Give your servants GOLD DUST to clean with, treat them rightly and you will have few occasions to insert a "help wanted" ad

They say a good workman is known by his tools. You cannot expect your maid to keep everything ship-shape unless you give her every modern help. To keep house without GOLD DUST is to do work by hard, old-fashioned methods. For cleaning everything and anything about the house—from cellar to attic—GOLD DUST is worth its weight in gold. It cuts grease and dirt like magic, does away with scouring and scrubbing, and saves time and tempers.

Your servant can do more and better work and keep sweet with the aid of GOLD DUST in all household cleaning.

Sir Wilfrid's Trip To The West

(Montreal Herald.)

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has now definitely completed the tour of the West upon which he started precisely two months ago. He may permit himself as he returns to Ottawa to indulge the feeling that the effort was well worth while. It has been a long and doubtless a tedious journey, but the response it has called forth far more than compensates for the inconvenience. Much as any man may feel himself moved to effort by the sense of duty none could be expected to witness without manifest pleasure such scenes as have greeted the Prime Minister at every point at which he stopped, between Port Arthur and Prince Rupert, on this memorable journey. Doubtless it would be wrong to affirm that the thousands who greeted him at any point were all brought there by just the same sentiments, or that all went away with just the same intentions. Not all who went to hear Sir Wilfrid were Liberals, nor will all who heard him vote for the candidates of his party. But what was common to all was a settled admiration for the veteran statesman and orator, an eager desire to see him, and a desire almost as eager to hear him. No other considerations were strong enough to stand in the way of these feelings being gratified, had anyone, for any reason, desired to keep people away. No doubt the Conservative leaders were quite aware of the increase of prestige that would accrue to Sir Wilfrid, especially when the success of his trip came to be contrasted with the somewhat different result of the similar undertakings of some others, but the very most that could be done in the circumstances was to give each demonstration in turn as much as possible a non-partisan air. The Liberals, it must be said, were ready to meet their opponents more than half way. They were willing that all the world should share, in any measure, their feeling of pride in the Liberal chieftain; if others chose to manifest their pride in him in his character as Prime Minister, no serious objection could be offered. But it must be said that the feeling among life-long Liberals found much stronger expression than that. The West it must be borne in mind, numbers its tens of thousands of men who fought under the Laurier banner in the earlier years of his leadership, and who had moved out upon the neighborless prairie before they had yet seen the standard bearer. "Well, he came to see us, anyhow" was the all-sufficing summary of many a one of these. At Prince Rupert a middle-aged man openly avowed at a public function that in seeing and hearing Sir Wilfrid that day he had realized at last the desire that had been uppermost in his mind for twenty years. The new settlers rushed to every station platform stopped at, for them, no doubt, Laurier is Canada personified. The people from his own province were present in little groups at nearly every station; it is surprising how extensive is the distribution.

There is no rule by which one can calculate what the effect of all this upon future electoral contests may be. In a general way only it can be assumed that success tends to promote success, which in this case means that the people who found Sir Wilfrid's personality so acceptable may be moved to concede his fitness for high office when the time comes. It may be supposed, also, that the philosophy of advertisement is not without its bearing. Before long a battalion of orators will be talking of Laurier, and when the time comes there will be some hundreds of thousands of people who have a definite idea about Laurier the man. Most important of all, however there must remain the feeling, conscious or subconscious, that in Laurier the democracy of Canada finds its most capable and efficient leadership. It may well be doubted whether, in determining what average men will do or will not do in an election, there is any other single factor so important as this. Sir Wilfrid's authority was already great before he left for the West, and there can be no denying that his prestige has still further increased as a result of the visit.

GERMAN ARMY MANOEUVERS

Prussian Holland, Prussia Sept. 8.—Air reconnoitering is the most interesting feature of the imperial army manoeuvres begun today in the vicinity of Koenigsberg on the Baltic sea.

Each army will have one good balloon. The air acouts must work in high altitudes at least 3,100 feet above the earth. Each has been fitted for wireless telegraph and will be in continuous communication with its own headquarters.

Sixty thousand men have taken up their positions today.

Elsewhere Sept. 8.—The imperial army manoeuvres opened with a successful dash of an invading division theoretically designed as Russians. The defenders fell under a powerful attack their weakness having been exposed by the enemies aerial scouts, honorary Colonel, witnessed the fight Emperor William and Princess Victoria Louise both wearing the brilliant red uniforms of the Deaths Head Huzard of which the young princess is a total of 85,000 participated. They comprised the first army corps under command of General Kluck which was designated as the invading Russian "Blue" and the 17th army corps commanded by General Mackensen, the defending "Reds".

Each corps was supplemented with a dirigible balloon occupied by a crew of scouts. The original battle field lay between the rivers Vistula and passage in the vicinity of Konigsberg in Danzig on the southern coast of the Baltic Sea. The troops reached their position through rain and a long muddy road experiencing rough work for which they had been fitted in the summer training designed to prepare them for daily marches of from 25 to 30 miles without exhaustion.

