

DOCTORS COULD NOT HELP MY KIDNEYS

"Fruit-a-lives" Cured Me

MR. GEO. W. BARKLEY

CHESTERVILLE, ONT., JAN. 25th, 1911
"For over twenty years, I have been troubled with Kidney Disease and the doctors told me they could do me no good. They said my case was incurable and I would suffer all my life. I doctored with different medical men and tried many advertised remedies, but there was none that suited my case. Nearly a year ago, I tried 'Fruit-a-lives'. I have been using them nearly all the time since, and am glad to say that I am cured. I have no trouble now with my kidneys and I give 'Fruit-a-lives' the credit of doing what the doctors said was impossible. I am seventy-six years old and am in first class health."

DR. L. A. CURREY'S WILL

In the Probate Court at St. John Thursday the will of Lemuel A. Curry barrister-at-law, was proved without waiting the usual lapse of fourteen days. This was for special cause. He gives all his estate, real and personal to Arthur P. Hazen of Montreal, banker, and his sister, R. Eliza Curry of St. John, in trust to hold the same and to supply the income for the support and education of his children according to their best judgment, giving them power to sell any part of his personal property and lease or sell in fee simple any part of his real estate, and on the youngest attaining the age of twenty-one years to divide the estate equally amongst the children.

The real estate consists of the Star Line wharf at Fredericton, valued at $2,000; freehold dwelling in St. John, valued at $6,800; freehold country residence at Woodman's Point, valued at $2,500, and freehold known as the "Holden Place" at Belyea's Point, valued at $500—the whole valued at $10,000. Personal property is set down for the present at $29,000, subject to increase.

Grace George is to have a new play called "The Worthy Mrs. Worth."

STRAY TOPICS FROM LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

(Special Correspondence to The Daily Mail.)

New York, Jan. 4.—Notwithstanding the high cost of living, the woman's suffrage agitation and half a dozen other problems which greatly worry the people of New York at the present time, the holidays passed in what might be called a "blaze of glory." Christmas business was perhaps not quite so good as it has been in some years but it gave no cause for serious complaint. As in former years, charity was given full swing, and it is safe to say that there were not many, even amongst the poorest in the city, who did not, in some small measure, at least, share in the holiday cheer. The tendency to do away with all senseless, noisy and boisterous methods of celebrating Christmas and New Year found expression in a novel feature, the public-Christmas celebration on Madison Square.

A BIG CHRISTMAS TREE.

A magnificent tree, more than sixty feet in height and straight as an arrow, had been brought down from the Adirondacks and set up in Madison Square. Its branches were decorated with thousands of incandescent lights and from the very top shone brightly the "Star of Bethlehem," outlined in electric lights. On the evening before Christmas thousands of people assembled in the square and quietly, almost reverently, listened to the singing of the assembled choirs and the playing of the bands. There were many policemen present but they had little to do. It was the most orderly and quiet crowd which had probably ever congregated on Madison Square. On the evening of Christmas Day the tree was lighted up again but there was no public celebration. New York's first public Christmas tree and Christmas celebration proved a remarkable success and it is believed that it will become a permanent feature of the city's holiday season in the future.

ATTORNEY CAUSED EXCITEMENT

Harold O. Binney, a patent attorney of this city, who has gained considerable notoriety in the past through his eccentric actions, kept the police and, for that matter, nearly everybody else along Broadway, Fifth and Sixth Avenues and some of the cross streets between Thirty-fourth and Forty-second streets in a state of excitement for several days in succession during the holidays. Seated at the wheel he drove his racing auto through the streets with a speed like that of a lightning express train. With utter recklessness he speeded his powerful machine up and down the streets, paying no attention to the thousands of Christmas shoppers and heading straight for every policeman stationed at street intersections. The bluecoats were compelled to dodge with undignified haste to keep from being run down. The man would probably never been caught, had not something gone wrong with his machine, which compelled him to stop at Herald Square to do some tinkering. He did not get time to finish the job, however, for the pursuing policeman caught up with him and arrested him. After the usual proceedings before the magistrate the prisoner was released to appear for trial on the following day. On that day Binney repeated his performance with his racing car and a second charge was made against him. The police are inclined to believe that the eccentric behavior of the lawyer is due to excessive libations, while others take a more charitable view and believe that the man is not quite normal in his upper story.

Waldorf Miller, the young athlete of New Rochelle, who broke his neck diving some eighteen months ago, celebrated Christmas by taking his first walk. Contrary to the predictions of the physicians treating him, Miller not only continued to live in spite of his broken neck, but gradually improved, gained strength and eventually recovered to some extent the usefulness of his lower limbs which at first had been completely paralyzed.

Twelve years ago Benjamin Oppenheim, a New York attorney, was disbarred at the instance of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, which charged him with bribing and coaching witnesses in an accident case in which he obtained for his client a $5000 verdict. The other day, after a careful investigation of new evidence submitted to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, the re-instatement of Oppenheim was ordered upon the ground that he had been innocent of the charges made against him. It was ascertained that the men, upon whose testimony Oppenheim had been disbarred, had been in the pay of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company and had perjured themselves to discredit and ruin Oppenheim.

