Spiritualistic Mediums Fail to Guess Contents of Letter

Reward of $600 Offered for Correct Reading--Many Efforts Made to Win Prize--Most Answers Very Foolish

New York, Sept. 27. — The letter written by the late Professor William James, of Harvard, to W. S. Davis, secretary of the Metropolitan Psychological Society, still remains unread, though mediums from Maine to California, many of them claiming to be in close touch with the spirit of the great psychologist, have attempted to earn the reward offered by the Society.

The prevailing impression that Professor James wrote the letter, sealing it with a request that it should not be opened until a year after his death is not correct. Mr. Davis opened the letter as soon as he received it, read its contents and put it away. After Mr. James's death several mediums announced that they had received communications from the spirit of the great investigator, and it struck Mr. Davis that if these things were true, the mediums might prove the truth of their claims by obtaining from the spirit world information as to the contents of the Davis letter.

At the same time James L. Kellogg, president of the Metropolitan Psychological Society, offered $100 as an incentive, and Joseph F. Rinn, also interested in such matters, offered an additional $500 to any medium who will give him the contents of the letter he received from Dr. Richard Hodgson three days before Hodgson's death. Dr. Hodgson was the American secretary of the English Society for Psychical Research, and many mediums began to hear from the doctor, but as yet the reward is unclaimed.

SOME WILD GUESSES.

"It is a very simple matter," said Mr. Davis yesterday. "If these people are in communication with the spirit of Professor William James, they can obtain from him the subject matter of the letter which I hold. The money is waiting."

Here is a copy of one "guess" received by Mr. Davis, purporting to be Professor James's answer from the spirit land to a question regarding the Davis letter:

Davis—Do not ever doubt divine manifestations. The life beyond is more perfect. I am stronger. Tell him not to doubt the spirit life. So am I now as I was, but with a farther reaching understanding of the infiniteness of the whole creation of life.

WM. JAMES.
"Not a bit like it!" said Mr. Davis. "Read this one."

Mr. W. S. Davis, Sir—I seen in the Post Dispatch that you offered a prize for whoever can tell what is the contents of the letter written by Pro. James before he passed out of his body. I am a medium and my friend has been touching me ever since she passed out. I did not know I was one until she touched me. I have been communicating with her and asked her about what was in the letter and what I get is that it contains some business transactions for the future. I believe it for I never had anybody touch me before.

WORLD AS WICKED AS EXER.

"And again," said Mr. Davis, "this one is from Pikeview, Colorado, and the handwriting shakes to give the impression that the James message was written 'under control.'"

Dear Sir and Bro.—It is almost time the world was coming to an end for it is as wicked as before God came to redeem it, therefore let's trust that we can meet on the other shore where parting can be no more.

PROF. JAMES.
"Psychic influence must be very strong in Missouri," commented Mr. Davis. "Here is another from Kansas City, purporting to be a true message from William James, word for word."

I am here. Elsie said I never would come back. You must get Elsie's money for her. She never liked me. Do not let Elsie go alone for my sake. Elsie never loved any one. Have her money put in the bank. I will leave her my estate. Get her to live in my house. Count the money, will you? I will close with love to Elsie.

WILLIAM JAMES.
"A very wild guess, that one. Here is another, from California this time. Preserve the spelling and the original diction, if you please."

IS READY FOR A TEST.

Alameda, Cal.
Mr. Davis, Dear Sir—I have been a student of Professor James, late eminent professor of psychology of Harvard for thirty years. I was conscious of the fact when the professor passed beyond before the press gave the news.

"This lady," said Mr. Davis, "does not risk a copy of the letter, but says she will submit to a test before competent judges. Hear this one."

Davis—Be valiant in the cause, long are the ages, and never stop alighting heavenward. Garrulous and vapid persons roam about seeking each at sometime to use a evidence against research. To satisfy a morbid prejudice. A evidence of the natural belief is a heavenward aim. Be calm and assiduous. All doubters and egotists are fools.

JAMES.
"That message came via the Ouija Board," said Mr. Davis, "which may account for the mangled condition of the English used. The ladies who sent it say that because of their positions in society they withhold their names, but if the letter is a counterpart of the one I have from Professor James, they will be willing to disclose their identities in the cause of truth." Once more we hear from California, as follows:

Mr. Davis—I see by the papers that spiritualists are communicating with a Professor James, of Harvard, who is dead. The dead cannot talk and there is no man or woman in this world who can tell anything about another person unless they see things themselves. No medium can tell what is in the letter sent by Professor James without being told, but there are other things in this world besides human beings which can talk. They are the ones who tell the mediums. Then living things are the ones who tell. What I write is true, and I have known it since the year 1906, and I cannot understand why it hasn't been found out long ago. There is no such a thing as a spirit from a dead person.

