SUMMER DRESSES FOR THE YOUNG MISS.
Paris Patterns Nos. 2963, 3119
All Seams Allowed.

Made up in soft café-au-lait cotton voile, this is a simple frock for the young girl. The panel-like effect of the front is becoming to the figure and the slight fullness is held in place by the belt, piped with light blue cotton voile; the square neck and round armholes having the bands piped with similar voile. The skirt is simply gored and the fullness of the back is supplied by similar voile. The gumpie is made of light blue dotted Swiss, but is equally adaptable to lawn or batiste. The pattern (No. 2963) is in 4 sizes—14 to 17 years. For a miss of 15 years the dress requires 5½ yards of material 24 inches wide, 4½ yards 27 inches wide, 3½ yards 36 inches wide, 3 yards 42 inches wide or 2½ yards 54 inches wide, 10½ yards of soutache braid; the gumpie needs 2¼ yards 18 inches wide, 2 yards 27 inches wide, 1½ yards 36 inches wide or 1¼ yards 42 inches wide. This girlish dress, with just sufficient fullness in waist and skirt to be very becoming, can be made with square low neck and sleeves terminating just above the elbow, or with high neck and full-length sleeves. It is provided with a body lining, and the design may be successfully developed in nun's veiling, chailis, cashmere, eolienne, cotton crepe, China or Liberty silk, organdy, mull or Swiss. As shown, it is made of light blue chailis with a silk dot, and trimmed with embroidered banding and edging. The pattern (No. 3119) is in four sizes—11 to 17 years. For a miss of 15 years the dress requires 8½ yards of material 24 inches wide, 8¼ yards 27 inches wide, 6 yards 36 inches wide or 5½ yards 42 inches wide. Price of Each Pattern, 10 cents.

had suggested, and that no later than last night at the Elysee. He told the cunning valet some part of what he had observed there, and that resal was inwardly transported although he had listened with great outward gravity.

"It may be then that I can offer Monsieur a clue," he declared. "The gentleman Monsieur describes was seen with Madame in America. I caught a glimpse of him yesterday at Auteuil. Late last night I saw him in company with two others at a cafe, and one of the others wore motor clothing, a complete chauffeur's outfit. It almost looks as if they had abducted Madame!"

The Duc gnashed his teeth in a passion of impotent anger. He had not told Jules of Madame's quick emotion at the sight of her countryman, how she had greeted him, or that the stalwart American had left the palace immediately after. A most poisonous suspicion was penetrating his mind. He had just remembered that she had insisted upon leaving by herself, forbidden him to see her to her carriage. And at that instant all his good resolutions deserted him. He could see clearly then how he had been tricked by the one woman he had ever trusted.

"Get me a pint of champagne, quickly, Jules," he commanded. "and a pint of cognac to go with it."

As Jules left the room, he threw himself down on the bed, covered his face with his two twitching hands.

What a fool he had been, to believe that women were better than men! And she had taken him in so easily! All she wanted, of course, was to free herself of police surveillance, so that she might go back to the man who had followed her from America.

What was he to do now? Put the matter into the hands of the police, and so incur public exposure? No, that would not do. It would not help him to have her brought back a prisoner. Did he want her back at all, since she had thus cruelly killed his nascent faith in her flawlessness? He did not know.

HOW HEALTHY HOMES FOR WORKING CLASS PAY 5 P. C. PROFIT

"The important part that proper housing plays in the prevention or arrest of tuberculosis has been too persistently overlooked," said General George M. Sternberg, late of the United States army, to a reporter, at the residence of Dr. Adams, 331 Peel Street, whose guest he is in Montreal.

"Of course it is that side of the question that has interested me more than anything else, and I have found that philanthropy and five per cent. can work wonders.

"In the City of Washington much has been done towards the better housing of the laboring classes. The company I formed twelve years ago has succeeded so well that I repeated the initial effort a short time ago. The company was formed for the purchase of lands and the building of houses, hygienically laid out, for the working classes. I did not have in mind the skilled mechanic when the company was formed, but more the corporation or factory worker, who was not skilled and received only one dollar and a fraction for his work each day.

GET MONTH'S RENT AS REBATE.

"The stock was put on the market and in a few years was taken up, because it was shown by experience that the investment was a profitable one. The capitalization of $500,000 was soon paid up, and at the present time we have a healthy surplus. Blocks of the shares are held by widows, funds in trust, and various charitable organizations.

"The houses contain two floors, each tenant having a separate entrance with a section of back yard to himself. In building on a narrow lot we endeavor to have all the rooms light. Where a block necessitates two dark rooms we resort to the well and sky-light. With only two floors this has been found to work admirably. We figure out the rental at $15 per room, and the rent limit is $3 per month. This applies to the largest houses we build.

"In every house there is every sanitary convenience, stove, bath, and hot and cold water. The rent is payable in advance, and the tenant understands that if he does not pay he must leave. In the case of the twelfth month's rent this, if after inspection of the premises by our agent, it is clear that the place has been kept in a state of good repair, is returned to them as a rebate, with which they can pay for any alteration or repair that they think will increase their comfort.

PROFITABLE PHILANTHROPY.

"The combination of philanthropy and five per cent, which we pay on our stock, proved an admirable one from the start, and so encouraged was I that I formed another company to pay four per cent., hoping that I would be able to give the working classes the benefit of a still lower rental, but I found that it did not attract the philanthropists, and I am having the charter amended by Congress to increase the dividend figure to the same as the original concern. I am president of both concerns, and I may say that the executive part of the work is carried on with the strictest economy.

