W. J. OSBORNE,
Principal.SOLVING A MYSTERY

"In my old coat—with my pipe; looked as if I'd been working all night, didn't I? Well, I hadn't been in my chair ten minutes."

Denver uncrossed his legs and then crossed them again.

"I didn't know whether you remembered that."

"What?"

"My coming in that particular night—or morning."

Granice swung round in his chair.

"Why, man alive! That's why I'm here now. Because it was you who spoke for me at the inquest, when they looked round to see where all the old man's heirs had been that night—you who testified to having dropped in and found me at my desk as usual . . . I thought that would appeal to your journalistic sense, if nothing else would!"

Denver smiled.

"Oh, my journalistic sense is still susceptible enough—and the idea's picturesqueness, I grant you; asking the man who proved your alibi to establish your guilt."

"That's it—that's it."

Granice's laugh had a ring of triumph.

"Well, but how about the other chap's testimony—I mean that young doctor; what was his name? Ned Ranney. Don't you remember my testifying that I'd met him at the elevated station, and told him I was on my way to smoke a pipe with you and his saying: 'All right; you'll find him in. I passed the house two hours ago, and saw his shadow against the blind, as usual.' And the lady with the toothache in the flat across the way; she corroborated his statement you remember."

"Yes, I remember."

"Well, then?"

"Simple enough. Before starting I rigged up a kind of mannikin with old coats and a cushion—something to cast a shadow on the blind. As you fellows were used to seeing my shadow there in the small hours—I counted on that, and knew you'd take any vague outline as mine."

"Simple enough, as you say. But the woman with the toothache saw the shadow move—you remember she said she saw you sink forward, as if you'd fallen asleep."

"Yes, and she was right. It did move. I suppose some extra-heavy dray must have jolted by the filmy building—at any rate, something gave my mannikin a jar, and when I came back he was sunk forward, halfover the table."

There was a long silence between the two men. Granice, with a throbbing heart, watched Denver refill his pipe. The editor, at any rate, did not sneer and flout him. After all, journalism gave a deeper insight than the law into the fantastic possibilities of life, prepared one better to allow for the incalculableness of human impulses.

"Well," Granice faltered out.

Denver stood up with a shrug.

"Look here, man—what's wrong with you? Make a clean breast of it! Nerves gone to smash? I'd like to take you to see a chap I know—an ex-prize-fighter—who's a wonder at pulling fellows in your state out of their hole—"

"Oh, oh—"

Granice broke in. He stood up also, and the two men eyed each other.

"You don't believe me, then?"

"This yarn—how can I? There was not a flaw in your alibi."

"But haven't I filled it full of them now?"

"I might think so if I hadn't happened to know that you wanted to. There's the hitch, don't you see?"

Granice groaned.

"No, I didn't. You mean my wanting to be found guilty—?"

"Of course! If somebody else had accused you, the story might have been worth looking into. As it is, a child could have invented it. It does not do much credit to your ingenuity."

Granice turned sullenly toward the door. What was the use of arguing? But on the threshold a sudden impulse drew him back.

"Look here, Denver—I daresay you are right. But will you do just one thing to prove it? Put my statement in The Investigator, just as I have made it. Ridicule it as much as you like. Only give the other fellows a chance at it—men who don't know anything about me. Set them talking and looking about. I don't care a damn whether you believe me—what I want is to convince the Grand Jury! I oughtn't to have come to a man who knows me—your cursed incredulity is infectious. I don't put my case well, because I know in advance it's discredited, and I almost end by not believing it myself. That is why I can't convince you. It's a vicious circle."

He laid a hand on Denver's arm.

"Send a stenographer, and put my statement in the paper."

But Denver did not warm to the idea.

"My dear fellow, you seem to forget that all the evidence was pretty thoroughly sifted at the time, every possible clue followed up. The public would have been ready enough than to believe that you murdered old Lemman—you or anybody else. All they wanted was a murderer—the most improbable would have served. But your alibi was too confoundingly complete. And nothing you've told me has shaken it."

