THE TEAM WENT THROUGH BRIDGE

Men, Load and all Went Down when Structure Gave Way--Had Hard Time--Point Wolfe Man Has Something to Say About the Hazen Roads and Bridges--Found Three of the Latter in Unsafe Condition--One Man Injured.

(Telegraph.)

Joseph Dryden, engineer in the Point Wolfe sawmill, who arrived in the city yesterday morning, told a Telegraph reporter a story of perilous adventures between Point Wolfe, in Albert county, and Penobscis, in Kings County. Mr. Dryden says that the crank pin of the engine had broken and after loading the shaft on a wagon he, in company with the teamster, Joseph Alexander, left Point Wolfe for St. John at 11 o'clock Tuesday night. They figured that by traveling all night they would be able to reach Penobscis on Wednesday morning.

WENT THROUGH BRIDGE.

When they reached Lakeview they stopped for lunch and to feed their horses. They stayed there till about four o'clock on Wednesday morning, when they started towards Penobscis. About a mile beyond Lakeview their serious troubles commenced. They had to cross a bridge, called Goggin's bridge, and when about half way over, the structure gave way. The horses went through the ruins of the bridge, one of them being caught by the head beneath a beam, where he hung until released. Both the teamster and Mr. Dryden were thrown out and Mr. Dryden barked his shin rather seriously. Both men waded into the water and worked hard to get the horses out.

It was not, however, till the engineer had walked back a mile and secured the assistance of Mr. Cooper, a lumberman, and Mr. Alexander, caretaker of Mr. White's hotel, that the four men had worked five hours that the horses and wagon were finally extricated from their perilous predicament.

ANOTHER ROTTEN BRIDGE.

When she team was finally straightened out they started once more on their way to St. John. About two miles further along the road they came to another bridge. Warned by their past experience the men examined this structure and discovered that the beams were in a pretty rotten condition. Not wishing to run any unnecessary risks the horses were taken from the wagon and led over the bridge. A rope was then fastened to the wagon and in this manner it was brought across the bridge safely enough.

STILL A THIRD ONE

A third bridge was encountered and this looked so shaky that the horses and wagon were driven through the brook. Penobscis was finally reached Wednesday night.

Mr. Dryden said the weight of the load on the wagon was between 1,800 and 1,400 pounds. The roads from Mechanic Settlement to Penobscis, were, he said, fairly good but from Mechanic Settlement to Point Wolfe the highway was full of humps and holes. There were also pieces of old corduroy, which made it anything but pleasant to travel over. The whole distance from Penobscis to Point Wolfe was about forty miles. This was the only available road and he understood that the local members had been over it, but no improvement had followed. The attention of the road commissioners had also been called to the wretched condition of the highway but they made no move to improve the state of affairs there.

Mr. Dryden expected that the owner of the mill at Point Wolfe would cut a new road through the woods to take the engine crank over.

LATE DR. H. C. CREED LAID TO REST

ed -- Freemasonry, Oddfellowship, Temperance, United Workmen? It meant the outgoing of his heart to his fellow-men with whom in this fraternal manner he was brought into fellowship. These societies honored him in turn with their unbounded confidence and elected him again and again to the highest offices and rewards in their gift to bestow, where he as chief among his brethren was permitted the privilege of being servant of all.

"During his undergraduate days he formed the fellowship of a coterie of rare spirits who became men of mark and distinction. Such men as Dr. William Bambrick Boggs, the distinguished missionary, Dr. Silas McVain of Harvard, Dr. O. A. Steele, of Amherst, N. S., Dr. Harris Harding Bligh of Ottawa, Professor Robert Vonclure Jones, of Acadia, and others--all college friends and kindred spirits--were among his life-long friends with whom through all the years he kept in closest touch.

IN THE CHURCH OF CHRIST.

"Dr. Creed was distinctively religious and more than that he was pre-eminently Christian. His personal experience with the Great Head of the Church was very definite and real and, therefore, the church of Christ was very dear to him. It was the inspirational centre of his life. This church of which he was a member has had a remarkable heritage of good men during its history of almost a hundred years, but few have ever loved and served it with greater devotion and zeal than did Dr. Creed. He was its clerk for eleven years, during which time he compiled its records and wrote its history. He served on the board of deacons for eleven years more. For four years he superintended the Sunday School and for more than thirty years he taught in it the word of God, of which he was a profound student, and better still

"He lived himself the truth he taught, White-souled, clean-handed, pure of heart."