At dawn the blues airship, ascended and discovered the real weakness of the Reds position behind a number of unsupported cavalry.

The enemy's position was flashed to headquarters by wireless from the Paraseval II and the Blues forthwith made an attack. In a splendid rush they drove the reds from all of the bridges over the Elbing River. The defenders, unable to withstand the onslaught, burned the bridges and fell back. Proceeding to a point below Elbing the invaders constructed pontoons and threw their entire cavalry with a division of machine guns and two regiments of quick fire across the streams. The horses of the cavalry swam beside the pontoons the whole advance presenting a spectacle that called forth expressions of admiration from the foreign observers.

YELLOW ETHICS

'Answers' of London one of the Harmsworth publication in announcing 'the life-story of Ethel Le Neve' remarks: 'I can promise my readers that they will find this intensely human story of the career of one of the most notable women of the century as interesting reading as has ever been placed before the public.' The sole fact that makes this woman notable is that she is a typewriter compromisingly associated with a man accused of wife murder, but not known to have any knowledge of the crime. Yet this makes her, in the estimation of the Harmsworth editors, 'the most notable woman of the century.' Of course, the so-called Miss Le Neve may be really Mrs. Crippen and innocent of the crime, but that would entirely rob her of the heroic character which this crime has conferred upon her. This is all consistent with yellow-journal ethics and judgment, and this is to all appearance the judgment of the Public with a big P, since it buys such stuff with avidity, and imperial honors are showered on those who purvey it. There are signs, however, not very pronounced perhaps among the multitudes, but still apparent that the world may some day be nauseated with yellow journalism and that it will not always 'pay.' Only not paying will kill it for the yellow journalists' motto is attract readers, it doesn't matter whether decently and sanely or not; only attract them. In the meantime, as Mr. S. L. Hughes says: 'The fact is that anyone who 'chances to attract for a short time the glare of publicity is now described as famous or notable. A man may owe this concentrated attention to 'cause no more praiseworthy than 'that which a brief notoriety for the dog which scampers down the Derby racecourse just before the 'race, but such a man will be hailed as a hero, will be photographed and interviewed, while the most twaddling and paltry details of his entirely commonplace life will be set forth in all the pomp of the largest type. I well remember reading about a man who, when not quite sober, 'fell off the top of a bus, and was 'only slightly injured. The next day 'he was described in more than one 'paper as 'the hero' of the incident! When Miss Le Neve is described as being 'one of the most notable women of the age' in what terms can real greatness be described—what can be said of the grandeur of such a life as that of Florence Nightingale? Mr. Hughes suggests that the yellow journal exponents of 'enterprise' found their judgments and estimates of men and things on Byron's lines:

What is the end of fame? 'Tis but to fill
A certain portion of uncertain paper.

SPAIN AND VATICAN IN A DEADLOCK

Madrid, Sept. 8.—Premier Canalejas in an interview today is quoted as saying that Spain's reply to the Vatican's most recent note contains little beyond generalities and assurances that the question of church dogma is not involved "or in other words, exactly like the Vatican's note."

Accordingly the premier expects that the negotiations between Madrid and the Holy See, will remain stationary until the Gortes meets when he says the "padlock bill," instead of being withdrawn, will be adopted. The "padlock bills" prohibits the creation of further religious establishments until the revision of the concordat has been complete or a definite law on the subject has been passed.

Rome, Sept. 8.—Premier Canalejas' reiteration of the government's refusal to withdraw the "padlock bill" brings the negotiations between the Vatican and Spain to a standstill. The Holy See will not await the meeting of the Cortes when if Canalejas does not fall, a complete rupture between Rome and Madrid is considered almost inevitable.

A LAW

To provide for the licensing and regulating of theatres, shows, amusements, entertainments in the City of Fredericton.

(L. S.)
C. H. Thomas Mayor
By the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of Fredericton as follows:

1. No person shall give any theatrical or musical entertainment or any lecture, concert, street exhibition, motion picture show, or any ice-skating or roller-skating rink or give any other public entertainment to which admission is obtained on payment of money without having first taken out a license therefor.

2. Every such license shall be signed by the Mayor and shall specify the nature of the entertainment for which it is issued and its location and the period for which it shall be in force.

3. A general license may be issued in respect to any theatre, music hall, motion picture house, ice or roller skating rink or other building used for public entertainment, authorizing entertainments to be given therein for one year or fraction thereof ending on the thirtieth day of April next. No owner or manager of any building shall permit any public entertainment to be given therein for admission to which money is paid on payment of a license for such entertainment has been first taken out.

4. Every application for a license shall be made in writing filed with the City Clerk and shall state (a) the name, occupation and address of the applicant, (b) the nature of the license applied for, (c) the place where the entertainment is to be given, (d) the period for which the license is required, (e) the nature and description of the entertainment it is proposed to give, and the nature of all other exhibitions of whatever kind for which the license is required.

