HE FOUND THEM NO FAITH CURE

But Dodd's Kidney Pills Cleaned Out W. F. Black's Sciatica

He Was in Agony when a Friend Gave Him a Box. Now He Recommends Them to Everybody.

Newcastle, N. B., Nov. 25--(Special.)--In these cold fall days when the chill winds crystalize the uric acid in the blood and cause the pangs of Rheumatism and Sciatica to bring sleepless nights to many a home, a man's best friend is he who can tell his neighbor of a sure cure for his tortures. Such a friend is Wm. F. Black of this place. He suffered from Sciatica and lame back. He was so bad that he could not lace his boots or turn in bed. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him and he wants all his neighbors to know of the cure.

"Yes," Mr. Black says, in an interview, "I was so bad with Sciatica and Lame Back that I couldn't lace my shoes or turn in bed, when a friend gave me about a third of a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I started taking them without much faith in their curative powers, and found them all they were recommended."

"Now I am recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills to all sufferers from Kidney Diseases."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are no faith cure. They're a simple but sure cure for diseased kidneys.

IS H. A. POWELL GOING OUT WEST?

The Vancouver News-Advertiser of Nov. 17 says:

H. A. Powell a prominent New Brunswick barrister and politician, will shortly come to Vancouver to reside and will enter into partnership with the legal firm of Bowser, Reid & Wallbridge as special counsel. Mr. Powell was born in Richibucto, N.B. not far from the native village of his future senior partner, Hon. W. J. Bowser. He has graduated at Mt. Allison University and is a brother-in-law of Dr. Allison, formerly president of that institution.

Mr. Powell studied law at Sackville, N. B., and was called to the bar in 1880, after he had served a short time as inspector of schools for the district. He soon took a leading position at the bar of the province and, becoming interested in politics, was elected to the House of Commons for Westmorland in a by-election, and was re-elected in the general election of 1896. Two or three years ago he removed to St. John and established the firm of Powell and Harrison. Mr. Powell has been counsel in some of the most important cases in New Brunswick, including questions of international rights. In the St. John River case he was counsel for parties in the United States, and was counsel for New Brunswick in the famous Central Railway investigation in which Hon. William Pugsley was concerned. He was also counsel for the St. John Board of Trade. Mr. Powell came to Vancouver a few months ago to look over the ground and liked it so well that he decided to locate here.

Mr. Powell's son Dr. Ralph Powell now connected with the Montreal General Hospital, is expected also to come out to this city to reside.

SCOTTISH STUDENTS' DRESS.

(From the London Chronicle.) The Scottish university student has a code of etiquette in clothes as strict as that of Etton or of Harrow. And into it the straw hat enters. On September 15, be the weather ever so bleak, the streets are full of what the small boy knows as 'strawbushers.' On the 16th you will never find a one. On the students' head, that is. As for the medical student, he seldom wears a straw hat at all, or anything in its place. It is his pride to go bareheaded, as it is to wear a fancy waistcoat and turned up trouser ends. The arts and divinity men sedately avoid these last three fashions.

A VALUABLE HINT TO BISCUIT BUYERS

You don't want to buy stale biscuit if you can avoid it, do you? You want the freshest, crispest and highest quality biscuit that you can get, don't you? The chances of your getting this sort of biscuit are very much better if you insist on getting the White Lily Brand, manufactured by J. A. Marvin Limited, a company doing business at Moncton, the centre of the Maritime Provinces. Your dealer can get White Lily Biscuit two or three days after they are made, whereas he cannot get biscuits from Upper Canada in less than two weeks. Insist on getting White Lily Brand biscuits and get the best. They are put in air tight packages. Remember these biscuits recently captured the gold medal at the Dominion Exhibition, St. John, the competition being open to all Canada.

BATTLE OF ARTHABASKA WAS FOUGHT OVER AGAIN

Racy Letter Describing Debate on the Address in the House of Commons---Messrs Guthrie, MacLean, Monk and Brodeur Among the Speakers.

Ottawa, Nov. 22--"From grave to gay from lively to severe" This has been a great day in the House of Commons. The battle of Arthabaska has been fought all over again, or rather is still under way, and if the original struggle was half as interesting as this one it must have been well worth watching. Mr. Guthrie, Mr. MacLean, Mr. Monk and Mr. Brodeur have spoken and the latter goes on again tomorrow. On both sides there is every sign of excitement. Everybody seems satisfied that there is a fine fight being finely fought. And as all members are fresh and hearty there is every prospect that proceedings will continue to be lively for some time yet.

