CHINA HAD WORLD'S OLDEST CURRENCY

(“Wall Street Journal.”)

Now that the 3,000 bankers and economists are wracking their brains over the thirty-two varieties of banking reform questions, it is worth while remarking that the youngest republic of the world has probably forgotten more on the currency question than all of the ilk of congressmen and economists ever knew. In speaking of China's bank note currency Dr. Louis Livingston Seaman of this city, president of the China Society of America, says that China has already developed a highly creditable currency “at a time when the ancestry of the six-powers syndicate were groping in the darkness of feudalism.”

Dr. Seaman was a strong advocate of Chinese recognition and the efforts of the Chinese society had not a little to do with the early step on the part of our government. It was he who presented to the British Museum a few years ago a Chinese bank note issued early in the Ming dynasty, which began in 1368. For a somewhat similar looking note the museum paid £500.

The note measures 9 by 13 inches and is, apparently, printed from wooden blocks. It calls for “one string of cash” and bears the following rather curious legend: “Government money order of Ming dynasty, current anywhere under heaven. Government money order issued by the board of revenue in accordance with their memorial approved by the throne. This note shall be accepted as copper cash. Counterfeiters thereof will be executed. Persons giving information of counterfeiters will be rewarded with taels 250 and in addition, will receive property belonging to the criminal.” This was signed with the emperor's name.

FLORENCE FAIRBANKS ON FADS AND FASHION

New York, Aug. 2.—It is believed the novelty of the fall styles will not be so much in form as in the beauty of materials and their colorings. In the autumn frocks the bodices will be transparent, semi-decollete, and simply trimmed with fichus, frills and collars.

The latest novelty in furs shown by New York dealers for the coming season is dyed fox skins of pale yellow and dark gold.

Drapery, it is expected, will be used on the skirts this winter, but not in the complicated arrangement that has characterized it lately.

Skirts of brocaded cotton ratine are delightful with summer blouses. Tan, rose, and blue are the favored shades. Such skirts are almost always draped.

Some of the new founces are being cut on the circle. Also, they are made from pleatings. But no matter how many founces, the foundation skirts will be narrow.

Stockings with embroidered butterflies about the ankles are made for evening wear. Each wing of the butterflies is dotted with rhinestones. Other white silk stockings show embroidered anklets, done in white, and still others show lace anklets.

Imported models on which fall and winter styles for women's evening slippers are based, are leather and cloth color combination, among which red, green, gray, white and champagne are to be featured in strap and colonial effects.

Hats made entirely of waterproof tulle are trimmed in knots or frills placed close beside one another. A bow of ribbon or a chiffon rose adorns one side of the hat. Hats are also made entirely of ribbon, some stretched plain, some in folds, but never gathered.

Distinctly attractive is a big flat tulle hat, like a very wide sailor, with the brim shorter in front, and round the low flat crown a ribbon of silver gauze, that looks as if it had been meant to fasten neatly with a bow like a man's, but had been forgotten, and left with the ends hanging just over the edge on either side of the back.

The large garden hats of leghorn, maline and lace are trimmed with black velvet ribbon, which is drawn about the crown and, passing through slits at the back, is tied in a flat bow at the back. A single flower is placed at the side near the edge of the brim. Frequently chin straps of maline or velvet are a feature of this dainty confection.

In Paris tulle is no longer enjoying the favor it did a while back. The latest thing is to have a black velvet hat, trimmed with ermine, very narrow, and perhaps two very high, very scraggy feathers leaning toward the back. The shape of the new hat is rather like the military fatigue cap, very flat at the sides, with two velvet pointed wings stretching far away behind, followed by the two scraggy feathers and just above the face line, leaving a rim of velvet, runs the narrow band of ermine.

A very graceful and becoming dinner gown displayed in a New York shop is of silver gray charmeuse with a tunic of deeper gray tulle, embroidered in long lines with tiny diamonds, white and black, ending beyond the deep hem of the tulle tunic, in very light, flat silver tassels. A love belt of deep orange and copper and shot tissue, with one big satin rose, orange with a rose-colored heart, tucked into it, completes the costume.

Some of the recent hot days at the summer resorts have brought on the scene a number of lovely embroidered batiste gowns, with lace let in amid the embroidery, filet, point de Venise, Alencon, and the rest, and net gowns trimmed with shadow lace and the eyelet embroidery is a feature in thicker stuffs. Beads, bugles, pearls and diamonds all figure on evening dresses, which are brilliant and scintillating, and overdresses of chiffon and net thus treated are decidedly a feature in the fashions of the hour.

The three-quarter length coat-wrap for evening wear has supplanted the popularity of the full-length coat and the favorites are fashioned of soft damasks and brocades. A handsome wrap of this style is carried out in purple broche, with a pale purple back ground shot with gold threads and the conventional design of a deeper tone. Gold tissue is used for the lining and the wrap has a deep shawl collar and cuffs of black satin. An upstanding frill of pale lavender chiffon softens the effect of the collar.

