exactly the same as that found by Rev. The theory is advanced that the buckles were part of the equipment of deserters or "sneak-dadlers" from the United States army at that time of the American Civil War. At that time many men enlisted in the United States army to get the large cash bounties offered and then deserted to British territory.
