A MILLION A MINUTE

A ROMANCE OF MODERN NEW YORK AND PARIS
BY HUDSON DOUGLAS.

He bowed with great formality, and, before Quaintance could protest against so much self-sacrifice, Madame had passed on with O'Ferral. Cornoyer was urging him toward a side door through which they made an inconspicuous exit.

"The Old Dutch will not stay here long," explained that youth with solemn complaisance. "She too is much bored by all this tomfoolishness. And then, perhaps, O'Ferral will come to the Blue Rabbit also, where they sell antipyrin frappe to cure sore heads."

Quaintance paid no heed to his chatter, and followed him almost without volition. It mattered little how he passed his time now, and he was glad of other company than the grey ghosts of his dead hopes. He had been dreading to go back alone while these still mocked and mowed at his shoulders, to the empty rooms in the Rue St. Roch. He found himself in a cab, which had carried him over the river and down the long Boulevard St. Germain, before he at length awoke with a start to the consciousness that he had come thither unwittingly.

"D'you know where the Duc des Reves lives, J. J.?" he asked, unconcerned as he could, and interrupting without ceremony the other's ceaseless flow of remarks.

"He lives in the Rue St. Honore, that chenapan. But he has also a shack over here in the Faubourg. The hotel des Reves—it is there, see! That one. Hey! cabby. Hold on a minute."

Quaintance looked out at the massive mansion, and his heart was hot within him. It was there that his dear duchess of dreams would live out her life, amid splendor and luxury far beyond anything he could have offered her. The great wrought iron gates which guarded the carriage entrance stood wide, and he could see into a spacious courtyard aglow with the rich light of many lamps, a balustraded terrace about it from which rose tier upon tier of glistening windows. The place was a palace in miniature. He hoped that the duchess would be happy there.

"Des Reves is blowing himself on gas!" Cornoyer observed in a puzzled tone. "I wonder what's up. He has not lived on this side of the river since his old man kicked the bucket."

"How long has he been married?" asked Quaintance abruptly.

"He isn't married."
"It must have been very lately then," Quaintance cogitated still more ruefully. "He's married, J.J., and to an American girl. The Duchesse des Reves was with him at the Elysee tonight."

Cornoyer's face became instantly expressive of painfully astonished, and, at the same time, sympathetic surprise. He was a perspicacious young man, and much that had been obscure in connection with Quaintance's recent erratic movements was clear to him now. A woman was at the bottom of it, as usual. And heartache was worse than headache. It was all no business of his. He could not interfere. But—he had known the old duke and knew the young—he felt very sorry for the Duchesse; and for Quaintance.

A scarlet motor car entered the courtyard as they drove on again. Cornoyer looked after it curiously, but it held only the chauffeur. And silence obtained in the cab till it drew up before the Blue Rabbit.

"What on earth did you bring me here for?" asked Quaintance somewhat irritably, and stopped on the uneven sidewalk to study with growing distaste the shabby exterior of the basserie, the gloomy-looking, unlighted fronts of the buildings which flanked it.

"To sure your headache," Cornoyer answered assuredly. "Come on in. If you don't like it we'll go away."

Quaintance buttoned up his overcoat, lest his evening clothes should make him unnecessarily conspicuous in such a plebeian resort, but Cornoyer took no such precaution. He pushed boldly past the curtained doors which led from the empty basserie into a much more roomy chamber beyond, confronted without embarrassment the festive assemblage gathered about the marble-topped tables there and which broke into uproarious acclamation as they appeared.

"Do not take any notice of them!" he advised, his own features of a ferocious gravity, and led the way to an unoccupied table half way down the long, dimly-lighted hall, where they were immediately provid-

MILLIONAIRE'S SON WHO RAN AWAY FROM SCHOOL

EDWIN GOULD, JR.

New Britain, Conn., June 9—Foot-sore and bedraggled, Edwin Gould, Jr., the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. Edwin Gould and grandson of the late Jay Gould, was picked up by the police at New Britain, Conn., after having tramped across country for almost a hundred miles from the Pomfret school, at Pomfret Centre. He told the police who took him in that homesickness had caused him to run away from the school on Friday and attempted the trudge to New York. The grandson of the multimillionaire Jay Gould had only seventy-five cents when he struck out, and his wanderings made him seek shelter in a fifteen cent lodging house and in the fields.

His shoes were out at the toes, his clothes were soiled and torn and his appearance indicative of almost complete exhaustion when he was taken to the police station. Telegrams were immediately sent, notifying Mr. Gould that his son had been found thus quieting the fears which had taken the father hurrying up to Pomfret and back toward New York. Young Gould covered much ground uselessly, because he lost his sense of direction and travelled in circles for a time until he was worn out and ready to give himself up.

MAKES HAIR GROW

The Central Pharmacy has an invigorator that will grow hair or money back.

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of.

If your hair is getting thin, gradually falling out, it cannot be long before the spot appears.

The greatest remedy to stop the hair from falling is SALVIA, the Great American Hair Grower, first discovered in England. SALVIA furnishes nourishment to the hair roots and acts so quickly that people are amazed.