"No; we do not exercise any control over the tenant, in the matter of how he shall decorate his rooms. We do not paper or paint! The walls are whitewashed and the wood is the natural pine wood polished. At the Paris Exposition our drawing of the two-floor house took a gold medal, and at that time was regarded as a departure in architectural construction. Of course, in Washington, while we have only erected some 318 houses, there are others who have raised nearly a thousand upon our plans, but they look to make a big turn out of them. We never sell our houses, and aim to always have control. So far we have used brick, but it will eventually come to a case of using concrete, I suppose.

"That good work has been accomplished in the District of Columbia to combat the white plague is apparent from the following figures. Covering the period 1876-1880 the mortality among the white was 304.2 and colored 682.8, and during 1906, 1907 and 1908, in the order named, white 143, colored 473.5; white 137.1, colored 445; white 124.4, colored 420.6.

HOUSING AND EDUCATION.

"The great thing in fighting tuberculosis, of course, is the question of hygienic environment, proper housing, etc., the educative campaign pointing out to the people the causes and effects, and the prompt segregation of those affected, especially marked cases of the disease. Of course, among the colored people the mortality is high, which I do not ascribe to physical reasons, but they naturally crowd together and have not yet learned the lesson which we are teaching them.

"There is no such thing as hereditary tuberculosis. By birth a child may be predisposed to it by reason of physical formation—a narrow chest and all the rest of it, but as to the disease being transmitted by the parents, that is impossible."

General Sternberg will deliver a paper on "The Housing of the Working Classes as a Factor in the Prevention of Tuberculosis," at the Art Gallery tomorrow evening in connection with the Tenth Annual Meeting of the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, which opens tomorrow morning with business sessions at the Royal Edward Institute, Belmont Place.

General Sternberg is a man of international reputation, having been the discoverer of the organism of pneumonia.

YORK STREET

A MILLION A MINUTE

A ROMANCE OF MODERN NEW YORK AND PARIS

BY HUDSON DOUGLAS.

"He has the swelled head with this new wife of his!" said that observer of events. "Well, we shall see what happens. I have my thirty thousand francs, and—it would be interesting to catch another glimpse of Madame's wealthy friends. They may be more communicative since their expensive interview. I'll take a cab to the Blue Rabbit on the chance of running across them there."

The Duc slept badly in unaccustomed quarters, and missed Jules' ministrations in the household, as Jules had known he would. But he refrained from calling for his former servant, as he was much inclined to do, and spent the forenoon in aimless anticipation of the time when he might telephone the hotel des Reves. That came at last and he rang up, asking that Madame la Duchesse might speak with him. When he was told that she had not returned since leaving the hotel the night before, his heart almost stopped beating.

He called up the head of the household and had swift requisition made into all that had happened since she had first arrived there from the Rue des Trois Freres. He was told that her maid had gone to the Elysee for her, in his own motor because one of the carriage pair had fallen suddenly sick and was now dead, but neither mistress nor maid had from that moment been heard of. He cut off the hotel des Reves and called up his garage. The chauffeur knew nothing. He had been off duty, by Monsieur's permission, on the previous evening. The car in question had certainly not been used. It was clean now as he had left it. Monsieur called up the Elysee, and begged speech with the groom of the gateway there. The groom of the gateway remembered distinctly that Madame la Duchesse had driven off in a scarlet auto instead of the carriage and pair expected. No, he had not noticed the chauffeur particularly. Then the Duc called up the Palais de Justice and asked for Tissot-Latour. But, before that delighted official had even got to the 'phone, he changed his mind as to the advisability of confiding in the Quai des Orfèvres and merely invited him to call that afternoon. M. Tissot-Latour thought he might leave his desk soon after four, and was cut off in the midst of a long harangue,

And lastly, the white-lipped man who had stayed so long in the asphyxiating sound—and air-proof booth at the hotel bureau called up his own apartments, whence he was answered by Jules Chevreil who made no comment when he was informed that he was reinstated in employment, and bidden to come round to the hotel without delay. As he strolled toward the Bristol at his leisure, he muttered to himself, "Something has happened between them. And so soon! I wonder what?"

He found Monsieur in a state bordering on distraction, and started in unfeigned astonishment he was told the reason.

"Madame has left me, Jules," said the Duc in a hoarse whisper which was the best voice he could muster. "She did not return to the hotel des Reves from the Elysee. You must help me find her again."

Jules Chevreil's face darkened. So this was why those Americans had been so liberal! And he who had acted as chauffeur, the tall, fair man who had called himself Stephen Quintance, had told him that Madame had been safely delivered at her destination. They had misled him, had tricked him, and—A dazzling inspiration entered his mind. He almost chuckled to think how fortune's wheel had revolved since the day on which that other American beast had thrown him into the sea at Rockaway Beach. It seemed that he might now revenge himself condignly for that still rankling insult. For it was none other than his aggressor whom he had observed overnight in the concert-hall of the Blue Rabbit at the same table with the chauffeur, Stephen Quintance. He would teach all those perfidious foreigners that they could not make a fool of a Frenchman and go scot-free. But he must be wary lest Monsieur should learn the part he himself had played with regard to the car.

He expressed most respectful sympathy with his employer over such an altogether unlooked for misfortune.

"It is but right to assume," he went on, "that Madame la Duchesse has not disappeared of her own free will. Has Monsieur noticed any acquaintance of hers in the neighborhood?"

Monsieur was on his feet in an instant, striding to and fro in the spacious bedroom. He had indeed noticed what the perspicacious Jules
