RASPBERRY SHRUB

Put 1 quart or 1 pint as you prefer of vinegar to 3 quarts of berries. Let stand over night squeeze out all the juice. Strain it, adding to each pint a pound of sugar. Skim it clear while boiling. Boil 1 hour and bottle tight.
Omit all the vinegar if you wish.

Half a dozen young men from Alber-deen, Scotland, have just left for Hudson Bay to enter the service of the Hudson Bay Company.

Fowls need abundant fresh air in order to thrive, and the ventilation of many poultry houses leave much to be desired. When they are built with raised floors, so as to provide shelter for the fowls underneath, the result is liable to be restricted air space, and the roof should be raised accordingly. It is best, however, to arrange the ventilation in such a way that it can be regulated according to the weather or the number of fowls housed, and for this purpose open-fronted houses answer very well.

A WAIF'S FORTUNES

But it would be sweet, if she consented, to have Meta beside him always. His mother would be pleased; and, in the abstract, he wished to marry. He wanted to share the good gifts fortune had sent him with some nice girl whom he could love, and who could love him in return. He wanted children to love.

Yet with his mother to care for, and Meta often with her, he had somehow drifted on from day to day without the slightest comprehension of Meta's hopes and fears. He did not know that she loved him with all the intensity of her steadfast nature, and that she was enduring a martyrdom in silence, smiling and hiding her heart from him. He would have been overwhelmed with remorse if the truth had been revealed to him, and would have striven by every tenderness to atone.

As it was, he was light of heart and easy of mind. His mother and Meta were always happy together, and he was quite ready to enjoy himself at Moor Park.

It was a jolly house to stay at. Mr. and Mrs. Wedderburn, the host and hostess, were still comparatively young. They always gathered pleasant people about them. The country round was picturesque and the sea was not far away.

Wilfred was a welcome addition to the house-party. Some of the girls especially thought so, while their mothers were particularly gracious to him, as to a most eligible young man.
He was popular with the men, who found him always good-natured and ready to enter into any scheme for amusement.

His was one of those sunny natures which win liking everywhere. His gay good-humor and easy grace were greater attractions than his good looks, though he had been endowed with a well set-up figure and a winning face.

He was out alone one morning ad-passing through a little wood, when, at a turn of the path, he came in sight of a girl's pretty figure.

She was gathering blackberries, which grew in profusion there, though the lower boughs had been rifled by children.

He could not see her face, for her back was towards him; but the grace of her shape and attitude won his instant admiration; and there was a rich coil of golden hair under her picturesque straw hat.

She was at the top of the bank, reaching up and trying in vain to gather a particularly fine cluster of ripe berries that grew high on the boughs.

Wilfred seized his opportunity. He had an irresistible longing to see her face.

"May I get those for you?" he said.

She looked round and down at him; and "suddenly, sweetly, strangely, blushed."

A young girl, about twenty, she looked to him; and there was something in her face that had never been in any other face for Wilfred, and that yet puzzled him.

It was as if somewhere in dreams, they two had met before.

Her eyes fell before the look in his, and yet she had become accustomed to glances of open admiration.

In his eyes were more than she could understand. The image was stamped upon her heart of the frank, blonde face and the look it wore.

"Thank you," she said shyly, and that was all.

Wilfred gave her his hand to help her down the bank, and she sprang down lightly, her little fingers just touching his, though she did not refuse the courtesy.

He gathered the coveted bunch of blackberries and one or two others besides, and then he too sprang down the bank.

"Oh!" cried the girl, in involuntary dismay.

He had been so engrossed by her that he had not seen the basket of blackberries; and he had overturned it.
All the fruit lay scattered in the dusty road.

Wilfred was really dismayed, and at the expression on his face the girl broke into a rippling laugh.

"It really doesn't matter a bit," she said, "I can soon gather some more."
"But it must have taken you a long time to pick all those. I'm awfully sorry. All the best are high, too. I'll get you some more."

A bright idea, that. He was glad he had upset the basket; for, after a little protest, the girl let him stay.

It was exquisite in the woods that September morning; and Wilfred decided that the picking of blackberries was the most delightful occupation in the world—with such a companion.

She was like a happy child. They were merry over the veriest trifles.
There, in the woods, amongst the blackberry brambles, the air was sweet and the sun was shining. The leaves had begun to fall, but there was only the glory of the year's decay as yet; none of the sadness.

He was staying at Moor Park, he told her; and she was spending a holiday with a friend at the Moorland Cottage, she said. Did he know it? Such a sweet little place!

But everything seemed to please her. She looked out on the world with happy eyes.

She was like—yes, she was like "Innocence!" Her eyes were of that rare blue he had said the eyes of "Innocence" should be. The curls of sunny auburn of his fancy, the lovely shape, barely of middle height, yet so slen-derly moulded that it appeared rather tall, brought the statue vividly to mind.

An accidental resemblance, Wilfred imagined, for life and color make a great difference, and a likeness in white marble is never so unmistakable as in a painting.

TWO TORONTO MEN COMMIT
SUICIDE WITHIN AN HOUR

John Lyons, Who Had Brutally Assaulted His Wife, Took Poison Because She Refused to Live with Him--William Carlton Ended His Life For Love of a Woman.