They keep the whole system in the pink of condition.

ROMANTIC MARRIAGE OF NEW BRUNSWICK GIRL

(Newcastle Leader.)

New York, July 30.—Friends of Miss Mary G. Walsh are still discussing her strange romance and secret marriage, which took place in the Little Church Around the Corner in New York on Sept. 12 last, to no less a personage than Sir William F. Barber Goddard, a descendant of an ancient Wiltshire house of great antiquity and owner of vast estates in Norfolk and Leicester, England. Goddard has a royal descent maternally by reason of the marriage of the High Sheriff, Francis Goddard, with Sarah, daughter of Sir Francis Hungerford. They likewise possess a splendid coat-of-arms, which gives us a “Chevron vair” between three crescents. A crest of a stag's head and a motto historical to the Goddards and interpreted “A stag, not a slave.” This latter phrase dates from Walter Goddard, the landed proprietor of both Norfolk and Leicester, who joined forces against the notorious King John.

Ever since the engagement the groom has been receiving instructions in the Roman Catholic faith under the direction of Rev. Father Ragan of St. Margaret's Parish, Dorchester, Mass. It is said that Miss Walsh consented to be his bride only on the condition that he joined her church. Thursday morning, Sept. 12, 1912, attended by only J. C. Donovan, M. D., an old friend of the groom, and Miss Nellie Peters, a friend of the bride, Sir William F. Barber Goddard and Miss Walsh were married. After the ceremony the bride and the groom went to Virginia, where they remained for a month and on their return their marriage was still kept a secret although the engagement was known to some of the bride's friends for more than a year. The bride is the nineteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Walsh, Whitneyville, N.B., Canada, and the groom is the son of the late Sir William Goddard of England, and is fifty-four years of age.

They are planning to spend the coming winter in England, but most of their time will be spent in America. Sir William has been married once before and has a son in England older than his bride. The bride says, “My husband's money had nothing

SUFFERED SO MUCH SHE WANTED TO DIE

“Fruit-a-lives” Cured Her And Brought Her The Joy Of Living.

ENTERPRISE, ONT., Oct. 1st. “For seven years, I suffered with what physicians called a ‘Water Tumor’.” Hypodermics of Morphine had to be given me to ease the pain.

During one of these bad spells, a family friend brought a box of “Fruit-a-lives” to the house. I was so bad that it was only when I had taken nearly two boxes that I began to experience relief.

I kept up the treatment, however, and after taking five boxes, I was cured, and when I appeared on the streets, my friends said “The dead has come to life” and this seemed literally true because I certainly was at death's door.

ORANGE GRAND LODGE TO MEET IN REGINA

St. John's, Nfld., Aug. 4.—The closing session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Orangemen was held here this morning. Regina was selected as next year's meeting place by a small majority, Ottawa and Niagara Falls putting up a determined effort to land the honor. Last year's officers were re-elected with the exception of Thompson of Toronto, who becomes treasurer in place of Parkhill, deceased. Harper takes Thompson's place and Easton of Winnipeg, becomes deputy secretary.

In the closing hours of the final session the grand master voiced the sentiments of the delegates in expressing in highly complimentary terms, their appreciation of the cordial reception accorded them during their stay in Newfoundland. Many of the clerical delegates remained over to occupy local pulpits yesterday.

THE “BLUES”

A Lady Finds Help from Simple Food.

Civilization brings blessings and also responsibilities.

The more highly organized we become the more need there is for regularity and natural simplicity in the food we eat.

The laws of body nutrition should be carefully obeyed, and the finer more highly developed brain and nervous system not hampered by a complicated, unwholesome dietary.

A lady of high nervous tension says:

“For fifteen years I was a sufferer from dyspepsia. I confess that an improperly regulated diet was the chief cause of my suffering. Finally, nothing that I ate seemed to agree with my stomach, and life, at times, did not seem worth living.

“I began to take a pessimistic view of everything and see life through dark blue glass, so to speak. My head became affected with a heavy creeping sensation and I feared paralysis.

“Palpitation of the heart caused me to fear that I might die suddenly. Two years ago, hearing Grape-Nuts so highly spoken of by some estimable friends of mine, I determined to try it.

“The change in my condition was little less than marvelous. In a short time the palpitation, bad feeling in head and body began to disappear and the improvement has continued until at the present time I find myself in better health than I have ever enjoyed.

“My weight has increased 20 lbs. in the last year and life looks bright and sunny to me as it did when I was a child.”

In choosing and using a soap for your “Little Fairy” you will find no soap so mild, so neutral, so agreeable to tender skins as FAIRY SOAP.

Being made from products that you could eat, FAIRY SOAP agrees with even the tender skin of a babe.

FAIRY SOAP

is white—pure—floating. It comes in a handy oval cake. We could charge you five times the price asked for FAIRY SOAP and we could add nothing to its quality.

In higher-priced soaps you are paying for high-priced perfume and fancy wrappers—not better soap.
