MONEY OR LOVE

Two medical men, Drs. Fisher and Gardner, were disputing the question as to whether a father's or mother's love for a child or the child's love for its parent arises from consanguinity or association. Dr. Fisher maintained that there is a natural affection between parent and offspring that cannot possibly exist without the consanguinity. Dr. Gardner claimed that a father might love a son whom he supposed to be his own as well as his real issue. He also claimed that a child would love his supposed father and mother as well as those who had begotten him. In support of this position he told the following story:

More than twenty years ago a charming young lady belonging to a family that I attended regularly was married. The match was all for love no other consideration entering into the contract. That I may not reveal a professional confidence I will call the couple Mr. and Mrs. Wade. I knew Mrs. Wade well, though I had no acquaintance with her husband previous to her marriage. She was a sensitive, high-strung woman, and I fancied that unless her husband was a very suave and self-controlled man they would be likely to have trouble in getting over that difficult period which comes when newly married people shift from romance to reality. My fears were realized. The husband proved as restive as the wife. They quarrelled and three months after their marriage separated.

Mrs. Wade very soon begged her husband to forget the past and return to her. He made no reply to the letter containing her request. She wrote again and again, and meeting with no better success than at first, was so despondent that she was threatened with melancholia.

I was called in to see if I could be of any benefit to her, but as I was unable to remove the cause of her condition I could do nothing for her. I consulted with her as to how it might be possible to effect a reconciliation with her husband and incidentally mentioned that if she should have a child there would be an excellent chance for his return to her.

I was not called in again to see her professionally, but about a year after her marriage heard that she had given birth to a son. I was surprised that I had not been asked to superintend the accouchement, but of course gave no expression to that surprise. Then I heard that her husband had gone back to her, a reconciliation had been effected and the couple were living together happily.

Later another child, a girl, was born to the couple, and I was the attending physician. At my first call Mrs. Wade, we two being alone together, said to me:

"Doctor, you are the only living man of whom I am afraid."

"Why so?" I asked.

"I have a secret which I dare not keep from you. Promise me that you will not reveal it."

There was no need for me to promise to keep a professional secret, as you know, but I gave my word to respect her confidence. Then she told me that my having said that if she should have a child the event would likely be the means of drawing her husband back to her had given her the idea of foisting upon him the child of another. At a founding asylum a boy baby was procured who had come there dressed in fine linen and lace. She had taken the boy to her home and written her husband that he was a father. He had returned to her at once.

You will admit that this was not a pleasant secret for a physician to have. In the first place, I had promised to keep it; in the second, it had restored a wife to health; in the third place, it had been the beginning of a happy family. I advised Mrs. Wade now that a child had really been born to them to confess her deceit to her husband, relying on his generosity and his love for her, enhanced, I hoped, by the knowledge that she had perpetuated it from love for him. My advice was not heeded. She told me that to confess would be to send her husband away, never to return. In vain I argued that she would live a life-time in danger of his discovering the fraud and the longer the delay the worse would be the consequences when the discovery was made. I saw nothing for me to do under the circumstances but to wash my hands of the matter and to leave her to her fate, whatever that fate might be.

Another girl was born to the pair, and after that children kept coming—all girls—till there were five children, including the foundling. He was a fine little chap, with a loving and lovable nature.

Everard Wade—he was named for his departed—grew up to be a treasure. He would have liked to go to college, but was so necessary to the happiness of the rest of the family that they could not spare him for that. Wade senior was doing a fair business, which he owned, and longed to have Everard with him. So the boy, too fond of his father to disappoint him, entered his counting room and was soon able to relieve the head of the concern of many annoying details.

Otter, now Chief of the General Staff, soon to be appointed Inspector-General of the Canadian Militia, on the expiration of the term of Major-General Sir Percy Lake. POTATO GROWING IN THE FAR NORTH

Agricultural Department Plots Will be Inspected by Officers of the Ontario Vegetable-Growers' Association, Who Will Make a Report.

(Toronto Globe.)

The possibilities of New Ontario in the way of supplying seed potatoes for the older portion of the province are being studied by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. In this connection Mr. Thos. Delworth, president of the Ontario Vegetable-growers' Association, and Mr. F. F. Reeves, Secretary of the Toronto branch of that organization, will this evening leave for the provincial experimental station at Monticelli, to inspect the plots of potatoes planted there this spring. They will make a report upon the results of their inspection.

The Vegetable-growers' Association supplied the seed potatoes of three of the best varieties, and the department undertook to plant and care for them at the Monticelli station. If these turn out well, it will be a proof that the growing of potatoes for seed will pay the settlers of northern Ontario. At present the seed potatoes are imported for the most part from the United States and New Brunswick.

It is expected by the officials of the department that the potatoes raised in that new country should be free from blight, and of course they are easy for any intelligent man to cultivate. It is said that even when the tops are killed by early frost, the potatoes are as good for seed as are those grown in older Ontario, when the tops die off later.

for those engaged in commercial farming, for those who live on and by the small farms they themselves own.

The problem of the farm is really the problem of the family that lives on the farm. On all these questions there is need of intelligent study, such as marks the books of Professor Bailey of Cornell, and of Horace Plunkett's book on the Rural Life Problems of the United States.

"One feature of the problem should be recognized by the farmer at once, and an effort made to deal with it. It is our duty and our business to consider the farm laborer exactly as we consider the farmer. No country life can be satisfactory when the owners of farms tend, for whatever reason, to go away to live in cities instead of working their farms; and, more over, it cannot be really satisfactory when the labor system is so managed that there is for part of the year a demand for labor which cannot be met and during another part of the year no demand for labor at all, so that the farmers tend to rely on migratory laborers who come out to work in the country with no permanent interest in it and with no prospect of steady employment.

"It is exceedingly difficult to make a good citizen out of a man who can't count upon some steadiness and continuity in the work which means to him his livelihood. Economic conditions on the farm—in variety and kind of crop growing especially as distributed in time, and in housing for the men—must be so shaped as to render it possible for the man who labors for the farmer to be steadily employed under conditions which foster his self-respect and tend for his development.

THE WOMAN'S DUTIES.

"Above all, the conditions of farm life must always be shaped with a view to the welfare of the farmer's wife and the farm laborer's wife, quite as much as to the welfare of the farmer and farm laborer. To have the woman a mere drudge is at least as bad as to have the man a mere drudge. It is every whit as important to introduce new machines to economize her labor within the house, as it is to introduce machinery to increase the effectiveness of his labor outside the house.

"I haven't the slightest sympathy with any movement which looks to excusing men and women for the non-performance of duty and fixes attention only on rights and not on duties. The woman who shirks her duty as a housewife, as mother, is a contemptible creature; just as the corresponding man is a contemptible creature. But the welfare of the woman is even more important than the welfare of the man; for the mother is the real Atlas who bears aloft in her strong and tender arms the destiny of the world. She deserves honor and consideration such as no man should receive. She forfeits all claim to this honor and consideration if she shirks her duties. But the average American woman does not shirk them; and it is a matter of the highest obligation for us to see that they are performed under conditions which make for her welfare and happiness and for the welfare and happiness of the children she brings into the world."
