INTERCOLONIAL TRAINMEN EXONERATED FROM BLAME

called and of finding the injured man in the station waiting-room dead. The lower jaw was shattered and blood was pouring from mouth and right ear. Death, no doubt, was due to fracture of the base of the skull and hemorrhage.

C. A. SAMPSON.

Mr. Chas. Sampson stated that he was at the station seeing a friend off. The train did not start as soon as "All aboard" was shouted. He notified six or eight men near the waiting-room door whom he thought were going to board the train. They were talking loudly. The train moved out and they made for the first-class car and the second-class car, which were next the engine. One man slipped and almost fell but kept hold. Another slipped and fell near the train. The latter was brought to a stop and a man was pulled from beneath the train.

BRAKEMAN DAVIDSON.

Brakeman John Davidson said the train started after "All aboard" had been called several times. Witness ran toward the engine to board the front step of the second-class car and as he did so saw two men running from up-town to catch train. He did not believe they came down the station platform. The foremost man caught the "grab-iron," slipped lost his balance and went under the train, the oil-boxes striking him. The third wheel of the car passed over his neck. Witness signalled with his lantern to stop the train. The train was stopped in about ten feet. With the help of an unknown man witness pulled the man from beneath the train.

GORDON HOVEY.

Gordon Hovey of Marysville, stated that he met the deceased at the Waverley Hotel. As far as witness knew Love had not been drinking liquor. Love had a sore leg and limped. The two went to the I.C.R. station. When they were about twenty feet from the platform the train began to move. Love ran toward the front steps of the second-class car and witness toward the rear steps of the same car. Witness, while waiting to jump at the steps saw Love fall beneath the train. He ran toward him and saw him dragged four or five feet. The brakeman was waving a lantern and shouting to stop the train and witness was also shouting. The train stopped quickly. Witness saw no one else but Love trying to board the train and attached no blame to the railway officials.

THE VERDICT.

The verdict brought in by the jury was as follows:

"That we find that Garnett Love came to his death at the I.C.R. station, Fredericton, on the evening of January 1, 1913, by attempting to board a moving train, thereby falling under the train and being run over. From the evidence given we are satisfied that no blame is to be attached to the men in charge of the train. The jury is of the opinion that the I.C.R. station and adjoining tracks at Fredericton are not sufficiently guarded and recommend that a system of gates be placed there.

The inquest was conducted by Coroner Weaver. The jury was composed of Coun. A. B. Neill, James Davidson, Hubbard Niles, A. H. Sewell, Gilbert Henry, George Carrigy and George Brown.

POLLARDS', GLOBE TROTTERS.

Everybody who has visited the theatres during recent years remembers the Pollard Juvenile Opera Company, which enjoyed such a wide vogue throughout this continent. Well, the youngsters are coming back after six years in other lands. They are coming back with their wits sharpened, their ideas broadened and their careers assured. Every one of the young folks who compose this latest company is tried and true and has a training which would entitle him or her to a position in the front ranks of the grown-up professional companies. The repertoire this season is delightfully complete and contains operas and musical comedies for the most part new to this vicinity. There are some thirty-five or forty of the Pollards this season and the scenic productions are even more complete than heretofore. The Pollards open their engagement of two nights commencing Tuesday, January 7th, with the tuneful musical comedy, "The Toy Maker."

REMARKABLE WEATHER

The present winter is said to be the most remarkable on record for the vagaries of the weather. Upon New Year's Day, Mr. Ezra Cronkhite of Southampton, while driving through Temperance Vale near the home of Mr. James K. Pinder, M. P. P., saw willow trees bearing fully developed catkins or "pussy-willows." The like at this season of the year was never known before.