And remember, it destroys the Dandruff germ, the little pest that saps life that should go to the hair from the roots.

SALVIA is sold by A. J. Ryan under a positive guarantee to cure Dandruff, stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp in ten days, or money back. A large bottle costs 50c. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle.

ed with two foot-high steins of Munchener, and having quaffed these, standing, to the health of the other revelers, were forthwith free of the guild and, to follow their own devices.

Quaintance had never been in the Brasserie of the Blue Rabbit before, although he had known the Latin Quarter intimately in his student days, and it stood within half a mile of the School of Mines. But he recollected that they reached it through various frowsy lanes, that it stood well apart from the beaten track.

"What street's this?" he asked Cornoyer.
"This is not a street," answered that solemn-visaged young man. "It is the Impasse de Paradis, where we have come to hear some angels singing."

The atmosphere of the Blue Rabbit seemed more appropriate to fiends than angels, so smoke-thick was it. The unceasing oaken rafters were wreathed in a heavy cloud, and the robes of those angels already present would reek of tobacco upon the morrow. Some of them wore robes, too, which it would cost a large sum to replace, and which became them marvellously.

From enshadowed alcoves shone clear, bright eyes, and pearly teeth flashed smiles as Quaintance dully looked about him. The swish and the frou-frou of silk and satin were audible over the rippling tumult of voices, the lace and the lingerie displayed liberally on all sides were of the most luxurious. Here was no cheap cafe-concert of the Quartier, but a sudden resort of the smart set in search of a new sensation and thrilled with the perilous pleasures of outwitting even the dames du trottoir in the exposure of their more intimate charms.

PEARY SUED BY FORMER COMRADE

Berlin, June 9—Commander Robert E. Peary, who was served here yesterday with papers in a suit brought by Rudolph Francke, left for London this morning. The explorer had nothing to add to his statement, of last night, that he had placed the matter of the litigation in the hands of United States Ambassador.

Francke was associated with Dr. F. A. Cook in the North Polar exploration and alleges that Peary found him ill at Etah and took advantage of his condition to secure his collection of furs and narwhale teeth as the price of transporting him homeward. Francke demands $10,000 as the value of the Arctic products which he claims to have handed over to the commander. The suit was brought in the Berlin courts notice of the action being served on Peary when he arrived here yesterday to fill a lecture engagement.

Later it was learned that while here, Commander Peary said to a friend, that he would contend that the German courts had no jurisdiction in the matter as he had no property or domicile here.

He had anticipated he said that the box office receipts at Philharmonic Hall, where he lectured last night, would be attached and he was rather surprised that they were not. The case will come up on June 28. Mr. Peary has arranged to be represented in court by an attorney. He expects to sail from England for New York on Saturday.

THE ADVANTAGES OF SLEEPING OUT OF DOORS

A good many people are discovering that it pays to sleep out of doors, and the pity of it is that so many have waited until they have no lungs to speak of before making the discovery. But now in this year nineteen hundred and ten there is what I came near calling a wave of interest in outdoor sleeping, but perhaps it may be only a wavelet. In certain communities this wavelet has rolled up into a sort of fad, and it is spreading out and rolling higher month by month, so that in the course of time it will doubtless become a strong, husky breaker that shall sweep away our indoor maladies, a fixed habit. No one who has thoroughly enjoyed his bed in the open, night after night and summer and winter, ever willingly relinquishes it and is generally eager to get back to it. And here are some of the reasons:

The sweet feeling of naturalness and bodily well-being.
Freedom from insomnia, for which outdoor sleeping in an absolute specific.
The wonderfully recuperative and vitalizing processes of which one quickly reaps the benefit, even though at first badly run down in physique.

The consciousness of escape from conditions that hamper if they do not actually threaten human life.
Immunity from colds and the diseases they engender—June Busy Man's.

THE MAIL'S DAILY FASHION HINTS

LADIES' SEMI-PRINCESS DRESS.
Paris Pattern No. 3140
All Seams Allowed.

The influence of the Russian blouse is felt even in the princess dress, the model displayed having the waist portion developed in becoming tucks at the side front and back and attached to a five-gored skirt, giving it the appearance of having a peplum, or Russian tunic, which is in reality the gorse of the skirt. The latter part of the dress has a panel front and a deep-plaited flounce. Both waist and skirt are closed in the back, and are made of Chinese-blue drap d'ete, the trimming consisting of soutache braiding of a deeper shade of blue. Cashmere, mohair and silk goods, foulard, chiffon cloth or serge will also develop the design effectively. The pattern is in 5 sizes--32 to 40 inches, bust measure. For 36 bust the dress will require 10 1/2 yards of material 24 inches wide, 9 1/2 yards 27 inches wide, 6 1/2 yards 36 inches wide, 5 1/2 yards 42 inches wide, or 4 1/2 yards 54 inches wide. Width of lower edge about 4 1/2 yards.
Price of pattern, 10 cents.