Toronto, Aug. 3.—Within an hour of each other two men ended their lives with carbolic acid in Toronto last night, one because his wife refused to live with him, and the other because a young girl whom he had been courting had refused to marry him. Both men were found a short time after swallowing the drug.

Shortly before 7 o'clock John Lyons, familiarly known as "Jack" amongst his friends called at a boarding-house kept by his wife, at 215 Richmond street west, and asked if he could return to her, promising to treat her as a faithful husband should. Lyons, who was a picture frame worker, had only recently been discharged from the Central Prison after serving four months for assaulting his wife and breaking four fingers of her right hand with a poker.

The wife stoutly refused to have anything further to do with him, telling him he would have to keep away from her. Last night he went to the house again, and when she reiterated her former refusal he turned to go out, but instead slipped into one of the rooms and swallowed the contents of a two-ounce bottle of carbolic acid he had in his possession.
He lingered only a short time afterwards.

Coroner G. B. Smith of College street investigated the circumstances and deemed an inquest unnecessary.
Lyons, who was about 35 years old, was a native of Toronto, having been raised in old St. John's Ward, where his parents lived for many years.

Melancholy because a young lady with whom he had been keeping company has refused to become his wife, William Carlton, 21 years old, drank carbolic acid in a bathroom at 152 Victoria street, where he had been living for the past week. The young man had taken his sweetheart's refusal to become his bride to heart so badly that he laid off work for a week and communicated with her parents in the hope that they might influence her to accede to his request.

When the girl's mother, who lives in Dwight, Ont., finally informed him that he was too young for her daughter, he almost went out of his mind, but when asked by his boarding-house mistress the reason for his restless condition he merely answered: "I am not feeling just right."

On Saturday last while spending the afternoon at the home of Mrs. Mary Johnson, 12 Lakeview Avenue, Carlton made an unsuccessful attempt to end his life by taking some kind of a drug. After receiving medical attention, however, he was able to go home.

About 8 o'clock last night Mrs. Mc-Mullen, who keeps the boarding-house on Victoria street, while passing the bathroom smelled carbolic acid. She immediately rushed to Carlton's room and found him in an unconscious condition lying on the bed. Dr. Speers of Victoria street was called in, but life was extinct when he arrived.

Upon making a search of his room and the bathroom the police were unable to find the bottle containing the poison.

Deceased, whose parents reside in Parry Sound, came to Toronto about nine months ago to learn the steam-fitting. James Carlton, a motorman

CUSTOM'S REVENUE
WILL BE OVER 5 MILLS

A Great Increase Over Last Year's Revenue, Though the Increase is Not so Large as it Might Have Been but for G. T. R. Strike.

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—The customs revenue of the Dominion for July totalled $5,724,714, an increase of $811,- 557 over July of last year. Although the increase is sixteen per cent., it is considerably less than the increases registered for the preceding months of the present fiscal year. The falling off is attributed to the effects of the Grand Trunk strike, which has prevented the delivery of freight in bond now en route to many points in Ontario and Quebec. For four months revenue has been $4,608,656, or over twenty per cent., as compared with the corresponding period of last year.

AMERICAN YACHT
STILL WINNING AT
COWES REGATTA

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Aug. 3.—The American schooner Westward, owned by A. S. Cochrane of New York, started with the yachts Germania, Cicely and Susanna in the race for the Kaiser's Cup this morning over a course of 47 miles. The breeze was light and all the contestants set every yard of canvas which would draw.

The Westward crossed the line too early under an over eager skipper and was forced to put about and recross the line behind its opponents.
Sailing with remarkable speed, however, the Westward soon made up its disadvantage and the end of an hour and a half of racing was leading in front of the Germania, which allowed the Westward a handicap of six minutes and sixteen seconds. The race was eventually won by the Westward.

DEFAULTING CASHIER
CONFESSES HIS GUILT

New York, Aug. 3.—Erwin J. Wider, the young cashier of the Russo-Chinese Bank in this city, whose stealings from the bank's security box resulted in loss of upwards of $500,000 to that institution, pleaded guilty today. Wider was remanded for sentence on August 10th.

The death has taken place of Mr.
Wm. Watson, who was for years in charge of Colonel Cox's extensive gardens at Uxbridge, and manager of the Home Farm. A native of Fortrose, Mr. Watson acquired experience in early life at Rosehaugh and in Inverness Nurseries.

on the Toronto Railway, who lives at 12 Lakeview Avenue, is a brother.
Coroner Pickering is investigating, but it is not likely an inquest will be held.

ICED LEMONADE

A good summer drink can be made by putting 6 oz. of white sugar into a pitcher. Then take one large, juicy lemon and peel off the rind very thinly with a sharp knife taking care that not a particle of the white pith goes in. Put the sugar in a pitcher with the rind then strain in the juice. Pour on this one pint of boiling water, cover the pitcher closely, and stand in a warm place for two hours. Then cool and ice.

Never use hot water to rinse either hands or utensils after preparing onions, as it seems to set the odor.
Cold water in abundance is the best remedy.