5. It shall be lawful for the Mayor to decline to grant any applicant a license in case he so decides, but before any license is granted under this law to any applicant, he shall first pay to the City Treasurer for the use of the City the following named fees:

For a license to keep for hire a theatre or concert hall, or other building or place used for theatrical, dramatic or other like amusements or entertainments for the year, $100.

For a license to exhibit motion pictures for each 3 mos. or portion of 3 mos., payable in advance $15.00.

For a license for the performance of any type or company of actors or musicians, motion pictures or other entertainment where the same is given elsewhere than in a licensed theatre, motion picture house or music hall or concert hall, for each day, $5.

For a license for an ice or roller skating rink for the year, $50.

For a license for every performance of street music or other street performance for each day, $1.

6. Any person or persons who may obtain any such license as aforesaid shall conform to such directions and regulations for preserving order and decorum thereat and preventing the interruption of the public peace as the Chief of Police of the City of Fredericton for the time being may deem necessary and in case such directions are not fully complied with, or if for any other cause it may be deemed expedient so to do, it shall be lawful for the mayor to cancel any such license at his pleasure and upon any such license being cancelled the holder thereof shall not be entitled to any refund of the fee he may have paid therefor or of any part thereof.

7. The Mayor may at any time cancel any license by him granted for any entertainment or exhibition which in his opinion is found to be of an indecent or immoral description or which may in any way be suggestive of indecency or immorality, or which he may consider would tend to corrupt or demoralize the public or individuals, or which may be contrary to law and public order or which may purport to be a reproduction or representation of any act or thing declared to be illegal by the criminal code or any amendment thereto.

8. No license shall be required for any entertainment given wholly for religious or charitable purposes.

9. No drunken or disorderly person shall be allowed to enter any building where any public entertainment, amusement, motion pictures, is being given or exhibited.

10. It shall be the duty of every person obtaining a license under this law to keep good order in and about the premises for which a license is required by law at his own expense, and shall keep a sufficient force of assistants for that purpose.

11. It shall be the duty of the police of the City and the City Marshal to prevent any entertainment being given for which a license has not been obtained, and for that purpose, may close any building or prevent the entrance of the public thereto, and may disperse any crowd or assembly without warrant any person attempting to give such entertainment after notifying him to desist therefrom.

12. The City Marshal and any police officer of the City of Fredericton shall have the right at any time during which a license is held, and also to assist in keeping order and enforcing the observance of the provisions of this law.

13. Any person convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of this By-Law shall forfeit and pay at the discretion of the convicting Magistrate a sum not exceeding FIFTY DOLLARS and for each offence, but nothing in this section contained shall be taken or construed to relieve any person from the payment of the license fee required by this By-Law.

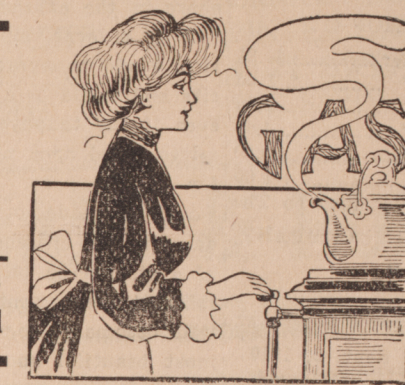

14. This law shall come into full force and effect on the first day of November A. D. 1910.

Passed and enacted this sixth day of September A. D. 1910.
J. W. McCREADY, City Clerk.

WALKER BROS.

ADVENT OF OIL ENGINE.

It is fitting that the Germans should be the first to launch a large ocean steamship propelled entirely by internal combustion motors, and the Hamburg-American Company, are to be congratulated upon their courage in making this venture in a vessel of 8,000 tons. The readers of the Scientific American have been made familiar during the past few years with the experimental work done by German engineers in the propulsion of small vessels, barges, etc., in the endeavor to produce a satisfactory internal combustion engine for marine work, and it is gratifying to learn that the outcome of this and other investigations has been so satisfactory as to warrant the application of the system upon this ambitious scale.

The new vessel will be fitted with two Diesel engines, each of 1,500 horse-power, which is a big advance upon one of 500 horse-power, the largest marine engine of this type, hitherto mounted in a vessel. The fuel, a petroleum residue, the cheapest grade of oil, and one easily obtained on both sides of the Atlantic, will be burned directly in the cylinders; and it is expected that the power will be sufficient to drive this 400-foot cargo steamer at a speed of about 11 knots.

Sentiment does not enter into the motives which have prompted this ambitious venture. It was done solely under the spur of that guiding principle, economy, which is behind all improvements in steamship transportation. There will be a great saving of space; for not only will the heavy and bulky boilers be omitted, but a large proportion of the bunker space also will be available for the stowage of cargo. The problem of securing and controlling the stokers, one of the most troublesome features in running a steamship, will no longer cause anxiety in the owners; for the engineers and a few oilers will constitute the whole of the engine-room staff. There has been no experiment of late years in marine engineering that will be watched with greater interest than this.