STOLE FROM COLLECTION PLATE

During early morning Mass on Christmas morning there was considerable excitement at the Church of the Ascension on West 107th Street. While Father Joseph McCann was passing through the aisles with the contribution plate, a woman, who had been kneeling in one of the pews, sprang up, grabbed four contribution envelopes from the plate and ran up the aisle, toward the door of the church. Father McCann, somewhat handicapped by the loaded contribution plate, sprinted after the woman and caught her dress. She tried to pull herself free and the struggle caused great commotion among the worshippers. Finally the woman was overpowered and turned over to the police. At the preliminary hearing the woman refused to answer any questions until she had seen her lawyer, she was held for trial.

THE SUFFRAGE ARMY

If no other good should come from the march of the "Suffrage Army" from New York to Albany, it will not have been in vain, although perhaps many of the hard-boiled suffragettes will not agree with this view. The "army" consisted of between three and five soldiers, of course all generals. On their long and wearisome march the "soldiers" were cheered along from time to time by sympathizers who accompanied them for a stretch to give them encouragement. At Poughkeepsie, Miss Gladys Coursen, a Vassar student, in strong sympathy with the "votes for women" movement, joined the marching army with the avowed intention of accompanying it to Albany. Griffith Bonner, society man, golfer and football player, known in Poughkeepsie as the "millionaire reporter" also joined the marchers and ingeniously managed to walk by the side of Miss Coursen. They had not marched very far before Mr. Bonner summoned enough courage to propose to Miss Coursen. It is said that she did not decline the proposal, but accepted it conditionally, on three months probation. It is believed, however, that the two hearts have found each other and will be joined in the near future.

ALLEGED SWINDLER CALLED TO ACCOUNT

Boston, Mass., Jan. 3.—Frank C. Winchell, former president of the Oxford linen mills of Brookfield was arraigned in the Federal court today for a preliminary hearing on charges of having used the mails in schemes to defraud. Winchell's arrest followed the raid two weeks ago on the offices of the Sterling Debenture Company in New York and other cities. The Sterling concern it is estimated sold during its career of six years, approximately, $33,000,000 of the stocks of various companies, including the Oxford linen mills. Much of this stock was in legitimate companies, but an enormous amount, it is alleged, was of bogus concern and was worthless.

MOIR'S Chocolates

Moir's Chocolates have an individuality that is unmistakable. We select the cocoa beans—roast, husk and clean them—add the cocoa butter and cane sugar—and flavor with vanilla beans. The WHOLE is then put through a grinding process for hours, which refines every particle and renders our chocolate coating absolutely smooth, giving it that individual delicious flavor. The chocolate is then applied to the many varieties of centers—packed in attractive boxes and offered to you as the finest chocolates on the market.

NEW YEAR HONORS A DISAPPOINTMENT

New York, Jan. 2.—Many of the leading stock exchange houses, banks, and trust companies closed the year with the distribution of rewards to faithful employees. Some of the big houses distributed their largesses on Christmas, but the great majority still adhere to the old custom of handing out the envelopes on that last day of the year. Practically every employe in the Wall Street district received something the presents ranging in amount from a year's salary received by some of the managers of the big banking and brokerage and brokerage houses down to a few dollars given to the messengers, janitors and scrub women. Of late years many houses have adopted the practice of devoting a certain percentage of their yearly profits to the end-of-the-year fund. The practice is regarded as an excellent incentive to the employes to increase both the business of the house and their own efficiency.

In the first 11 months of 1912 124,449,788 pounds of oleomargarine was manufactured in the United States.

HAD A DREADFUL COUGH FOR OVER SIX MONTHS.

Thought It Would Turn Into Consumption.

Miss Jane Dousette, Point a la Garde, Que., writes:—"Just a few lines of praise I must write on account of your famous remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I had been suffering from a dreadful cough, for over six months, and tried everything but in vain. I thought it was going to turn into consumption. A friend happened to come to my house, and was so frightened when he saw me he nearly dropped. He asked me what I was taking, so I showed him some medicines I had, but he said for me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I bought a bottle and before it was finished I was well, and did not cough a bit.

I will recommend your medicine to every suffering friend, for I know it will do good to them just the same as it did me."

CHAPPED HANDS & COLD SORES

One thorough application of Zam-Buk at night will bring ease by morning. Zam-Buk stops the smarting, heals the cracks, and makes the hands smooth.

PROOF—Miss Hattie Ferland, Galesburg, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with chapped hands and arms and nothing ever seemed to heal them thoroughly until we found Zam-Buk. It has cured them. My father has also used it for several skin troubles and injuries, and thinks there is nothing like Zam-Buk."

Mothers should see that their children use Zam-Buk daily, as there is nothing like prevent on. A little Zam-Buk lightly smeared over the hands and wrists, after washing, will prevent chaps and cold sores.

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for skin diseases, eczema, itch, ringworm, blood-poisoning, piles, and for cuts, burns and bruises. See box as all stores and druggists, or post req. to Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Beware of harmful substitutes and imitations.
