LETTER "M" IS CLUE TO SENDER OF BOOM

Sherbrooke, Que., June 26.—The peculiar fashioning of the "M" one of the words typewriter in what is believed to be a portion of the mailed bomb which killed Mrs. A. O. Bilodeau is hoped by the police today will prove a valuable clue in their search for the sender of the parcel.

The "M" will likely be reproduced in the local newspapers, where those familiar with a machine bearing such a letter can identify it. Detective McCaskell this morning began the investigation of a story that some years ago a servant girl, who was in the habit of stealing from a house where she was employed was caught when she opened a box containing a small explosive left by her master where she could find it. Detective McCaskell regards this clue as an important one, and is making arrangements to bring it into line with other evidence which he held.

Mrs. Bilodeau's body was buried this morning, the funeral procession passed through streets crowded with sympathizers with the bereaved husband and children.

Garbage and love letters should be burned before they create trouble. Men and women take desperate chances sometimes—for instance, when they get married.

THE LITTLE BOY THAT DIED

I am all alone in my chamber now,
And the midnight hour is near,
And the fagot's crack and the clock's dull tick

Are the only sounds I hear;
And over my soul in its solitude
Sweet feelings of sadness glide;
For my heart and my eyes are full
When I think
Of the little boy that died.

I went one night to my father's house—
Went home to the dear ones all,—
And softly I opened the garden gate,
And softly the door of the hall;
My mother came out to meet her son
She kissed me and then she sighed;
And her head fell on my neck and she wept
For the little boy that died.

face,
facci
As still and cold he lay,
And thought what a lovely child he had been,
And how soon he must decay,—
'Oh, Death, thou lovest the beautiful'
In the woe of my spirit, I cried;
For sparkled the eye and the forehead was fair,
Of the little boy that died.

Again I will go to my father's house
Go home to the dear ones all,—
And sadly I'll open the garden gate,
And sadly the door of the hall;
I shall meet my mother but never more
With her darling by her side,
And she'll kiss me and sigh and weep again
For the little boy that died.

I shall miss him when the flowers come
In the garden where he played,
I shall miss him more by the fireside
When the flowers have all decayed;
I shall see his toys and his empty chair
And the horse he used to ride,
And they will speak with a silent speech
Of the little boy that died.

I shall see his little sister again,
With her playmates about the door
And I'll watch the children in their sports
As I never did before.
And if in the group I see a child
Like him, so laughing eyed,
I'll love the face that speaks to me
Of the little boy that died.

We shall all go home to our Father's house—
To our Father's house in the skies—
Where the hope of our souls shall have no blight,
And our love no broken ties,
We shall roam on the banks of the River of Peace,
And bathe in its blissful tide,
And one of the joys of our Heaven
The little boy that died.

Everybody is building Concrete Roads

CONCRETE roads have literally taken Canada by storm. From Halifax to Vancouver, road commissions, town and county engineers, town councils and good roads associations, have been quick to discover the remarkable advantages of the concrete pavement. Its use, either for country highways, or for city streets, is so clearly the best solution of the good roads problem, that there has been little of the delay which usually accompanies the introduction of a comparatively new method. Experiences such as the one which Mr. Hines reports are responsible for this rapid growth in popularity:—

An Authority's Statement

Extract from paper recently presented by Edward N. Hines, Chairman of the Board of County Road Commissioners, Wayne County, Mich., before the National Association of Cement Users, at Pittsburgh, Pa.

"It is a sad commentary on the conduct of an undertaking of any magnitude, that individuals, municipalities, states or nations, all seem to find it necessary to do a certain amount of experimenting and dilly-dallying before accepting the conclusions and avoiding the failures of previous demonstrations. This is particularly true of the various phases of the good roads movement.

"The initial cost of a good concrete road is little, if any, greater than that of a first-class bituminous road. One of the greatest fallacies indulged in by communities starting to improve their highways is that cheapness in cost of original construction of roads means economy and that the highway official who can build the greatest area of roads at the least outlay per square yard is working for the community's best interest.

"On one of the main highways out of Detroit, Grand River road, the first two miles is tar macadam. If someone had offered to build this road absolutely without one penny's cost to Wayne County, stipulating only that we should maintain it in a fairly average condition, at the end of eight years we would have been money ahead by rejecting the offer and building it of concrete under our present specifications. Of course, six years ago, when we built this road, we did not possess this knowledge, but our experience was one of the reasons for abandoning the construction of this type of road and turning to concrete. When it comes to annual cost, the concrete road stands pre-eminent. With more than 60 miles of concrete road in Wayne County, some of it in its fourth year, we have spent less than $300 on its surface for maintenance and this is what makes this type of road the cheapest of all roads."

Our Good Roads Lectures, illustrated with lantern slides showing photographs of roads of all kinds, and delivered by members of our own staff of road experts, will be given free of charge to town councils, road commissions, good roads associations, or any other organizations interested in better roads. If you are interested, and think your community would welcome a lecture engagement, write for full information and Good Roads literature to