GLAD OF HIS VOTE

Mr. Guthrie spoke first. He was disposed to consider the election a public calamity. He had not, he mentioned taken part in the debate of last year, and had contented himself with voting for the government proposals, although he had seen much to approve in the Opposition amendments. He was glad now that he had not voted for it, because he understood it, the Borden amendment, under the inspiration of the German war scare, had advocated the payment of twenty-five millions to Great Britain. The war scare, it seemed now to be agreed, was over and done with, and he was glad he did not have to face his electors with an explanation of how twenty-five million had been voted and disposed of for which there was no need. That, apart he condemned the Opposition that had been made to the navy proposals in the name of autonomy. Mr. Borden, he felt sure was as convinced an autonomist as Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as he had shown by his speeches in Canada and England, which might be supposed to embody his real sentiments better than the pressure when the Navy Act was under discussion.

MACLEAN'S IMAGININGS

Mr. MacLean, never far from the spot light when it is strong, came forth to ply the chattering rod. He seemed to hape the idea that Quebec Nationalists were claiming for Quebec a separate autonomy from the rest of the country, and insisted that such a claim could not be admitted. He also declaimed with much force against the idea that the question of entering upon a war must be left to a vote of the people. Nobody seemed quite to know where this position had been advanced, and indeed a little later on Mr. Monk took leave to assume that Mr. MacLean had been much misled by a Montreal correspondent of his paper; but Mr. MacLean was none the less very emphatic in affirming that it is the Government of the day that must make the decision about the employment of armed forces, answering, of course, to parliament for their decision. Sir Wilfrid listened attentively, as he always does to Mr. MacLean, while the free lance from South York argued for the assumption by the country of all its responsibilities of defence, and the Opposition sat in puzzled silence while he enunciated sentences not unlike those upon which Sir Wilfrid has laid emphasis in his recent speeches and letters. Mr. MacLean is not altogether happy in putting in to words just what he means. His speech of today leaves it an open question whether he is nearer to the government or to the Opposition on the question of control and of the prime purpose of the naval enterprise. The nearest he came to a positive declaration was when he indicated the possibility of a conflict between white and yellow on the Pacific, in which case he would have the Canadian navy line up alongside the American navy in defence of the white man's frontier on the western ocean.

MR. MONK'S HARD TASK.

Mr. Monk followed, and made what will probably be regarded as the most important Parliamentary appearance of his public career. He had a task of very great difficulty, for he began and ended with both sides of the House against him. He said many things that failed to evoke sympathetic response from any quarter of the House. Frequently he encountered, at the hands of the Liberal members from Quebec, a vigorous hostility. It is distinctly to the credit of the House's sense of fair play, and quite as much to his own ability to state his case with moderation of language and courtesy of manner that he was able to hold the attention of a crowded House in circumstances so unusual. After a review of the events leading up to the opening of Drummond-Arthabaska, made for the purpose of supporting the statement that he and his friends entered the contest under a disadvantage, Mr. Monk claimed that the policy of Sir Wilfrid and of the party, as interpreted since the election by Sir Wilfrid himself and by The Herald, was not the same as that which had been commonly attributed to the party and the government prior to the election, and prior to the delivery of Sir Wilfrid's Montreal speech. His own interpretation of the position was that by the adoption of the new policy in respect to the navy, and still more through the acceptance by the government without reference to Parliament of the plan for a general reconstitution of the military forces of the Empire after the London conference of 1909, Canada had been committed to a new departure of such importance that it ought to be submitted to the judgment of the country, and that those who favored and those who opposed the new departure ought to be free to so express themselves. He respected those who were sincerely convinced that it was desirable to make common lot with other portions of the Empire in these matters, but he affirmed, with much emphasis, turning and addressing himself to the Conservative members, that those who held these views were engaged in a dangerous work when they branded with the infamy of disloyalty all who could not see eye to eye with them. To enforce that attitude, he argued, and to insist upon implicit conformity with suggestions from the British authorities, was equivalent to making Canadians not equal subjects of the British Crown but subordinates to the people of Great Britain, who returned in their own hands the right to decisions of the gravest nature, by which the fortunes of Canada stood to be most vitally affected. This culminating period was received in dead silence on both sides of the House. Mr. Monk concluded with a resolution calling for an immediate submission of the whole question to the popular decision. That there is as yet no understanding between the majority of the Quebec Conservative members and the rest of the Opposition was shown first by the abstention of the former from the party caucus this morning and later by Mr. Monk's frank admission that he had been a party to the denunciation of Mr. Borden at the meeting held during the past summer. It is even reported that overtures were made to have the amendment modified in such wise that the regular Opposition could vote for it, but that Mr. Monk, who is still smarting under the treatment he received from Opposition members last session, declined to alter his project in any way.

LIBERALS ON THE RAMPAGE.

Mr. Brodeur took up the fighting for the Liberal side when Mr. Monk had finished. He had plenty of ammunition, and he made excellent use of it. He seemed to have under his hand, transcripts from the reports of all the speeches made by Mr. Monk, Mr. Bourassa, Mr. Laverne, Mr. Blondin and a number of minor orators during the election and before it, and as he read one after another of these triumphs of exaggeration and appeals to race prejudice, to the timidity of women, to old and forgotten conflicts, the score of Liberal members who had been in the fight in Arthabaska chorused him along with marks of keen approval, with affirmations.