Denver laid his cool hand over the other's burning fingers.

"Look here, old fellow, go home and work up a better case—then come in and submit it to The Investigator."

IV.

The perspiration was rolling off Granice's forehead. Every few minutes he had to draw out his handkerchief and wipe the moisture from his haggard face.

(To Be Continued.)

HINTS FOR THE LADIESPUTTING ON GLOVES

The best manner of putting on gloves is to open and turn back the gloves to the thumb and powder lightly. Put the fingers in their places, not the thumb, and carefully work them on with the first finger and thumb of the other hands until they are quite down; never press between the fingers.

Pass the thumb into its place with care, and work on with the fingers; turn back the glove and slide it over the hand and wrist, never pinching the kid, and work the glove into proper place by means of the lightest pressure, always allowing the kid to slide between the fingers. In finishing, care should be taken in fastening the first button.

WHEN TURNING A HEM

When turning a hem or measuring a skirt to straighten it at the bottom a dressmaker of my acquaintance saves herself time and nervous strain by marking the place she wants on the tape measure with a small paper clip—one of the kinds that "stay put." Then she does not have to search out her desired mark every time she puts a pin in the skirt, but feels automatically for the clip. In turning a three-inch hem, for instance, she will put the clip at three, and for all practical purposes have with her a three-inch tape measure.

HOW TO EAT A RAW EGG

Break the yoke of an egg into a dish with a teaspoonful of white sugar and a teaspoonful of orange or lemon juice and beat lightly together with a fork. Put the white on a plate and add a pinch of salt. Then with a broad bladed knife beat it to a stiff froth. Now, as lightly as possible, mix all together in the dish. Transfer it to a tumbler, which it will nearly fill if it is properly prepared. Any fruit juice may be used in place of the lemon or orange.

CHILDREN'S SHOES

Children are often made uncomfortable by being obliged to wear shoes that are either too large or too small. The mistake is made in buying. An experienced shoe man who has made children's shoes a special study advises that the child wear thick stockings when trying on shoes. In many cases the child will wear his "best" hose, which are thinner than those for every day and then the new shoes will be a trifle too tight when worn with the thicker pair. Buy as good leather as you can afford, but it is not wise to buy the most expensive shoes, for the child may outgrow them. The shoe dealer above quoted says that a shoe with a wide flat, low heel is better for a child than the acesless shoe, since children usually put the heel of the foot down hastily when walking. Teach children to take care of their shoes. When the shoes have been wet they should be wiped dry, stuffed with paper to hold their shape, put in a warm place and rubbed with vaseline to keep the leather soft.

PAINTS AND DYEING

If your dress accessories do not quite match your gown, or you wish that gown itself a slightly different shade, try painting with oil colors and gasoline. The effect is marvellous and the slight odor soon goes off. Kid slippers can thus be made to match exactly any costume.

FULL ORCHESTRAHAD A SERIOUS TIME.

Victoria County News:—Mr. F. de L. Clements, a potato buyer of Fredericton, was the victim of a series of delays and accidents to his car in a run by auto from Fredericton to Grand Falls last week. Accompanied by his wife and sister-in-law, Mr. Clements left Fredericton on Thursday. Three days passed, however, before the party arrived at Grand Falls. Meanwhile, Mr. Clements' friends at Grand Falls were uneasy that the party did not arrive and began to use the long distance telephone. The stubborn car with its impatient occupants was finally located at a farm house ten miles from its destination.

For nervous people a bath in water to which sea salt has been added will prove beneficial. The salt stimulates the heart and overcomes the exhaustion feeling one so often experiences after some mental or physical strain. The hot bath has a soothing effect and often induces sleep to one who is inclined to be wakeful and restless.

To prevent the hair from falling out wet it thoroughly once or twice a week with a solution of salt water
