HOW "BUFF" SAID GOOD BYE
TO THE QUEENS OWN RIFLES

(Robt. Blatchford in London Daily Mail.)

The Canadians had a fine send-off on the conclusion of the manoeuvres last Saturday from Dinton Station to Salisbury Plain. The Duke of Connaught was on the platform, and the officers were presented to him. The London and South-Western Railway provided excellent accommodation, and the drums of the Buffs played a number of quicksteps with great spirit.

There is no more exhilarating music than the music of the fife and drum. It is of the very essence of soldiering. A band inspires and pleases, but we hear bands everywhere. The drum and fife belong to the army. Only real soldiers can give the true speech to the drum and fife. No old soldier can bear the drums and fife unmoved. A band inspires and pleases, but the drums and fife thrill.

And the drums of the Buffs are as good as good can be, and they played "Old Mother Graygoose," which I have not heard for more than thirty years. And I forgot all those thirty years and was a gay young sergeant stepping briskly along with the good old Ramblers, a rifle on my shoulder and fine young comrades around me. I could see the swagging drummer boys with their chins up and their shoulders, and the riflemen prancing along with a glance now and again of their wicked eyes at some smiling girl by the way-side.

Then my wife said: "Look at the big drummer? Isn't he grand; so graceful and easy!" I looked at the big drummer of the Buffs and confirmed the lady's judgment. The big drummer of the Buffs is a fine specimen of the English soldier. Young and straight, smart and clean, with a saucy smile and blue eyes, bright and very keen. He beat his drum as though he loved it. He beat it as one who understood it. He beat it like a master. He beat it with a graceful ease. He beat it with reticence and with discretion, and with the swiftest force and directness. A most excellent and accomplished drummer.

MUSIC AND SUNSHINE.

And the side drums throbbed and the fife chirped and shrilled. And the music and the sunshine got into our blood.

Then a color-sergeant of the Canadians got on a truck and conducted the orchestra like Strauss or Henry Wood. Then the Canadians laid hands upon the Buffs and robbed them of their badges and their buttons. Then there was much cheering and shaking of hands, and half the Canadians entrained.

But the best was yet to come. While the Duke of Connaught was good-naturedly chatting or submitting to the assaults of the camera or writing in officers' note-books the drums of the Buffs formed up again, and the big drummer hoisted the drum into the marching position and gave us a brilliant display of rondo drumming. He swung the sticks, he flourished the sticks, he twirled and twiddled and crossed the sticks in the playful vagaries of Italian club dexterities.

He hit the right side of the drum with his left and the left side of the drum with his right, and each side of the drum with both sticks. He stroked the drum, and patted the drum, and tickled the drum, and hit the drum, and banged and bashed and slogged the drum. He made the drum sigh and growl and bark and roar.

He made the drum chatter and whimper and laugh and swear, and all the while the sticks were spinning and curling and twinkling and flashing like flying governor balls or winnowing wings or spokes of light. And he never lost the time nor bungled the phrasing; and he kept his heels closed and his knees straight, and seemed as cool and happy and self-possessed and easy as Cincinnatus when he is juggling with an egg, a carving knife, a cannon ball, and a feather duster.

A GREAT DAY.

My wife, who, although a soldier's bride, had never seen a big drummer properly beaten in her life, was absolutely fascinated. She has accepted the greatness of her husband and William Shakespeare as an act of faith, but the transcendent genius of the big drummer of the Buffs was a thing palpably and visibly demonstrated to her eye-sight and her appreciation. She will never lift an eye lash for a mere civilian drummer again.

So the Canadians entrained for Liverpool and for home, and the brave Buffs marched off to glory. It was a great day, and convinced my wife of the value of universal military service. Artemus Ward once said he knew a man without a tooth in his head, and yet that man could beat a drum as well as anybody. But Artemus had never been in the British Army. Artemus had never seen the big drummer of the Buffs.

The Canadians were enthusiastic on the subject of the British Army. They declared that they had had the time of their lives, and they went off cheering. Their visit has produced excellent results, and it is worth while considering the possibility of future visits of over-seas troops to the Mother Country.

As for the difficulty of recruiting for the Territorials, I can offer the Government a most valuable hint. Send the drums of the Buffs on tour with our wonderful big drummer at their head. The youths who will not follow such a drum are not meant by nature ever to carry arms.

CAMPBELLTON POOR
NEED $25,000 MORE

Campbellton, N. B., Oct. 17—An additional sum of $25,000 is needed to provide the poor of Campbellton with food and fuel during the winter months, according to a report of the relief committee, and the people of Canada must be depended upon to supply that amount.

After a reference to the industries that are being rebuilt, and the epidemic of typhoid fever and its causes the report states that "considering the great individual losses the people suffered by the fire, they appeared cheerful, and have strong faith in the future prosperity of the new Campbellton."

All cash received for relief purposes is deposited in the three local banks in the joint names of the three members of the Finance Committee. The total amount of cash received by the Relief Committee to the 17th of September inclusive was $98,206.33; total expenditure to same date was $10,392.96 leaving a balance on hand of $87,813.37. The sum of $52,900 was appropriated to the building committee to give aid to the needy in rebuilding their homes and also to pay for thirty small houses now in the course of erection at a cost of $800 each. The committee are in hopes that the tents now in use as living quarters may be entirely dispensed with within a few days.