THE TARIFF IS NOT EVERYTHING

More advertising rather more tariff, is what many Canadian manufacturers need.

Imports from the United States keep mounting up. The invasion of our manufacturing field by Americans goes on apace with the invasion of the prairies of the west by farmers from the United States.

The advertising of the Americans in distributed through Canada by the periodicals of the United States as well as by our own newspapers. When the American comes across the line he employs in Canada the same methods of advertising which have built his business at home. He employs the same complete sales organizations.

He is accustomed to large advertising expenditures across the line. He has seen firms insignificant in size, located in small centres of population grow to national fame and importance through the agency and publicity and so he uses the same methods in Canada and gets the business.

Many Canadian firms are just as well organized and just as aggressive. Many of them are extensive advertisers in proportion to the size of their field. Many put out advertising just as effective and brainy as any in the United States. The brands and firm names of many Canadian manufacturers have become household words through the excellence and continuity of their advertising.

But Canadian manufacturers as a whole are not as aggressive as they should be. There is a tendency on the part of many towards "letting the tariff take care of us." Their goods are branded, perhaps, but the makers do not tell the people why they should "demand the brand." It would pay them to pay more attention to their publicity.

More advertising rather than more tariff, is what many Canadian manufacturers need.—Ottawa Free Press.

"CATHOLIC" DEFINED BY REV. ALEXANDER WILLIAMS OF TORONTO

Protestant and Catholic Not Contradictory Terms Declares Anglican Clergyman--Have Been Misused.

Toronto Globe—"The opposite of catholic is not protestant, but heretic; the opposite to protestant is not catholic but papist."

This is what Rev. Alex. Williams said in the Church of St. John the Evangelist, preaching Sunday upon the true meaning of the word "catholic," and the uncertainty that has arisen over the right of the Church of England to use the term catholic as opposed to the Church of Rome.

"Many men," said Mr. Williams, in opening, "seem to think that catholic and protestant are contradictory terms. It is a popular idea that is diligently fostered by the Church of Rome. They claim exclusive use of the term catholic, and numbers of our Church people accept that misuse." The preacher referred to the weakened position of the Roman Catholic Church in Europe and characterized as a "judicious move" the holding in America of the Eucharistic Congress. He commented warmly upon the manner of the reception given the Papal Delegate.

"We do not see," he said "why the representatives of this country should in their official capacity and robes of office pay homage to a foreign representative of the Pope." He declared that the Roman Catholics of the Dominion while only one-third of the population, held the balance of the power, and the political parties pandered to them and allowed them the exercise of privileges accorded to no other religious bodies.

Mr. Williams explained the meaning of the word catholic, and claimed that it had always been applied to the Church of England. The Roman Catholics claimed that catholic was another word for Papal. This the preacher declared was a misuse of the term.

Referring to Father Vaughan's statements at Winnipeg that he was of the same faith that his ancestors in England had been for 1,500 years Mr. Williams asserted that if Father Vaughan was an English Catholic he would be nearer the faith of his ancestors than he is today.

The Church of England declared the preacher was protestant by the rejection of the distinctive features of the Roman Catholic faith.

CONFEDERATE LEADER GIVES AWAY CRUTCHES

Washington, Sept. 28.—The crutches used by Colonel John S. Mosby, Confederate cavalry leader, have been presented by that veteran warrior to the National Museum. General Lee once complained that the only thing concerning Mosby of which he disapproved was his too frequent use of crutches.

The crutches are of crude workmanship, being straight sticks with cross arms, padded and covered with calico. They were made by a slave of the Mosby family, who followed Mosby through the war. The uniform worn by Mosby accompanies the crutches.

An English Chemist Has Discovered How to Grow Hair

In England the ladies have entirely abandoned wearing hats, which is due entirely to this new discovery.

It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-looked-for article is proven every day.

The Americans are now placing on the market a preparation containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale.

This preparation is called SALVIA and is being sold with a guarantee to cure Dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed SALVIA makes a most pleasant hair dressing. A. J. Ryan your druggist, is the first to import this preparation into Fredericton and a large, generous bottle can be purchased for 50c.
