CIVIC ELECTION RESULTS

W. G. CLARK

Ald. Elect W. G. Clark thanked the electors for the vote given him. He knew a determined effort had been made to defeat himself. His ticket had been placed in the field because there had not been proper law-enforcement. He loved Fredericton and felt it a disgrace that her laws were not enforced. He believed in fair play and co-operation and would do his best for the interests of the city. The result of the election had shown that something could be done for the betterment of conditions in this city. (Applause)

W. J. OSBORNE

Ald-Elect W. J. Osborne thanked the electors and congratulated them upon the election of the council they had chosen. He stood for all that was for the advancement of the city. He was pleased that Fredericton was back in line for true Canadian citizenship. Referring to the election law under which the members of the City Council had appointed all scrutineers he stated that it imposed conditions similar to those in force in Russia. Perhaps it had been on account of the presence of so many Russians in and about the city that the aldermen had acted as they had. (Laughter.) However, with regard to the scrutineers who had acted that day he would say that they had been fair men and had performed their duties properly. Although not an official Labor candidate, he knew that the votes of laboring men had helped elect him. (Applause.) He realized the value to the city of the labor element and intended to do his utmost while at the council to further the interests of that section. (Applause.)

MAZERALL

Mazerall, March 9—The usual valentine affair being over, we will again ink our toll-hardened fingers in an endeavor to let your readers know that we are still on the top of the soil.

Mr. Allan Mazerall is still hauling sleepers. You may hear his merry voice singing "We Won't Go Home Till the Morning" and "The Nail in the Deacon's Boot Heel," almost every day.

Mr. Leo Mazerall has returned home from Greenville, Me. He had the misfortune of having one of his feet hurt but is getting along nicely. Mr. Sandy Mazerall spent the last two weeks at home on account of his mother being ill with la grippe. We are pleased to say that she had recovered.

Sandy says that the report that he has abandoned his search for the hidden treasure is false as he intends getting a new mineral rod that is warranted not to fail. He is determined this time to do or die.

A number of our young people spent Sunday evening last very pleasantly with Mr. and Mrs. Nap. St. Thomas.

Our school is progressing favorably under the management of Miss Ethel Murphy.

Messrs. Elwood and Coburn Kelly and Mr. Melvin Goodine, all of Hammondville, spent one evening last week with Mr. John Mazerall of this place.

Mr. George H. Soucie is at present engaged in sawing wood. He and Mr. Will Boreland of Hanwell, are doing a rushing business. Mr. Soucie has not yet taken up his duties at the

E. G. HOBEN.

Ald-Elect Enoch G. Hoben said in a brief speech that he stood for the city's best interests. He warmly thanked the Labor Council for the support it had given him.

FRED H. EVERETT.

Ald-Elect Fred H. Everett stated that this was his first experience in civic politics and he had nothing to complain of. He stood for all that was for the city's best interests and for progressive government. He felt extremely grateful for the confidence which had been reposed in himself.

W. E. FARRELL

Ald. W. E. Farrell was given a hearty reception. He could not endorse all remarks made by previous speakers. His colleague from Queen's had opened his remarks by congratulating the citizens upon electing the council they had. It might be better to wait until the end of a year and find whether or not the citizens should be congratulated upon their choice.

During his time at the city council he had done his best. The vote of today was an endorsement. (Hear! Hear!) He would not say good men had not been defeated. The council of the past year in many respects was a good one. It was true that in its early days its members had not shown any inclination to include himself in their membership. However after serving for the greater part of a year he could say that he had been treated by the other aldermen in a courteous and friendly manner. The new council included no doubt some excellent men. Some lacked experience. He hoped they would be guided by those members who had had experience at the council. Ald. Farrell closed his remarks with an expression of the wish that the coming year would be as pleasant for him in his relations with the other aldermen, as had been the preceding year.

City Hotel, Fredericton, but intends to begin the first of April.

Miss Annie Mazerall has her usual Sunday night visitor from Hanwell. Mr. Alex. Goodine has finished hauling sleepers.

Mrs. Charles Mazerall, who has been ill with la grippe, is around again.