"Loyal to the church, he was also loyal to the Kingdom of God, and especially to the work of the Kingdom as represented by his own denomination, and by the denomination he was trusted and honored. He was appointed president of the Maritime Baptist Convention in 1888 and occupied the office of secretary of that body for ten years. He served on the senate of Acadia College from 1883 to 1890 and for a period of twenty years, he was a member of the board of governors of that institution.

"In all his church relations he was a good and faithful servant indeed.

"In many respects Dr. Creed fulfilled Channing's ideal of manhood: "To live content with small means, To seek elegance rather than luxury, And refinement rather than fashion; To be wealthy, not rich; To study hard, think quietly, Talk gently, act frankly, To listen to stars and birds, Babes and sages with open heart; To bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, Await occasions, hurry never, In a word to let the spiritual, Unbidden and unconscious, grow up through the common."

FUNERAL PROCESSION.

The music at the church was appropriate and at the graveside the band played Friel's Funeral Hymn. Interment was made at the Rural Cemetery, the impressive burial service of the Masonic Order being performed.

AT THE BIJOU.

See today's new change of pictures at the Bijou they are hard to beat. Tiny Williams will sing her farewell songs. A show that will please you.

A very large, high-crowned model is reminiscent of the old dame who used her broom to sweep the cobwebs from the sky. It is of royal blue satin, the brim covered with curled ostrich trimming in white. At the left of the crown is a huge white satin rose and foliage also white.

Wings are placed very upright on both large and small hats and are very large, almost hiding the latter from view.

THE ALLAN LINE TO HAVE NEW STEAMERS

London Officers of Firm Opened Today and Hugh Allan Says Plans are Now Being Made for New Vessels Larger and Faster Than Any Now Plying Between Mother Country and Canada.

London, Sept. 1.--A very large number of people visited the sumptuous new offices of the Allan Line, opened today in Cockspur street. A luncheon was held in a Pall Mall restaurant and Hugh Allan, president. In the course of an interesting speech he said designs for new steamers are being made and they hoped soon to call for tenders to build the steamers.

They will be larger and faster than any at present plying between the mother country and Canada.

Among the toasts was Emigration, responded to by Obed Smith, and M. Salter responded on behalf of the G. T. R.

Hon. Mr. Fielding sailed on the Royal Edward today. He said the West Indies report was now in the final stages of printing and would be issued soon. What the purport would be and summaries of its contents have appeared in various newspapers but they were authorized and incorrect.

London, Sept. 2.--The plans of the Allen Steamship Company for the improvement of its Canadian service provide for the construction of three turbine steamers each seven hundred feet in length, registering twenty-two thousand tons and having a speed of 22 knots an hour.

It appears that the existing agreement between the Allan Line and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for carrying the mails will not be renewed and the Allan people propose to have their new ships ready in 1912 when the next contract expires so that they will be in a position to carry all the trans-atlantic mail in their own vessels. It is stated that the Canadian Pacific will also increase its fleet by two fast liners.

(Montreal Witness)

Once more the keepers of the national gate at Quebec are being assailed. This time we are informed, by journalists hostile to the Government, that "immigrants are being detained at Quebec at the instance of the Stonemasons' Union of Montreal." From the tone of the accompanying comment, we gather that if the immigrants had the spirit of a woodchuck they would overthrow the immigrant sheds and walk out into Canada, making Montreal and the pulverization of the Stonemasons' Union their immediate objective.

The facts, of course, are that there is a law of the Dominion of Canada against the admission to this country of persons from outside into contract of labor, or without financial resources other than those supplied by intending employers. With the morals and economics of that law we are not at present concerned; but this is a democratic country and the law was deemed advisable by a majority of the people's representatives, and the opponents of the existing Government have not yet expressed any intention of repealing it. Under this law the immigration inspectors are obliged to detain for investigation any persons whom they have reason to believe to be contravening it. The stonemasons, who are naturally keeping themselves well posted as to the movements of workers in their trade from other parts of the world, have intimated to the immigration inspectors that they believe these particular men to be contravening the act. There is nothing to do about it but investigate.

The principles of protection which appear so admirable to these critics when applied to the manufacturers take on a different semblance as soon as any measure of them is applied to the workers. Yet they are very much the same principles after all. It all depends on whose ox is gored.

MAY BE INTERVENTION

Panama, Sept. 1.--The political situation in the republic today is grave on account of certain irregularities in the appointment of electoral committees, it is claimed that the election of assemblymen held recently is made void.

The United States government, which according to treaty must see that constitutional order is kept, therefore may intervene and considering the belligerent attitude of certain assemblymen, it is believed to be not impossible that intervention may take place within the next month. The United States marines within the canal zone are ready for any emergency.
