CHARLEY STREET SHOWING UP WELL WITH CHATTANOOGA

Ex-Big Leaguer May be Again Under
The "Big Top"---Used to Catch Johnson

This is a great year for the comeback brigade and among those from whom the fans are hearing cheering words are Charley Street, the first man who caught a ball from the top of Washington monument without anyone to dispute the feat. Street started his reputation by the manner in which he handled the bullet-like delivery of Walter Johnson, but fell behind in his work and was traded to the New York Americans for Jack Knight. His work with the Yankees was not impressive, and he was shunted to Providence, which in turn passed him along to Chattanooga which is managed this year by his old playmate Ed Elberfeld. Street is only about 30 years of age, and there is no good reason why he should not have a deal of first-class baseball in his system. He has been throwing and hitting well in Chattanooga practice and his legs are in better shape than they have been for several seasons. He has visions of returning to the big show and the vision may become a reality some day.

Baldemero Acosta, the young Cuban with the Washington team, is being rated as a mixture of Willie Keeler and Jesse Burkett when it comes to bunting.

Zeke Wrigley, the American Association veteran, has purchased the purchased the Lima franchise in the Ohio State League. He managed the Beans, as his team is known, last year.

The score card if the San Francisco ball yard carries the following ad. "Many Eastern scribes claim Ping Bodie's wonderful improvement this year is due to the Acme beer he drank while in San Francisco last winter."

The Eastern section of Kansas has turned out quite a number of baseball stars. Walter Johnson, Fred Clarke, Earl Hamilton, Edgar Willett, Joe Wood, Claude Hendrix, Beals Becker and "Zach" Wheat are a few of the big leaguers who claim the Sunflower State as their home.

McALEE CANS THREE

Hot Springs, Ark., March 24—Pres. McAleer commenced cutting down his recruits tonight. EVERS HAS TOO MUCH MATERIAL FOR OUTFIELD

Three of the Lot Who Look Best for Positions are Veterans of the Cubs

As a brand-new manager, succeeding a past master of the art and one who was immensely popular with the fans, Johnny Evers has its little problems. If Johnny had only a small squad of talent he would be all right, but he has so much he is placed under a great responsibility in making his selection. What will worry him most is his outfield. For the jobs in the suburbs he has enough men to equip a couple of first class teams. He has recently been running to a combination of Mike Mitchell in left, Otis Clymer in center and Schulte in right. That is good as far as it goes, but he also has Knisely, obtained from Cincinnati in the deal of Joe Tinker; Tommy Leach, who played great ball for the Cubs after they got him by trade from Pittsburgh; and Jimmy Sheppard, who has been a Chicago standby for years. The positions in right and left are considered clinched. Evers' job is to select a center fielder from Knitely, Clymer, Sheppard, Miller and Leach. The odd part of it is that the three men who figure highest in the dope are hoary veterans, to wit, Leach, Clymer and Sheppard. Clymer although he was maintained from Minneapolis last autumn, was in the dope are hoary veterans, to wit, Leach, Clymer and Sheppard. Clymer, although he was obtained from Minneapolis last autumn, was in the major leagues for years and has a record almost as long as that of Leach and Sheppard. If any one of the three gets the nomination, Chicago will have what is probably the oldest outfield in the major leagues, for Schulte has been with the Cubs since 1904, and Mitchell began his career with Schenectady in 1902 and joined Cincinnati in 1907. It seems to have been taken for granted that Sheppard was in the discard, but Jimmy has hardly slowed up more than Tommy Leach, and, in the matter of underpinning, Clymer has had for a long time an ankle likely to turn on the slightest provocation. Knisely is a younger man, but the critics have not rated him as classy enough to figure in rehabilitating the famous "Cub machine."

DAVE MOREY'S DARTMOUTH TEAM AT OUTDOOR WORK

Outfielders Look Pretty Good--Last Year's Substitutes Loom Strong in Eyes of Coach

Hanover, N. H., March 24—The Dartmouth baseball outfielders were on the Campus this afternoon and got their first outdoor work of the season. Loudon, Twitchell and Sullivan last year's substitutes, seem to loom up strongest in the eyes of Coach Woods at present. Hogsett and Simnea, however, are strong contenders for regular berths.

Ghee, who was formerly trying out for the infield was tried in the outfield and gave a good account of himself. Outdoor work will be given the entire squad tomorrow.
